Schlager,” said Kent with a change of tone. “But your life is safe enough, in any event. Pity you’re such a grafter, for you’ve got your decent points. Let him up, Sedgwick.”

Relieved of his assailant’s weight, Schlager undertook to rise, set his hand on the ground, and collapsed with a groan.

“Too bad about that wrist,” said Kent. “I’ll take you back in my car to have it looked after as soon as we’ve finished here.”

“I s’pose you know I’ll have to arrest you, just the same.”

“Don’t bluff,” retorted the other carelessly. “It wastes time. Steady! Here comes the rest of the party.”

Across the moonlit lawn moved briskly the spare alert figure of the owner of Hedgerow House. His hand grasped a long-barrelled pistol. He made straight for the grove of graves. Within five yards of the willows he stopped, because a voice from behind one of them had suggested to him that he do so.

“I also am armed,” the voice added.

Hesitancy flickered in Mr. Blair’s face for a brief moment. Then, with set jaw, he came on.

“Two men of courage to deal with in a single night. That’s all out of proportion,” commented the voice with a slight laugh. “Mr. Blair; I really should dislike shooting you.”

“Who are you?” demanded Mr. Blair.

“Chester Kent.”

“What are you doing on my property at this hour?”

“Digging.”

“Ah!” it was hardly an exclamation; rather it was a contained commentary. Mr. Blair had noted the exhumed casket. “You might better have taken my offer,” he continued after a pause of some seconds. “I think, sir, you have dug the grave of your own career.”

“That remains to be seen.”

“Schlager! Are you there?”

“Yes, Mr. Blair. They’ve broken my wrist and got my gun.”

Mr. Blair took that under consideration. “It doesn’t strike me that you are much of a man-hunter,” he observed judiciously.

“Who are they?”

“Francis Sedgwick is the other, at your service,” answered the owner of that name.

An extraordinary convulsion of rage distorted the set features of the elderly man.

“You!” he cried. “Haven’t you done enough—without this! I would come on now if hell yawned for me.”

Stricken with amazement at the hatred in the tone, Sedgwick stood staring. But Kent stepped before the advancing man. “This

Big Ben

They Say He's Worth 8 Million Dollars

Yes Sir! American farmers and business men, and their wives and children have said, “He’s worth eight million dollars,” for they’ve paid that much to 20,000 jewelers to get him to come to work in more than three and a quarter million homes (3,250,000).

Big Ben is only four years old, but he’s made a bigger success for himself than any other clock alive.

You’ll find him on all the big farms—helping to get the farm hands out on time—helping to get the bigger, better yields. You’ll see him round the house telling the women-folks the time all day so they can have the meals on time.

You’ll see him in the parlor on the mantelpiece—7 inches tall, sturdy, handsome, triple nickel-plated, ticking quietly and tending to his knitting.

In the bed rooms in the morning you’ll hear him calling different people different ways—in “that” room, with one straight “hurry-up” five minute ring, and in “that other room,” with ten short “reminder” calls lasting ten minutes. Tell him how you like your call—he’ll accommodate you.

Call on Big Ben at your dealer’s. His price is $3.00. Let him show you what he does. If your dealer hasn’t Big Ben, a money order for $3.00 addressed to his makers—Westclox, La Salle, Illinois—will bring him to you anywhere in Canada duty charges prepaid.
