BURGLARY.—On Tuesday night between 8 and 9 o'clock, whilst Mr. Thomas O'Brien, proprietor of the Half Way Hotel, Elora, was in the tavern, a party for a short time, some thieves broke through the bar room window, and ransacked the premises for money, but were disappointed in their object. Evidently desirous, however, that their mission should not altogether be fruitless, they appropriated to themselves a half barrel of beer about three parts full. No trace of the thieves or theft has hitherto been ascertained. Mr. O'Brien has only recently entered into possession of the hotel, and has not, as yet, occupied it with his family, but it is a little easier, as the other night, the hotel was for a short time, some thieves broke through the bar room window, and ransacked the premises for money, but were disappointed in their object.

SUDDEN DEATH.—A report was current in town this morning that Mr. Robert Perkins, for several years past off and on, employed as Barman, &c., at Ellis' North American Hotel, had died suddenly in his chair at the hotel. On enquiry, we ascertained that the rumour was false—Perkins having been suffering from an attack of congestion of the lungs, the severity of which convinced his medical attendant three days ago that a rapid fatality must ensue. This morning, however, Perkins feeling a little easier, and unduly confident, descended to the bar-room, and the consequent exertion, doubtless, having proved too much for him, he expired as previously mentioned, in a sitting position in his chair. Perkins was a quiet inoffensive character, and rather a favorite with the hotel visitors. He had evidently received a superior education, and although his constitution had been greatly enfeebled by an over-indulgence for liquor, yet we are glad to say that for many months past he had relinquished the practice altogether.

Fifty per cent of the new stock is nine months instalments, the first of ten per cent, and the others of five per cent, and three months' notice is to be given before calling for the payment of any of the remaining fifty per cent. The premium is payable in four equal instalments, at the same time as the first four instalments of the capital.

An unsuccessful attempt was made last week to start a St. Andrew's Society in Lunenburg.

ST. ANDREW'S DAY IN GUELPH. ANNUAL CELEBRATION. A SUCCESSFUL GATHERING.

The Sons of St. Andrew celebrated the anniversary of Scotland's Patron Saint by a concert and ball, which came off in the Town Hall on Friday evening. This annual festival, like all the others got up under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Society, was very largely attended, and was in every respect a great success. The committee of management were fortunate in securing the services of the Fairbairn Family for the concert, whose efforts gave great satisfaction to every listener. The hall was appropriately decorated for the occasion. At one end were placed the fine oil painting of the Queen, and above it the royal arms, both kindly lent by Mr. John Haver. These were tastefully draped with flags and gay tartans by the other end hung a portrait of Robert Burns, similarly festooned and set off with banners, and all around the walls were wreathed with scarlet tannels, which with a number of engravings completed the decorations, and gave to the Hall a very gay and comfortable appearance. The committee deserve great credit for the taste and effort they displayed in this important part of their work.

Shortly after eight o'clock the Hall was well-filled, when Mr. John Watt, the Society's organist, gave notice of the proceedings were about to commence by playing a pibroch on the bagpipes. The President, Mr. David Stirling, M.P., along with other officers, and several ex-Presidents of the Society, then ascended the platform, when the President delivered the following address:

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS. LAMENTABLE TO-NIGHT to celebrate the anniversary of Scotland's Patron Saint, and the duty devolves upon me to open the proceedings with a short address.

In doing so, let me, in the first place, express my great pleasure at seeing so many of you gathered here to-night to assemble to honour the day. I have also much satisfaction in tendering to our social gathering. I extend this welcome not only to the sons and daughters of St. Andrew, but to all who are of other nationalities who join with us on this festive occasion, and whose friendship and respect we desire to cherish and maintain.

It would perhaps be too much an infringement on your time were I to attempt to explain why Scotchmen are so proud to keep up these celebrations. Love of country is an inherent principle deeply seated in the breast of every true Scotchman. It matters not in what part of the world his lot may be cast, he still retains that fond recollection of the days of "Auld Lang Syne" which nothing can efface, and he gladly avails himself of such opportunities as the present to give full vent to this, his first love, his mother land.

The following, however, may be given as some of the reasons why Scotchmen have such a deep-seated attachment for the land of their birth. In countries where the comforts, and even necessities of life, must be procured by patient toil, the affections of the mind as well as the faculties of the understanding improve under the influence of patriotism, and flourish among its kindred virtues, where it is necessary to combine for mutual defence, as well as for the supply of common wants, natural goodwill springs from mutual difficulties and labours, and the social affections unfold themselves to the men with whom we live to the soil on which we tread. Love of country is also invariably found more active under free Governments than under despotic ones. As the individual becomes of more consequence to the community the more active is his patriotism. In small states this principle is generally more active than in large ones, and for this reason, the independence of a small community being maintained with difficulty, sentiments of patriotism are more frequently evoked from their constant danger.

The people of mountainous countries, as a rule, are distinguished for nourishing sentiments of national pride and independence. From the peculiar position and natural strength of such countries, they have maintained their independence against the powerful neighbors, and under such circumstances valor, in all ages, has made its most successful efforts against tyranny and oppression. By such a combination of circumstances as these, the ties that attach men to the land of their birth are multiplied and strengthened, and often survive in countries far distant, to the latest period of life, to soothe the heart with the pleasures of memory when those of hope have died away.

It would be very unwise in me to occupy your time further in attempting to explain this principle. Suffice it to say that there can be no mistaking this national attachment so strong in the Scotch character. Men return to their native land after long absence, and in this respect unchanged—Scotchmen never forget the "Land of mountain, glen and woodland. Land, O dear land, of their childhood."

In all varieties of lands and climates their hearts ever turn to the "Land of Cakes and Brier Scots." Scotch feelings are kept with Scotch feelings "On Greenland's icy mountains, and India's coral strand."

And here let me relate an amusing instance as illustrative of the existence of this patriotic feeling which I recently read. The Marquis of Lothian whilst travelling in India happened to arrive at a station on St. Andrew's Day, and received an invitation to join a Scotch dinner party in commemoration of old Scotland. As a necessary consequence there was a great deal of Scotch enthusiasm. There were no less than seven sheep's heads signed or "signed" on the table, and Lord Lothian, himself after dinner, sang with great applause "The Laird o' Cockpen." Another little incident to show this love of Scotland is strengthened by the fact that the Marquis with our own Canada. The late Dr. Norman Macleod when visiting Canada met with a Scotch emigrant who spoke favourably and gratefully of his position in this, his adopted country. But he could not help making this exception when he thought of the "Banks and Braes o' Bonny Doon," but on Sir, he said, "there are no thistles in the woods."

How touching the words when given in the good broad Doric. But while we cherish the warmest sentiments of patriotism towards our "ain native land," we have no desire to monopolize from other nationalities those noble feelings of affection which should be the result of every true man to his land of his birth. And whether we hail from the land of the rose, the shamrock or thistle, let us always bear in mind that we have one common destiny in this wide-spread Dominion, and that a sacred duty devolves upon us to bring all the energy and strength of character we possess to emulate our forefathers in their "Auld Scotia" in building up and sustaining a nationality worthy of the glorious name of Britons on this continent.

As Scotchmen, then, and the descendants of Scotchmen, let us, while we honor and respect the feelings of our countrymen of other nationalities, continue to foster and maintain our St. Andrew's Society, and these annual gatherings; let us cherish a true, loyal heart for Auld Scotia and her sons; let us hold out the right hand of fellowship to the other end of every description of "Brier Scots" who may come amongst us requiring our aid and advice; and let us, above all, serve and respect our glorious Queen—a true friend and admirer of Scotland, its institutions and its people.

Mr. Vale's fine hand opened the concert by playing the overture to Guy Mannering, which was done in splendid style, as were also the quadrilles from Scotch airs, given in the second part.

We have never heard better playing by an amateur Band, and hope the winter goes over they will give the public another taste of their skill. The Fairbairn Family received a hearty welcome when they came on the platform. They first sang "Hail to the Chief"—solo and chorus—with much effect. The other chorused pieces, such as "O'er the Water to Charlie" and "My Love She's but a Lassie Yet" were also admirably rendered. Mr. Fairbairn's songs were given with fine effect, and were heartily applauded. He was especially successful in his rendering of the "Bonnie House o' Airlie," "The Jolly Irish Girl" and "Dolly Varden" with all the comic accompaniments, which she managed well. Mr. Fairbairn's other daughter gave valuable aid in the choruses. "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the Queen" were sung by the whole audience with heart and voice—the Fairbairn Family leading—which closed a most pleasing entertainment. Mrs. Roberts played the accompaniments on the piano and organ with great taste. Two capital duets—"Jamie and Jeanie" and "The Bonnie House o' Airlie" were sung by the chorus, was from Messrs. Bell & Co's. Manufactory, and was kindly lent for the occasion. Mr. Fairbairn gave a pleasing variety to the entertainment by telling several humorous Scotch stories, and giving a recitation, all of which were well received, and provoked much laughter.

Immediately after the concert the hall was cleared, and dancing commenced to the inspiring strains of Vale's Quadrille Band. Of course the ball was opened with the time-honoured, old fashioned Scotch reel, which was danced with a capital success by the Scotchmen of St. Andrew's Day. Mr. Edwards provided excellent refreshments in the Council Chamber, and did his part of the work to the satisfaction of all. Checkers, chess and other pastimes were provided for those who did not feel inclined to dance. But the real work was done in the centre of attraction. The dancers during the night showed no signs of flagging, but kept it up long into morning, when the company broke up, thoroughly satisfied with the enjoyments of the night, and congratulating each other on the great success which had attended another St. Andrew's celebration in our good town.

ACCIDENT.—A most unfortunate "con-temprement" occurred at the St. Andrew's entertainment in the Town Hall on Friday evening to a respected and prominent citizen, Mr. Robert Chance, who, whilst enjoying the pleasures of the waltz dance, unluckily got his foot entangled in his partner's dress, and in the fall which ensued in consequence, received a fracture of the leg just immediately below the knee. Mr. Chance was forthwith removed to an ambulance by Mr. Denis Coffey, and after Dr. Cowan, who was speedily in attendance, had ascertained the nature of the accident, the sufferer was at once removed to his own house and the necessary surgical appliances supplied. On enquiry this morning we learn that Mr. Chance passed a night which he anticipated, a somewhat sleepless, restless night, but we hope to hear that the sufferer is doing as well as could be expected under the painful circumstances. We need not say that quite a gloom was temporarily cast over the festivities of the evening. Mr. Chance being a general favorite from his hearty, genial character. The accident occurring at this particular juncture is all the more aggravating from the fact that Messrs. Chance & Williamson have recently purchased a large stock of dry goods in Galt, and Mr. Chance was to have superintended their disposal in that town. As a mitigation, peculiarly of the unfortunate accident we learn that Mr. Chance is entitled to $25 per week from the Hartford Accidents Insurance Company, of which Mr. R. Morris, Ontario Bank, is the agent in Guelph, and in which Mr. Chance was insured.

DEATH OF HORACE GREELEY. ACCOUNT OF HIS ILLNESS. HE DIES FACEFULLY.—THE PRESS ON HIS DECESS.

New York, Nov. 29.—Horace Greeley died at 6:50 p. m. He was conscious at the time of his decease, and his death was peaceful.

New York, Nov. 29.—The following is the Tribune's account of the sickness and death of Horace Greeley: As far as any of his associates know, Mr. Greeley was almost in as good health as usual, when, on the day after the election, he wrote the card announcing his resignation of the editorial chair of the Tribune. His sleeplessness was known to have become greatly worse, but for years he had suffered more or less from the same difficulty, and, as is now clear, sufficient allowance had not been made for the immense strain upon him throughout the summer, especially during the last month of his wife's illness. But it soon became evident that his strength was unequal to the task to which he had set himself.

He wrote only three or four careful articles, not one of them a half a column in length. The most notable, perhaps, was the one entitled "Conclusion," in which he summed up his views of the canvass. In all he wrote less than three and a half columns. After his return on Tuesday, the 12th inst., he abandoned his effort to visit his office regularly, and sent for the family physician of Mr. Johnson, a friend with whom he was a guest, and in whose house his wife had died.

Every effort was made to induce sleep, but he grew steadily worse, and it became evident that his case was critical. Dr. Choat and others were called to consultation, and finally it was decided to take him to Dr. Choat's residence, two or three miles distant from Mr. Greeley's own country residence, at Chappaqua. Here he received unremitting attention. The instant had developed inflammation of the brain, and under this the venerable patient rapidly sank. It was not until Tuesday last, however, that his associates and family brought themselves to admit the possibility of his speedy death.

On Wednesday night he failed rapidly, but on Thursday afternoon, and evening he seemed somewhat easier. Towards morning he was more quiet, and between 8 and 9 o'clock he fell into a nearly unconscious condition, which continued with some intervals through the day. About noon he said quite distinctly, and with some force, "I know that my Redeemer lieth." During the day he recognized various people. He suffered little and seemed to have no more than ordinary sleeplessness which accompanies the last stage of his disease. During the day his extremities were cold, and there was no pulse at the wrist. Up to within half an hour of the end he manifested in various ways his consciousness of what was going on around him, and even answered in monosyllables and intelligible questions addressed to him. About half-past three he said, very distinctly, "It is done," and beyond the briefest answer to questions, this was his last utterance.

His youngest daughter, Miss Gabrielle, was with him through the last day evening. Through Friday, the eldest daughter, Miss Ida, was in constant attendance, as she had been during the whole of his illness, and that of Mrs. C. Greeley before him. At ten minutes before seven o'clock, the watchers drew back in reverent stillness from the bedside. The Great Editor was gone in peace, after a many struggles in honor, after so much obloquy.

The Tribune obituary says: We have his praises to the poor whom he has succored; to the lowly whom he lifted up; to the slave who hove back he saved from the lash; to the oppressed whose wrongs he made his own.

The Times says: We only express the truth when we say that Mr. Greeley died of Liberal Reptile Misicism. Historians will do justice to Mr. Greeley, and in the meanwhile his countrymen will be strangely forgetful if they fail to pay due tribute to his memory.

NARROW ESCAPE.—On Thursday night, while the Messrs. Hurdon, of Kinardine, were shipping wheat from Molines' storehouse into the propeller East, Rich. Keyworth sportively jumped into the bin as the wheat was escaping through a pipe into the cars in the store below, when one of his feet was drawn into, and wedged fast in the pipe, whereupon he was in a few seconds completely covered with the grain. He remained in that situation about fifteen minutes before he could be extricated; when he became unconscious, and it was feared for a time that life was extinct. Drs. Secord and Johnston are doing all that is possible for the unfortunate sufferer, who still lies in a precarious condition.
