

PUT DEAD BODY OUT IN THE BACK YARD.

Farmer Says He Stumbled Over Housekeeper's Body in the Cellar.

Young Man and His Mother, Also a Dog, Found Suffocated With Gas.

Webster, Mass., Nov. 4.—Medical Examiner Harrison G. Blake, of this city, went to Burlington yesterday to investigate the death of Mrs. Sara Higgins, aged 60 years, whose body was found at the home of George Stubbs, a farmer, for whom she acted as housekeeper. Stubbs told the medical examiner that Mrs. Higgins had been missing for several days, and that Saturday night he went into the cellar to get some potatoes, when he stumbled over the body.

Not liking the idea of remaining in the house with the body during the night, Stubbs says he opened the bulk head leading from the cellar and drew the body out into the back yard, where he covered it with some pieces of burlap. There the body remained through Saturday night's storm. Early Sunday Stubbs went to the home of a constable at Burlington Centre and notified him of the case.

IN THE WORLD OF AMUSEMENT

The prospects are that this will be one of the best weeks of the season at Bennett's as an exceptionally good bill has been secured. It is also independent Foresters' week and as this is such a strong organization in Hamilton there is every reason to believe that it will be a case of "go early and avoid the rush." The feature act this week is Volta, the electrical marvel, who is one of the most remarkable performers in vaudeville. The manner in which he toys with the deadly element is astonishing and his methods are beyond explanation even by the most capable electricians. He lights his cigar with the tip of his finger, ignites the gas with his tongue, sets fire to a handkerchief with his feet and if permission is given him he will undertake to burn out every light in the theatre by merely touching the interior of an incandescent lamp socket.

Louise Raffine will appear with a troupe of trained monkeys. This is an act which comes direct to Bennett's after playing for the summer at Hammerstein's Roof Garden in New York. The Sisters Dunn, a troupe of English impersonators, will also grace the board. For the second or third time in Canada, they recently closed a most successful tour in England. Willie Eckstein, the Boy Padewski, promises one of the most entertaining acts seen here this season while Gilbert and Ketton, Hebrew comedians, will create lots of fun. The Fitzgibbon-McCoy trio, Bertie and Herbie and Reattina and Stevens all have acts of high standing.

The winners of the Tiger dogs at Bennett's Theatre on Saturday were: Miss Cox, 58 York street; Muriel Baker, 132 East Jackson street; May Hooner, 99 King street west; Bertie and Herbie, 171-173, 8 West avenue north. Tickets 4420 and 4197 were not presented and the owners may present them at the box office. Beginning next Saturday valuable presents will be given to all who attend.

The New Theatrical Circuit.
Toronto, Nov. 4.—Wm. Grossman, of the legal firm, of Grossman and Verhaas, 116 New York street, is the chief promoter of the new circuit. It is said to be one of the most absurdly funny skits playing advanced vaudeville to-day. Mr. Sheehan is one of the cleverest comedians in the business, and, portraying the role of a Dutchman in this skit, he is seen at his best. Special scenery is used. The Three Yocars, comedy acrobats, will be another exceptionally strong feature. They are said to have the finest routine of tricks of any act of the class in vaudeville and the success the attraction has met with since coming to America would seem to justify the claim. Alice and Henry Taylor have a novel offering sure to please. The woman is known as the champion rifle shot of England and does some remarkable work with a rifle and pistol while Taylor does several clever tricks in equilibrium. "A Knight in Rome" is the title of an unusually clever skit by Murray Clayton and Lillian Drew. It is a big laugh maker from first to last. Axelle and Heinie, another clever pair of entertainers, will present a novel singing and acrobatic act. Barren and Rockaway have a clever musical comedy act, which is sure to take well. Sydney Grant, the well-known monologue artist, and the kinetograph with the latest motion pictures are the other numbers on the bill.

Between the Acts.
Downie's production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be the attraction at the Grand this afternoon and evening, and will doubtless play to big business, as usual.

Among the most promising of the new generation of musical comedy stars is Miss Margaret M. McVey who will sing "A Dream of Zion," by Hadley, and two other numbers. The organ numbers will include "Sonata in C Minor" by Balducci; "Overture to Zampa," and an overture by Aubrey and four other numbers. Notwithstanding the disagreeable weather, there was a large audience at the twilight organ recital by Mr. W. H. Hewlett in Centenary Church on Saturday afternoon. In addition to the organ numbers, Madame Laguerre-Reynolds, an English contralto, sang two songs most acceptably.

MR. BEST'S WORK.
Why the Y. M. C. A. prospers in Foreign Lands.

Referring to an address given by John R. Mott, international Y. M. C. A. secretary, the Peterboro Review pays the following well-deserved compliment to T. F. Best, general secretary of the Hamilton association:

EAST Y. M. C. A.
Mr. Lees Gave a Good Address on Honesty.

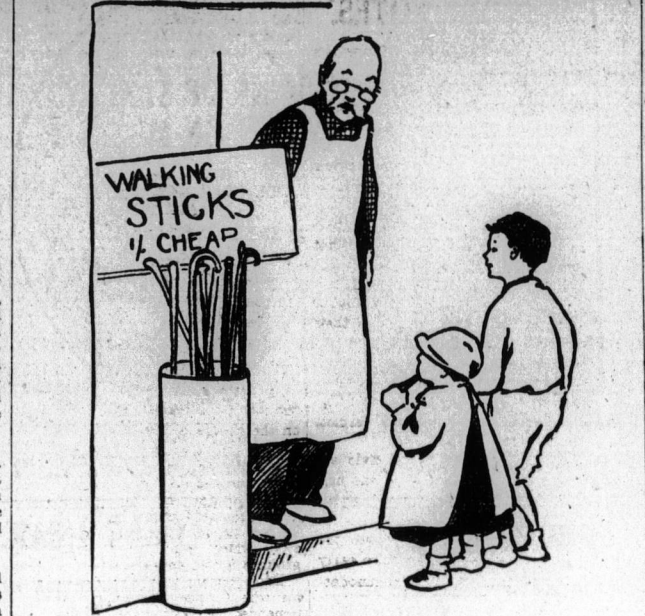

There was a large attendance at the men's meeting in East Hamilton Y. M. C. A. at 4:15 yesterday afternoon. Mr. Geo. H. Lees addressed the meeting and Mr. S. C. Sandring sang a solo. Mr. Lees' address was very helpful. His subject was "Honesty." Romans 13: 17 was quoted, "Provide things honest in the sight of all men." Some people say honesty is the best policy, and so it is. But honesty from principle was far higher and better. There were good people who, while strictly honest in larger things, would not think it amiss to let the street car conductor pass them in a crowded car without collecting their fare, or who would look for discount on gas, water or other bill if not paid within the specified time. What if city water was charged a full minute over passed; then from somewhere, up Broadway, there would be a screech and a bell, over on West Sixteenth street and other shriek answered. The rumble of wheels and clatter of hoofs drew near, and around the corner came three white horses on the gallop, pulling Engine 55. Another engine came down Sixteenth street almost on the dot. They reared past the reviewing stand, men and horses of highest stamp, followed by tandems, trucks and last of all, a motor car. The engine was within two minutes of the time the Mayor turned in the alarm.

Instantly everybody in the great crowd set his teeth and dug into his palms with expectancy. Mounted policemen galloped over to Broadway to stop the cars. Cops on foot dashed madly down the crowd's face forcing the struggling cars back into line. Maybe a full minute passed; then from somewhere, up Broadway, there would be a screech and a bell, over on West Sixteenth street and other shriek answered. The rumble of wheels and clatter of hoofs drew near, and around the corner came three white horses on the gallop, pulling Engine 55. Another engine came down Sixteenth street almost on the dot. They reared past the reviewing stand, men and horses of highest stamp, followed by tandems, trucks and last of all, a motor car. The engine was within two minutes of the time the Mayor turned in the alarm.

Extension Truck 24, with a special crew of picked men, stopped in front of the Everett House and the ticklish work of the department's human flies began. Sixteen men with life belts and long ladders leaned for the back of the truck and began to drag long, hooked sealing ladders from the body of the truck. Then the crowd that had been wondering knew why certain of the Everett's windows had been reinforced along the sill. Michael J. Martin, engine 13, for reserve made at 10 Manning street, November 2, 1906.

Hurley medal, Fireman John A. Kuch, truck 23; for rescue at 70 and 72 Manhattan street, May 31, 1906.

Stephenson medal, Foreman Edward J. Levey, engine 29; for general efficiency as commanding officer during the year 1906.

A LONG WAIT.

"We're a-waitin' to see them sticks walk."

FIREMEN SHOW HOW THEY DO IT.

Thrilling Exhibition for Crowds in Union Square.

(N. Y. Sun.)
A lot of downtown Manhattan turned out in Union Square yesterday—not for getting to bring the kiddies along—to see the blue-shirted men of the Fire Department, have their yearly big show. The thrills and shivers that come from these firemen did not start with scaling ladders, water towers and things, to say nothing of the delicious sweling of sympathetic pride when Mayor McCellan pinned medals for bravery on the chests of nine of them—these things spurred Manhattan to whoop with joy.

For all but about 500 the most heart stopping event was when the big water tower, with two engines throbbing on its pipes, raised its head cobralike and belched from its mouth a crashing stream of water all over the packed hundreds that had blocked the crossing at Madison avenue and Seventeenth street far down to the centre of the block. Policemen and crooks, honest folk and knaves were all wetted down indiscriminately, and when the solid mass broke and fled down Seventeenth street the dry ones everywhere else set up a merry, merry laugh and a half hysterical shout.

When folk got off the street cars about 1 o'clock they all made for the gayly decked grand stand that had been erected on the north side of the park. Only those who had engraved invitations from the Fire Commissioners' stand on the stand, and the rest of the crowd jammed itself into a narrow compass up and down Seventeenth street. Every roof was fringed with black figures and windows everywhere within two blocks were crowded. When shortly after 2:30 P. M. Chief Crozier's red and white team, led by the Chief, Mayor McCellan and Fire Commissioner Lantry, came up from the west, behind a double line of mounted Troop A of the traffic squad every one knew the show was on.

Three engines and three trucks were drawn up across the street from the line and road from a review stand, ground for a picture and the crews of these machines composed the guard of honor which marched the nine heroes up Broadway. The Mayor, Chief Crozier, the Chief, Mayor McCellan and Fire Commissioner Lantry, came up from the west, behind a double line of mounted Troop A of the traffic squad every one knew the show was on.

The Mayor called each man from the line and read from a list of names, what deed of his had seemed good in the eyes of the awarding board of donors. He pinned the medal, a hearty grip of the hand both from the Mayor and Commissioner Lantry went with each bit of commendation.

When the nine heroes had been decorated they strolled back and Mayor McCellan reached up to the knob on the special fire box, jammed it and all that had been rigged up in the corner of his box on the star. He opened the door and a bell buzzed for an instant as he turned in an alarm.

Instantly everybody in the great crowd set his teeth and dug into his palms with expectancy. Mounted policemen galloped over to Broadway to stop the cars. Cops on foot dashed madly down the crowd's face forcing the struggling cars back into line. Maybe a full minute passed; then from somewhere, up Broadway, there would be a screech and a bell, over on West Sixteenth street and other shriek answered. The rumble of wheels and clatter of hoofs drew near, and around the corner came three white horses on the gallop, pulling Engine 55. Another engine came down Sixteenth street almost on the dot. They reared past the reviewing stand, men and horses of highest stamp, followed by tandems, trucks and last of all, a motor car. The engine was within two minutes of the time the Mayor turned in the alarm.

Extension Truck 24, with a special crew of picked men, stopped in front of the Everett House and the ticklish work of the department's human flies began. Sixteen men with life belts and long ladders leaned for the back of the truck and began to drag long, hooked sealing ladders from the body of the truck. Then the crowd that had been wondering knew why certain of the Everett's windows had been reinforced along the sill. Michael J. Martin, engine 13, for reserve made at 10 Manning street, November 2, 1906.

Hurley medal, Fireman John A. Kuch, truck 23; for rescue at 70 and 72 Manhattan street, May 31, 1906.

Stephenson medal, Foreman Edward J. Levey, engine 29; for general efficiency as commanding officer during the year 1906.

Three men at once leaped over the low iron fence and began to swing their slender ladders up at the windows above them. Persons who had been craning their necks out of the hotel windows swayed back hastily as the sweeping hooks dr-draw back the faces and caught at the sills. Up the three men went to straddle the sills on the second floor windows while three others trailed quickly up the spidery poles with the second instalment of ladders to grip the window sills above. Within five minutes the first three men were standing on the roof, five stories above the ground and all the rest of the squad was swarming up the lines of poles.

Then a fellow with a strange looking gun and a line coiled in the middle of the street and raised his weapon up past the dodging heads in the hotel windows. He fired and a slender white line jumped from the ground and shot up and over the heads of the firemen on the roof. They were pulling up the rope even before half of the crowd knew how the line got there.

SANE HALLOWE'EN.

CHICAGO SCHOOL LADS ABANDON PRANKS FOR HUGE BONFIRE.

Woman Makes Them Good—Mrs. Alice Whitney's Candies and Cookies as Reward for Virtue.

Chicago Tribune: "A sane and safe Halloween" was the slogan with which Mrs. Alice Whitney, the twentieth century fairy god mother to the Lincoln school, gathered 60 children in a great celebration on the vacant lot opposite her house, 403 Belden avenue, last night.

Mrs. Whitney began her preparations three weeks ago by announcing to the boys that her "Roll of Honor" was ready to be signed, and ever since then the list of signatures has been growing until almost every boy in the neighborhood was enrolled.

The "roll of honor" is headed as follows: "We, the undersigned, promise to behave on Halloween in a decorous manner, not injuring any person or property. We will have our annual bonfire and not throw flour or any other commodity which will injure clothing. Whatever beans or similar missiles we shoot shall be in the air or into the fire. We will form in line at the close of the fun and give our ticket to the one appointed, receiving in return a cookie which may contain a coin."

The boys who could write signed their names, and Mrs. Whitney read the pledge to them, and then held up their right hands and solemnly promised to keep it.

Each was then given a ticket consisting of a piece of red cloth, and became an active worker in the cause. Every scrap of combustible material was collected from the streets and saved for the fire, with the result that the streets and alleys of the neighborhood are now boasted the cleanest in the city.

The treasure which the boys offered up in the great conflagration last night were: Seventy-seven barrels, 105 boxes, 25 bushels, 2 couches, 1 hardwood dresser, 1 washing machine, 3 mattresses, and smaller articles without number. At the apex of the huge sacrificial pyre was a wallpaper dressed dummy of a woman in a sunbonnet, made by Mrs. Whitney for the occasion, and the whole was well soaked with several gallons of a mixture of naphtha, gasoline, and kerosene.

After the great blast had died down to a few red embers the boys lined up to turn in their tickets and receive the saccharine reward of virtue consisting of a big piece of taffy and a cookie each, with the delightful uncertainty of finding a nickel in a cookie. The only ones not supremely happy were the little girls. "They are supposed to be good for nothing," said the boys. "We don't have to bother to keep them out of mischief."

"Please give me some of your taffy, Frank!" said one little lass.

"Gwan; you didn't get a barrel," was the answer.

"This was the tenth and most successful party we have held," said Mrs. Whitney. "I don't believe one of the boys broke his pledge, and we had all the tough boys in the neighborhood as well as the good ones. We have no children of our own, so we have been so accustomed to the children in the Lincoln school, that we obtain their respect and obedience by kindness."

Mr. Mackenzie King will inquire into the methods of the immigration companies at Vancouver who handle Oriental immigration.
