THE MATTER OF GOLD DUST.

In considering the gold dust situation the Board of Trade should, above all things, see to it that no recommendations are made which will accrue to the injury of the miner-the man upon whose shoulders gests entirely the burden of maintaining the country. Everyone is agreed that the use of gold dust as a circulating medium is unsatisfactory. The end to be attained is some method whereby currency may become the general means of transacting business without effecting any injury to the miner. It the Board of Trade is able to bring forward a satistrain. Those troublesome Boers are factory solution of the difficulty it will worse than Morgan the raider, and accomplish a result very much to be Morgan's terrible men. Why a man desired. The question is a delicate who is licked will refuse to admit it, is one to handle, however, and should be something which no one can underdealt with expansively and from every stand, save possibly the man himself. standpoint before any final determina-

To argue, therefore, that one valuation can be taken for dust of all grades is contrary, not only to laws of finance, but to laws of common sense as well. The point to be attained, if it can possibly be done, is to furnish the producer of gold dust with some equitable and satisfactory means of securing curency for his dust.

This is the line of action, if any action is taken at all, which we hope to see tollowed by the Board of Trade.

The tree public bridge across the Klondike has been completed and on Monday next will be formally opened to the use of the public. The fact that the construction of the bridge has taken place during the present spring and has not been delayed for another period of six months or more is due largely to the persistent efforts of Commissioner Ogilvie. In fact it was only through the very best of fortune that the bridge reached Dawson earlier than the opening of navigation this year. Unavoidable delays caused the bridge to be late in leaving Vancouver and when it finally reached Whitehorse, itbecame necessary to resort to scows or leave the bridge at that point during the winter. That all the parts arrived in safety and that the bridge is now an accomplished fact are matters over which the entire community in general may well rejoice. When Commissioner Ogilvie leaves Dawson he will have the satisfaction of knowing that he has left behind a monument which is strong and staunch enough almost to defy time

Dawson has come through the winter without anything disastrous in the way ot a fire. This is unprecedented in the history of the tewn, each winter heretofore having witnessed the destruction of a large section of the business portion of the city by fire. That Dawson has thus escaped during the past twelve months is due not only to the fact that of fires than formerly was the case, but also to the fact that the fire department is now organized on a basis which affords much better protection than formerly was the case. These facts should be taken into consideration by landlords in determining the rents which they ask. The decrease in risk from fire should admit of a substantial reduction in rents.

The latest thing in the way of mixed drinks is the "Carrie Nation Cocktail." These are said to have attained widespread popularity on the outside, three of them only being required to place the most inveterate consumer bors de combat. As Carrie only requires three good strokes of her trusty ax to reduce a handsomely fitted saloon to an unrecognizable mixture of glass, wood work and general bric-a-brac, the name of the new drink seems particularly appropriate. If Mrs. Nation only realized the full possibilities of the situation, she would take out a copyright on her name and compel all such use thereof to pay a handsome

Making a mark there he informed Mr. Ogilvie through the trader who understood the language spoken "When you get here you are at the fork of the river."

"And how far is that from here?" asked Mr. Ogilvie who had been busy with a sheet of paper copying the map on a smaller scale than that of the original. The trader repeated the question to the Indian and when he translated the reply About three miles," Mr. Ogilvie fainted and the next time he saw a mirror, which was not for five months, there were several gray hairs mingled with his raven locks.

Mr. Chairman! Some time ago I was very much in favor of an assay office for the reason that I then thought it would increase the yield of buckleberries this coming season, but as the royalty on huckleberries has been reduced, and as there is every reason to believe the water in the Yukon will have a muddy tinge after June 1st, I beg leave to introduce the following substitute for the previous question:
