one place we came on a long, low brick cottage, three doors in front; overeach doorway were two white turtle doves, with their bills together, kissing. These were thrown out in bold relief by the red brick back ground. They looked very funny, and we supposed they were honey moon cottages; they stood on a hill with a fine view. We did 28 miles.

Tuesday, May 21st.—J. no better, but it is a great comfort to know what is the matter. It's a very fine morning, and we are just starting at seven, a. m. We drove till eleven, through a pretty, hilly country, and Camped by a brook, for breakfast and rest. The air is fragrant with the perfume of pine, and various scented shrubs. We crossed the "Saluda' River, and came on a very hilly road, obliging us to skid nearly all tactime. Got into "Grenville" about four. 5. m. This is a large, alive town, good stores and plenty of them, street ans and electric lights. We have Camped near the road, two miles out, rather public, but it seems quiet. It has been rather cool all day. There are large fields of whe that lead outs on every side. We have seen apple, pear, cherry and peach trees for the list 155 m less. We bought energies and new potatoes from a wom in on the road.

Welnesday, May 22, -A bright, coll moding. We hear we shall have to have the horses shod, to enable the hat get over the rough roads. The mount it is are now to be seen, blue in the listance, and lots of the all around. I im afraid we shall find it to cool vien we get among them. I and Edwin left a little after eight, a m., to get the noises shod, an . get providers. The girls and I, with Jack that the pistols, for retection, are keening Camp. Three rough newdles, with this dogs, came along, and sit down neur as, evidently desirous if being to oblesome. I gott ie revolver out, and sat with it in my 1 ). They we to itting their dog on lick; we were alarmed lest Jick should break his chain and attack tuem. I said, "take your dog away, or I will nile," in I tray coolly told me they would shoot fack if I di l. S. I change I me tecties and s id, I m not one bit afrail of you, but if you hal an manline-s a out you, you would not try to word my woman as you are loing on the a waile they lett. I came uses at two, pm Weleft. The wind was blowing a gale, and (the dust drift, g in ch u is), threatening to a vertura the w g n. After writing a wall in a shelter d'ol me, to see if it would go down we were obliged to tiese it off and start an ier ours poles. Che road was nard and good We I noet in som wo Is, on the condside. J. better, Taurslay, day 23.— I fep st six, and a fine cool in rang, cather too mices so, it fact. We have breakfist do and are jast an paring to some. The girls and I had a girl fright last light. They in difference to the wagon, and light of the last. About in fight, the began to jam and birk furiously, and leady overset the vehicle. We to ugat some one was trying to get n. We drove over two mountains to day; the road went zigzag in the side, and was protected by stone walls not very high. They also and I walked mist of the time. After elimbing steadily for over an hour, we height he sound of rushing water, and presently saw it pouring in a toment down the mountain side. There are mountains all aroand as, all higher than the one we are climbing. On the summit, we stopped for lanch, though there was no shade. The load widened as it, and there was room for mill, with a few lags and boards. The lores are attenty with out, with their long, hot climb. The road skirted a present attenty with a few lags and boards.
