Ob, singer of sweet songs, the chords of sad-You strike too often, failure, grief, and And sad distrust, and love's despair and Burden your every song.

True, life is full of care, and sad-eyed sorrow To every lip its bitter cup will bring; Evil defiet to-day and mocks to-morrow, And love is suffering.

But joy sings sometimes, bushing sorrow's wailing.
And evil hides its head and justice reigns, And love divine, unselfish and unfailing.
True to the end remains.

Above the valley's vapors shines the beauty Of mountain heights serene, and glad, and And there remains the blessedness of duty, Though love dies at your feet.

Remembering this and by true service lifted Above each small regret that daily bars Your path—your sotge, oh singer, greatly gifted. Bball lead us to the stars!

If the crabbed old bachelor who uttered this sentiment could but witness the intense thought deep study and thorough investigation of women in determining the best medicines to keep their families well, and would note their sagacity and wisdom in selecting Hop Bitters as the best, and demonstrating it by keeping their families in perpetual health, at a mere nominal expense, he would be forced to acknowledge that such sentiments are baseless and false.—Picayane. It was a Boston girl who asked, "Why is it that two souls mated in the impen-etrable mystery of their nativity, float by each other on the ocean currents of existence without being instinctively drawn together blended and beatified in the assimilated alembic of eternal love?" This is an easy one. It is because butter is forty-five cents a pound and a good seal-skin sacque costs as high as $200. The necessaries of life must experience a fall in price before two soul will readily blend in the assimilated alembic, and so forth.
