WORDS & SORCERERS

And so, after several attempts at conjuring up everything from a sock to a herring, Ciril finally makes a rope appear. Jerak, skillful in climbing and rope-throwing, lassoes a jutting rock on the other side. After cooking the herring for their supper, the duo climb across the pit to safety...

They continue following the directions on the map until they come across scratchings on the wall. Look! These runes were made by orc soldiers, probably the original inhabitants of these caverns!

"You see, ages ago a powerful sorcerer by the name of Urlok dug out these passages under his fortress. It was here that he trained his orc soldiers for the conquest of the civilized lands..."

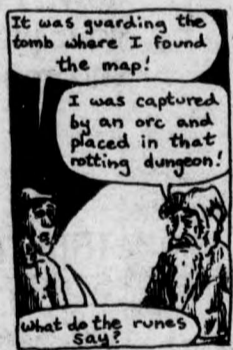

"Urlok was the last of the dark wizards, and it was believed that he summoned all manner of demon within his castle stronghold."

"One dark stormy night his castle exploded into rubble. It is believed that he called upon a power too great for even he to control."

KA-BOOM!

"That was the last heard of either him or his army..."
