Health of Animals Is Not the Essential Point According To Statements Made Before Royal Commission - Govt. Control Resulted in Temporary Shortage of Livestock.

LONDON, May 30.—(By Canadian Associated Press.)—The royal commission appointed by the Government to inquire into the embargo on imported cattle met today, under the chairmanship of Lord Findlay. The first witness was Sir Daniel Hall, chief scientific adviser to the ministry of agriculture. He said there seemed some confusion of thought regarding the pledge alleged to have been made by Lord Ernle and Right Hon. Walter Hume Long on behalf of the Government on one occasion that at the end of the war steps would be taken to remove the embargo on ing of the minutes of the imperial con-ference of 1917, together with statements subsequently made in the Houses of Lords and Commons. What Lord Ernle understood himself to have said that he had nothing to say against health of the Canadian stock, and that the embargo on that score should no longer be applied, but the question would have to be discussed on the basis of domestic policy with regard to the oduction of live stock in this coun-

"We do not admit that such a pledge cases. It would be absolutely impossible to conduct trade on a quarantine basis, and importation would not case."

Replying to Lord Askwith, a member of the commission, the witness said that comparing the probable price of Canadian steers with those of the mother country, and after counting rall and ocean landing charges, a ten hundredweight Canadian would sell here for £34.

Sir Daniel Hall, cross-examined by counsel representing general agricul-tural interests, said that the price of British meat had largely depended on the supplies of foreign meat. This country was contributing more than half the total consumed, but importa hair the total consumed, but imported tions were so large that the price of English meat depended on the value of the imported chilled meat. He agreed that the cause of temporary shortage of live stock last year arose from government control. The inquiry then adjourned till to-
