CHAPTER XI.

All fell out as I had planned, except that, to my extreme surprise, at Southampton, when embarking, I tumbled on friends, the dearest, most faithful friends, and the unfailing instinct of one of them was not to be denied. I met both my love and my dog. The first, I felt certain, was making this voyage on my behalf, and I hungered to speak to her, yet dared not make myself known too soon. I was nearly betrayed, however, for Roy, clever brute, soon penetrated my disguise and was not to be shaken off. Only when I had seen him comfortably stowed away in the fore part of the ship near where my own quarters were would he settle down.

I had no opportunity of meeting Frida, nor was I able to advance my other business, until the voyage was half over. There is a wide gulf set between first and second cabin passengers. My range was strictly limited. could not go near the hurricane deck nor enter the principal smoking room, the music room or saloon, although I hung about constantly and became at last an object of suspicion to the officers, stewards and quartermasters and met sometimes with rough rebuffs.

The second day out I once more became conscious that I was being watched wherever I went, Recent events had left me very sensitive of espionage. I was no longer disposed to make little of it, but still my feeling was more of resentment than alarm, so much so that I turned sharply on my follower, who was a saloon passenger our territory, and I challenged him to explain his conduct. "I am a friend, Captain Wood," he said in a whisper as he took me aside. "Rossiter is my name, and I represent Saraband and Snuyzer, who could not sail with us. He went after you, foliowing the Fleur-de-Lis. How in thunder are you here?" As soon as I was satisfied of his good faith-and he proved it by his knowledge of every circumstance of the case-I told him my story. "Miss Fairholme will be real glad, I tell you, sir. She knows nothing yet, although I made you out from the first, through the dog, sir; besides which, I had your description and your photograph. Snuyzer is great, sir, and misses no point of detail.

"Grand, sir, grand, now you're aboard. We'll let them have rope, and just when things look rosiest produce you. These ladies will identify you; Sarabands have all the threads of the conspiracy, and we'll land the lot in state prison, whenever it suits us. Yes, sir, they're about fixed."

"You say Sarabands have all the threads. I haven't. What does it all mean?"

"I got an outline from Snuyzer. The plot originated with one McQuahe." "I know him. I have reason to do

"Well, he was in with Bully Mc-Faught, the testator; had some of his secrets, and was the first to hear the money was going to you. So he joined in with the Spaniard, who is no duke, and the pair brought over a clerk once in Quinlan's law office. That's the larrikin who's personating you on board. But it will all come right now, and you may trust that to Sarabands." "There's one thing I cannot leave to them," and I proceeded to tell my new friend about the missing papers. "I must recover them before we arrive in port. If all else fails, we must have the villains arrested on board; but that I'd rather not do, for it might expose the contents of documents that are of absolutely the most secret and confidential nature." "Don't you suppose this crook will have got them by heart long ago?".

"They are so strange that no one elieve him on oath u could back them up by the papers themselves. I don't mind telling you that much.' "Then I guess you must have them, only I don't see a way short of lifting them from the man's stateroom, and that sort of thing has an ugly name-if it's found out." "It would be theft-for you, not me. They are mine or my employer's, and I tell you I should not hesitate to take them openly or secretly, to fight over them if I could get anywhere within reach. "Reckon, captain, you'll be likely to qualify, too, for state's prison," said

Mr. Rossiter, laughing. I had been promised news of Frida by my new friend Rossiter. But day followed day, and yet he had nothing to tell me. It was always the same story: "Missy's still under the weather, like the rest of the women folk. Not able to leave her stateroom. Stewardess thinks she'll be laid by till we make Sandy Hook. But I'll let you know soon as I hear." At last, on the fourth day at sea, a superb day, fresh and sunny, my dear girl made her appearance on deck, and, as I was ever on the watch, I saw her from my distant second class station long before Rossiter came with his report. Indeed he was too busy, good soul, in seeing to her wants and dancing attendance upon her to think very much of me. When he did appear, it was only to get Roy "Missy was mad to see the dog." There was not a word about me.

When he returned, it was with rathe scared face. "All the fat is in the fire! The duchess has read your name on the dog's collar"-

"And guesses I am on board?" "I don't say that, not yet anyway, but they're likely to ferret it out pretty slick unless you cache down below for the rest of the run."

"I shall not hide, my friend, not till I've seen and talked with Miss Fairholme, and that I'm going to do with or without your help or leave." "Right now?"

"Right now, over there on the poop deck, in the face of them all. I can pay for a first class passage, and I'll do it under another name." "So as to call attention to yourself and bring those toughs on top of you again-spoil all your hand." "What can they do to me? And if they chose to try I'm man enough to meet them. I'm not afraid of anything straight and aboveboard."

"That's just what it wouldn't be. If you come out now, you will be playing their game-will put them on their guard anyhow. Don't be wrong head ed, captain, and wait, won't you?" "How long? This is the fourth day

EPIDEMIC of Sore Throat.

Sometimes your throat gets so sore that your neck swells up and it does hurt so when you swallow. If you gargle it with one part of glycerine and three parts Powley's Liquified Ozone, and take the Ozone hot, you will get cured quickly. It is splendid preventive preparation. Sore throat is epidemic just now. You can catch it as easily as you can scarlet fever or
