

musicians stared speechlessly, and laying their instruments into their cases, vanished like fleeting shadows.

Every light fluttered and went out in a funereal gloom; a bell in the distance rang faintly, and the sombre green curtain fell noiselessly upon the last act of Generva's star-crossed life.

THE END.