Practical Breaks

George—Hello, Bill! You have your mouth open.
Bill—Yes, I know. I opened it myself.

G—Do you know money talks? It spoke to me once.
B—What did it say?
G—Good-bye.

G—Why are the highest leaves on a tree like a dog's tail?
B—Because they are the farthest from the bark.

G.—Did you ever read "Ten Nights in a Bar-room?"

B—No, but I have been in ten bar-rooms in a night.

G—I want to ask you a question. Do you drink?

B—Well, before I answer I would like to ask you another one. Is this an invitation or merely an inquiry for information?

G—Will you lend me a dollar?

B—There is just one thing more impossible.

G—What is that?

B—To get it back.

G—Why do old maids wear silk gloves?

B—Because they don't like kids.
