Mr. W. Windsor is home from Mt. Allison to spend his vacation.

The public examinations at the Convent school were held at an early hour this morning in order not to conflict with those at the Grammar school which take place at the close of the term. They were of a particularly interesting nature and appreciation and encouragement were given to the pupils and their devoted teacher by the presence of a large number of parents and friends. The work at this school seems to reach a higher grade of excellence each year. The study of French in which particular attention is paid, is a fine feature of the curriculum in these days when a knowledge of that language is becoming an essential. The system of penmanship that is being followed—the Palmer method, and in which several pupils received diplomas will certainly prove a boon, especially to those children who may be business men and women in the future. An effort to inculcate a love of cleanliness and attention to detail must have characterized the work of all the grades during the year, to bring about such satisfactory results.

A quiet wedding took place at the church of the Sacred Heart on Tuesday, when Miss Anna Lynch, of Killarney, Ireland, was married to Mr. Chas. Wilson, of Miscou. The bride was prettily attired in blue silk dress with hat to match. The witnesses to this happy event were Miss Mary McConnell and Mr. Stanislaus Aubin.

Diplomas in the Palmer Method of Business Writing were awarded by the A. N. Palmer Co., of New York recently to Misses Nellie J. Roy, Mary Pelletier, Rita Boricet, Agatha La Plante and Yvonne Morrison.

June Brides in Other Countries

MISS TIBBY OF TIBET ALSO DRESSES SOME ON HER WEDDING DAY.

In exclusive, mysterious Tibet wedding ceremonies are picturesque to a degree that would be highly amusing in America. The Tibetan bride wears a wedding dress original and voluminous. It is original in that the front of the dress is absolutely plain and undecorated, while the back is made up of several brightly lined cloths, beaded and embroidered from top to bottom; over all is spread the raven locks of the Tibetan belle, for there a bride takes more pride in her hair than in the gown itself.

In the picture she may be seen with her back turned towards the audience. The groom does not appear in the picture, the other figure being the hideously masked priest who ties the knot.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Acheson, Main street, was the scene of a pretty international wedding Monday at one o'clock, when their second daughter, Ethel May, was united in marriage to James H. Elliott, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Elliott of Calais, Me. Rev. Samuel Howard of the Methodist church performed the ceremony, the bride standing under a bell of white lilies suspended from an arch of green in the bow window. The bride looked very attractive in a handsome gown of white tulle, trimmed with sequins. She wore a well-caught up with lilies of the valley and carried a showed bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. The house was prettily decorated with evergreens, white lilies and lilies of the valley. There were about seventy guests. After the ceremony and congratulations dainty refreshments were served by a number of the bride's girl friends. Later the bride and groom travelled with blue broadcloth with hat to match and the happy couple left on a tour, the destination being known only to them.

Among the many handsome wedding gifts were a case of silver from Mr. and Mrs. McKinnon of New York; a beautiful hand painted tea set from the groom's sister, Miss Gertrude Elliott; substantial cheques from the bride's and groom's parents; a handsome cut glass bowl from the choir of the Methodist church, of which the bride was a valued member. The groom's gift was a necklace of pearls and sapphires.
