We feel it quite a relief to be able to turn from the stormy path of politics to put an record our feelby testimonty; I the heroic conduct of those gallant fellows the Royale, during the disastrons shippereck, which was so near depriving the country of their services. Many of our readers can form but a pour idea of the burrife scene of confusion and dismay, which must inevitably occur in the event of ends an accident as this, on board a ship crowded with men, and many of them with their wives and families accompanying them. To say that the British addier always behaves well in whetever trying circumstances he may be placed is, but to "repeat a thries told that." all when a circumstance occurs like the present, we deem it the duty of those whose task it is to record the event, to make a few passing comments, in justice to the noble hearted men themselves, that they only see that their conduct is appreciated by their nois military follows subjects; and that the public at large may know the character of those to whose a many the fellows of the contributed. We look on the danger of a pitched buttle as trilling compared with that in which the Royals were placed under the iron bound coast of Cape Chair; in an evigagement the soldier practices his own calling, that to which he has been trained with which he is familiar; he is on the land, his own element as it week; his officers are near him, in whose shall he has confidence, and whose orders he has been used to obey; but in an event of this kind, he feels out of his place; and the ready obedience will have been used to obey; but in an event of this kind, he feels out of his place; and the ready obedience will have been used to obey; but in an event of the familes.—Our nine of the condition, order are unhanded and the will be accounted to the condition of the condition of the condition of the condition of the policy of the form of the condition of the policy of the condition of the condition of the condit of the condition of the condition of the condition of the condi
