PROPORTED TO TO TO TO One of the few obligations wandering vagabond recognizes that of notifying his brethren the whereabouts of friends and en wandering vagabond recognizes is that of notifying his brethren of the whereabouts of friends and enemies. To do this he employs the oldest of languages, one that even the unlettered can read. An extramp describes, in "Good House-keeping," the meaning of the pictures he found along the highway some of which timid housekeepers will doubtless hasten to copy and display on their own premises.

When on some white gate post I found the sketch of a gun, I stole farther down the road; I had a strong objection to being riddled full of holes so early in my career by some intrepid farmer.

The outline of a dog of warlike proportions, with wild eyes and ferceious teeth, often made me go breakfastless. My summer wardrobe was not in condition to allow of further mutilation.

If I felt brave enough to kick a yelping cur, I sauntered in recklessly at the gate which bore a portrait of a toy dog. Once past him, one could usually get a bite. A big round "O" does not make one wild to approach the premises it adorns. It means a hostess with a nature of adamant; in other words, "the marble heart."

A single "X" stands for a crosssaw, which with small exertion may earn a meal; two X's mean that you have got to saw longer in exchange for a meal.

The sign every tramp looks for anxiousty is a table with a coffeecup and a plate upon it. Bayond that gate-post dwells a motherly soul, who will welcome the most dilapidated hobo into her kitchen, and set before him a good, square meal. She may sit beside him, inquiring as to bis troubles. and she may lapidated hobo into her kitchen, and set before him a good, square meal. She may sit beside him, inquiring as to his troubles, and she may give him a mother's advice. Or she may have a story to tell of a wayward boy, lost somewhere in the great world, and all the fee she asks for her hospitality is that, in the wanderings of her guest, he may look about for her boy and give him the loving message of a mother's longing and watching.

ORIGIN OF "LYNCHING."

A Story That May Account for the Very Irregular Verb.

Readers may perhaps remembe the story published in the Observer of how Mrs. John H. Drake, of Nash County, saved her family from the ferocious attack of the Troy Major Beard by the judicious use of a jug of old Nash brandy. They will recall that Major Beard was severely wounded, captured and finally ly wounded, captured and linally hanged in Franklin county.

According to Wheeler, this incident resulted in the introduction into our language of a word now in the vocabulary of every manoother than the word "lynch" or the expression "lynch law." If we may accept Wheeler's authority on this point the word owes its origin to the following circumstances: Beard's capture he was After Beard's capture he was taken to the camp of Col. Seawell on the bank of Lynch Creek in Franklin county. A drumhead court-martial was at once organized and Beard brought before it. As they proceeded to trial some one brought in the report that a company of the control of large band of Tories were on their large band of Tories were on their way to rescue Beard. The court was thrown into a panic and after a hasty consultation decided to swing Beard without trial. This was accordingly done. Soon after more authentic news came that the reported pursuit was a fake, and the members of the court-martial recovered their presence of mind. With this restored calmness came the suggestion that Beard's execution, being carried out before judgment, was illegal. In order to ease the tender consciences of the judges the court was reorganized, the foody cut down, the trial proceeded, the tender consciences of the judges the court was reorganized, the body cut down, the trial proceeded, the prisoner condemned, judged, and no doubt much to his satisfaction, re-hung. The tree on which the body was hung stood on the bank of Lynch Creek, and it soon became a common saying in the county round about, when a person was accused of crime, that "he ought to be taken to Lynch Creek." Hence the term "lynch law."

For the sake of accuracy, we may note here that Webster's Unabridged Dictionary says this in regard to the origin of the term. "The term lynch law is said to be derived from a Virginian named Lynch, who took the law into his own hands. But this is very doubtful." Wheeler says that the incident was related to him by the Hon. B. F. Moore, who had the story from the Drake family. It is by no means improbable.—Charlotte (N. C.) Dally Observer.

Can't Fool the Sex.

A young lady from London was visiting for the first time a country fair. Seeing a cow looking very savage, she said to an old farmer, "Oh, how savage that cow looks."

"Yes, miss; it's the red parasol you are carrying," said the farmer.

"Well," she said, "I knew it was a trifle out of fashion, but I never thought a country cow would notice it."

Unnoticed.

The following tragment of conversation was overheard in a park last Sunday morning between two well-dressed ladies:

"Did you notice that girl who looked so pointedly at us just now?"

"No, dear. Which one?"

"It was just as we were passing the Achilles statue."

"Oh! Do you mean the one in a gray Eton jacket with blue silk revers and a stragged skirt to match, a blue hat with a big bow of green velvet, pale gray kid gloves stitched with black, and a pale blue silk flounced underskirt, high-heeled patent leather shoes, a spotted veil and a blue parsoi?"

"Yes, dear, that was the one."

"No, then, I didn't notice her, in fact, I hardly looked at her."—Chicago Journal.

The Pernicious Treating System.

Colonial Standard, Pictou.

Nearly every man knows what might be termed bar-room etiquette is like. One, two, or more, enter a bar-room, with no desire or intention of taking too much. One treats, the other, or others, as the case may be, considers it manly to treat in return, and unmanly not to do so. What are the consequences? There are in the majority of cases as many drinks as there are drinkers, ending too often in all being too full. Now, the men who do this are not mean men—they are not our worst citizens, by any means. They are what we might call jolly good fellows, and honest, withal, but they are adhering to a custom that is doing much harm—probably more than any other custom practised in our social life.

Making Change

A young lawyer received a call from a well-to-do-farmer, who was in need of legal advice, says the Philadelphia a well-to-go-farmer, who was a first of legal advice, says the Philadelphia Times. The lawyer looked up the statutes, and told the farmer what he should do. On being asked the charge, "Well, let's call it three dollars," replied the lawyer. The farmer handed over a five-dollar bill. The lawyer seemed embarrassed. But, after searching through his pockets and the drawers of his desk, he rose to the occasion, and pocketed the bill as he reached for a digest. "I guess, neighbor," he remarked, as he resumed his seat, "I shall have to give you two dollars' worth more advice."

An Effective Dunning Letter.

A youth was engaged as a junior A youth was engaged as a junior clerk by a firm of lawyers, and by way of filling in his time and testing his worth, on his first day he was told to write a letter demanding payment of a debt from a client who was long in arrears. To the great surprise of his employers a cheque for the amount arrived the next day. They sent for the young clerk and asked him to produce a copy of the letter which had had such an astonishing result. The letter ran as follows: "Dear Sir,—If you do not at once remit payment of the amount which you owe us we will take steps that will amaze you."

Bringing it Home.

A man of literary aspirations who had his way yet to make in the world wrote a poem, which he submitted to his wife before sending it out for publication. "Why, Henry," she said, on looking it over, "you have made 'hundred' rhyme with 'onward." "That's all right," he replied: "Tennyson did it." "Yes," rejoined his wife, "Tennyson could do such a thing, but you can't, Henry."

The Lame Boy and His Brother.

Two small boys signalled a street car, and when it stopped it was noticed that one boy was lame, says a clipping sent us by Clara Tulloss, Ottawa, Kan. With much solicitude the other helped the cripple to board the car, and after telling the conductor to go ahead returned to the sidewalk. The lame boy braced himself up in his seat, so that he could look out of the car window, and the other passengers observed that, at intervals, the little fellow would waive his hand and smile. Following the direction of his glances the passengers saw the other boy running along the sidewalk, straining every muscle to keep up with the car.

They watched his pantomime in silence for a few blocks, and then a gentleman asked the lame boy who the other boy was.

"My brother," was the prompt reply.

"Why does he not ride with you The Lame Boy and His Brother.

"My brother," was the prompt reply.
"Why does he not ride with you in the car?" was the next question.
"'Cause he hasn't any money," an-swered the lame boy, sorrowfully.
The little runner was speedily invited into the car, and the sympathetic questioner paid his fare.—Little Chronicle.
