

Nature Makes The Flavour of "SALADA"

The cool, tempered breezes of the hill-top gardens in Ceylon, produce a tea of delicate, yet rich and flavoury quality. A careful selection of the finest growths is blended to make "SALADA".

Soft Ball

The undefeated Beavers won another game in the city softball league, the Clerks going down to defeat by 3-1 at Recreation Park last night. Woolmans pitched for the Clerks and allowed the Beavers three hits and having five strike-outs. Simmons for the Beavers, struck out 14 men and held the Clerks hitless until the last innings, when with two out, Elsersey beat out a bunt. Campbell, the next man walked, but the game ended when Graham made a great catch from a line drive off Martin's bat. The game was 7 innings. Score:

Clerks	1000000-1	1	3
Beavers	102000X-3	3	2

Batteries: Clerks, Woolmans and Ritchie; Beavers, Simmons and Stuart Umpires, Blakney and McMann.

APPEAL HEARD.

The appeal for the equalization of the Township road taxes was heard by Judge Hardy this morning in the Court House. Brewster and Heyd appeared for the Township of Brantford and W. A. Hollinrake for the Township of Brantford. The case was adjourned until September.

HELD POW-POW.

Chief Slemm, P. A. Shultis, representing the Moose lodge, accompanied by Mr. McEwen and a representative from the Pierson Shows, held a consultation with Mr. Bunnell at the City Hall this morning over the matter of using the street cars for parading and advertising purposes. The point was raised that the show people had chartered the special car and could not be stopped from using it by the police. But Chief Slemm thought otherwise, and demonstrated his authority later by stopping the car and sending the band back to the show grounds.

Old World Notes

The advocates of the unrestricted importation of Canadian cattle into Scotland are availing themselves of the opportunity presented by the excellent weather to press the question more on the attention of the government. Of course there is no limit to the number of carcasses or of live cattle which may be brought in even now, only that the latter cannot leave the land alive, but must be slaughtered within a certain number of hours of their arrival. What is desired is that the farmers should once more be permitted to obtain these animals for grazing and feeding purposes for ultimate sale in the market as homefaced stock. The other day the Town Council of Glasgow, unanimously passed a resolution in support of the proposal to allow the barge and copies of the resolution have since been circulated among the leading municipalities of the United Kingdom. It is not improbable that a conference of the principle public bodies will be called later to strengthen the movement; which in the present circumstances is regarded with a measure of hopefulness.

Twelve Skippers of fishing boats recently paddled guilty in the Sheriff's Court at Haddington, to a contravention of the regulations made under the Defence of the Realm Act in that they had fished beyond the limit of the Firth of Forth. The Sheriff said that as he understood the fishermen's case there was a strong temptation to fish beyond the limit, because most of the good fish were on the wrong side of it and only a small fish, not worth taking, on the right side. Therefore, in order to help the men to keep the right side there would have to be a substantial penalty, so that, when they sat down to calculate how much they would make by breaking the law, they would have to set against it how much they would also lose, the court always trying to make the balance fall on the side that tended towards obedience of the law.

Nobel's Explosive Company recently asked for the services of students willing to assist in the manufacture of munitions during the ensuing summer vacation. Over five hundred and fifty students and younger graduates of Edinburgh University volunteered their services, but unfortunately the company were afterwards unable to accept the offer. The university authorities have the matter of war services during the ensuing vacation under consideration, and it is quite probable that a register of those willing to serve will be drawn up. In the meantime a suitable statement can be made to students anxious to offer their services in this way.

The home defence corps of Ireland, which was several months ago established in Belfast for the purpose of training men for possible eventualities, has been recognized by the government and will in future act under military guidance under the name of the Belfast Volunteer Corps, which is, of course, non-sectarian and non-political, is open to all males who are debarrred by some honorable cause from joining His Majesty's forces.

The hardship involved by the holding up of large stocks of cured herrings in Scotland, was stated recently by the Scottish Secretary to be not nearly so great as reported. Since the war 97,000 barrels have been sent to the Russian and Scandinavian countries, leaving about 47,000 barrels on hand. Now the herrings are being sent to our Allies to feed their German prisoners of war.

The Scotch Strawberry crop is in grave danger of being wasted, while the supply from England will come to a premature close, unless rain comes in the very near future. The long continued drought has played havoc both in Scotland and in England, the hot sun and the cold winds drying up the fruit in a manner which threatens to completely spoil the crops.

The secretary of Scotland has appointed a committee to consider and report what steps should be taken by legislation or otherwise for the sole purpose of maintaining, and, if possible increasing, the present production of food in Scotland, on the assumption that the war may be prolonged beyond the harvest of 1916.

The king and queen paid a surprise visit to the Lord Roberts Memorial Workshops for disabled soldiers and sailors in Britannia road, Fulham a few days ago. Their Majesties inspected all the workshops and spoke to everyone of the men now employed there. They appeared to be deeply interested in the way men had been found work which resembled as nearly as possible their former occupations and was possible to them in their present disablement. Their Majesties were attracted by the making of toys. The King drew the Queen's attention to a model of herself dressed in Coronation robes. The King then caught sight of a squadron with himself on horseback—next little models laid out in a table. When their Majesties left the King told Major Tudor Craig that he had not seen a more practical scheme for assisting disabled soldiers and sailors.

A mysterious decoy ship was mentioned by the crew of the French schooner Diamant on their arrival at Plymouth a few days ago after their vessel had been sunk by a German submarine. They were picked up by the Clyde Shipping Company's steamer, Duness, the crew declared that while thirty miles northwest of Pendeen (Cornwall), they encountered a ship painted black and flying no colors. From behind this vessel the submarine glided, and sank the Diamant after giving the men two minutes in which to get into their boats. The submarine afterwards withdrew into the shelter of the steamship, which had passively watched the destruction of the schooner.

Famous Men In To-days View

Mr. D. C. Grant, formerly assistant manager of the main office of the Bank of Toronto, in the Queen City was recently made one of the inspectors of the bank. Mr. Grant, who is an old Toronto boy, was formerly assistant manager at the Bank of Toronto branch, at the corner of St. James and McGill Streets, Montreal, Quebec. He is regarded as one of the brightest young men connected with that bank, possessing the usual Scotch fondness for, and ability in, financial matters.

Mr. Hilaire Belloc, probably the best informed military writer in Great Britain at the present time, is head of the English department of the East London College. He was born in 1870, and educated at Oxford. He has had some military experience, serving not only in the British army but also in the French Artillery. Mr. Belloc has written at scores of books and pamphlets. As editor of "Land and Water," he has been doing excellent work in the present struggle, his latest interesting book, "The Elements of the Great War," attracting very favorable notice.

General Valdimir Soukhominoff, who is retiring as Russian Minister of War because of his defeat in Galicia has long been regarded as one of the most efficient generals Russia possessed. He is really the creator of the Russian army, but his effectiveness has been sadly impaired through lack of ammunition. The ex-minister first attracted attention at Plevna in 1877 when he took that strong fortress from the Turks. He was 61 years of age when he was made minister of war and entrusted with the task of re-modelling the Russian army, which had suffered defeat at the hands of Japan. Undoubtedly he performed splendid work in placing a large Russian army in the field, but his efforts have been handicapped through lack of ammunition.

Mr. George T. Holloway, chairman of the commission appointed by the Ontario Government to investigate the nickel industry of that province, is a well known British scientist. He is connected with the Royal College of Science at London, and has an international reputation as a metallurgist and chemist. He is an examiner in these subjects at the University of Birmingham, and is also vice-president of the Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, London. Mr. Holloway is also adviser to the Egyptian government, and is a member of the Mining Societies of South Africa, France and other countries. In brief, he is recognized as a world wide authority on mining matters. The Commission will not only see that no nickel finds its way into the hands of the enemy but will also take steps to have the ore refined in this country.

E. Morel, who is carrying on a pro-German campaign in the United States, is an intimate friend of Sir Roger Casement, a former English Consul-General who is now living in Berlin, after having tried to stir up the Irish in Ireland and the United States and Canada to aid the Germans. Morel was originally a shipping clerk in Liverpool, engaged in the West African trade, but quarrelled with his employers and was discharged. His old employers had been carrying on business with the Congo and Morel endeavored to seek revenge by exposing the methods of business carried on in the Congo. In his writings he developed a pro-German sentiment as it was known that Germany had a special desire to get possession of the Congo. Later he took the German side in the Agadir crisis and wrote lengthy articles in the papers urging Great Britain to take the side of Germany and oppose France in the negotiations. In the present war Morel has been acting as
