SHERIDAN KNOWLES on the United States.

The following speech was delivered, at a meeting held in London, on Saturday week to raise a subscription towards relieving the sufferers by the fire at New York. Mr. Sheridan Knowles seconded this resolution, and with all his heart and soul subscribed to the sentiments he had just heard. Nature, the great magician of one's feelings, arose to him. The majority of the inhabitants of America were the sons of these lands; they possessed the same feelings, were actuated by the same industry, the same civility animated them, and the laws which ruled them were fundamentally the same (Cheers). They ought not they could not bear towards each other any but the kindest feelings. (Cheers.) He had been in America. He had resided there but nine months, a short period, certainly, and he visited in that time but a few of their cities, but he saw enough to make him smile at those who laughed at the Americans because they wanted coach manners, M'Adamz roads, and London built stage coaches - (great laughter and cheering.) Instead of being refreshed with the healthy plainness of a people who were guided in their habits and institutions by the principle of utility - (hear hear!) a people who attached no value to outward ostentation or pompous titles, but who rose to eminence by the simple discharge of their duties, and obtain the stations of General, Admiral, or President of their nation, all of them, the poor as well as the rich, by the simple title of citizen. That which struck him most during his sojourn in America was the total absence of pretension. He had sat at the table of their venerable President. It was the highest honor he ever enjoyed. He had said in America, and he had said so more emphatically here - (Cheers.) He sat with that uncompromising and gallant Chief of a brave nation with as much ease as at any private gentleman's table. The venerable President was utterly regardless of the pride and forms of extrinsic ceremony; never was his dignity impaired by his personal condescension. No, his intrinsic worth only exhibited itself the more it was unguarded - (Hear, hear!) With respect to the national manners of America, he (Mr. S. Knowles) would say, that a more courteous, kindly, or liberal people he never was among - (Cheers.) He did not quarrel with them as some writers did, for eating their dinners in a gallop - (Laughter.) That might, perhaps, be the case at a table d'hote, where they ate dinners of business. But they had their private houses where they could entertain, and where they could linger over their meals quite as lovingly as we do - (Laughter and cheers.) They had been blamed for being inquisitive of strangers on the subject of America, and accused of continually asking, "How do you like our country?" He saw no harm in such a national feeling, and he thought it impossible to avoid asking such questions, when he reflected on the majestic scenery which every where met the eye. He had gazed along their canals and crossed their magnificent lakes - he had mounted their glorious Alleghenies and sailed down the North River, the broad banks of which presented the finest Alpine country he had ever seen, and which it would take the life of an artist to delineate. He had travelled their railroads the shortest of which he had at the longest of four - he had seen these things, and every where he witnessed the same onward rush to improvement. How could he, then, have mingled with the millions descended with himself from a common country moved by the same feelings, glorying in the same privilege of liberty, and speaking one vernacular language, and that the language of Shakespeare - (cheers) - how could he, so identified with such a people, bring himself to ridicule the pride of those who claimed property in what he described? - (Loud cheering.) A greater enemy to this country there could not be than the man who would create enmity and disunion between two countries by detracting from the American character. The Americans generally desired that the connexion should be cemented, and why should it not be so? Our friends, our sons visited the Americans, were hospitably received, and made fortunes by them. It was gratifying that this feeling should exist, and it should be the honor and pride of the old country to meet that feeling more than half way. - (Loud cheering.)

SANTA ANNA. - After the late battle with Houston, Santa Anna, it is said, made an attempt to escape by a bridge where a strong guard had been posted by the Texian General. He offered immense bribes to be permitted to escape, but this exciting suspicion, proved fatal to his safety, the Texians being as true to their country, as were our captors of the ill-fated Andre.

COURT OF OVEN AND TERMINER. - Robinson was arraigned yesterday, charged with the murder of Ellen Jewett. His Council stated that they would probably be prepared for his trial on Thursday of next week, till which day the trial was postponed.

DEATH OF EDWARD LIVINGSTON. - We are sorry to announce the death of the Hon EDWARD LIVINGSTON, late Minister to France. Mr Livingstone died on Monday afternoon, at his seat at Red Hook, after an illness of a few hours.

The ship Tally Ho, Captain Nicholson, arrived yesterday afternoon, from Liverpool, whence she sailed on the 18th April, bringing papers to that date, which, however, do not contain any news of importance.

AN AMERICAN POPE. - Cardinal Cheverus, formerly Bishop Cheverus, of Boston, it is said will probably be chosen Pope on the death of the present incumbent of the Petal-Chair.

THOUGHT SUGGESTED BY THE NEW YEAR.

BY THOMAS CAMPBELL.

The more we live, more brief appear
Our life's succeeding stages:
A day to childhood seems a year,
And years like passing ages.

The gladsome current of our youth,
Ere passion yet disorders,
Seals'ling'ring, like a river smooth
Along its grassy borders.

But, as the care-worn cheek grows wax,
And sorrows shafts fly thicker,
Ye stars that measure life to man!
Why seem your courses quicker?

When joys have lost their bloom and breath,
And life itself is rapid,
Why, as we reach the Falls of Death,
Feel we its tide more rapid?

It may be strange - yet who would change
Time's course to slower speeding?
When one by one our friends have gone,
And left our bosoms bleeding.

Heaven gives our years of fading strength
Indemnifying fitness;
And those of youth, a seeming length
Proportioned to their sweetness.

A PASSENGER.

On board the "Royal Tar,"
May 30, 1836.

LATE AND IMPORTANT FROM THE SOUTH.

Confirmation of the hostile and murderous movements of the Creek Indians - and also of the capture of Gen. Meno Jina and his Army.

Two drivers have this moment arrived, bringing the distressing intelligence that two stages, containing five heavy leather mails accompanied by a guard of six men, and several passengers, making in all fourteen persons, were attacked this day about noon, 18 miles from this town, by a large body of Indians, and overpowered. The drivers left the stages, and have reached town. They know nothing of the guard or the passengers. I have employed fifty friendly Indians, at an expense of $200 to go out to night and bring in the mails. They will start immediately, and by morning we shall know the fate of the mails.

On Wednesday last a white boy about 15 years of age, was shot and scalped by a party of savages, whilst ploughing in the fields. They immediately fled to the swamps leaving their victim wailing in his blood. The mother distinctly heard the cries of her child as he was expiring under the scalping knife of the savages. Col. Read in his pursuit of the foe. His unwearied enterprise and bravery, through the late disastrous campaign, are subjects of universal praise. It is the opinion of all, that if fortified posts were established, at suitable points at the head of navigation on the coast, for depots or provisions that he would put an end to the war, with 15 hundred men. Gen Scott is supposed to be safe at St. Augustine!

GENERAL ORDERS.

The hostile conduct of the Creek Indians in Alabama, on the immediate borders of Georgia, makes it proper that a sufficient permanent military force be kept up on the line of the Chattahoochee, to protect the people of this state from the tomahawk and the scalping knife. The Commander in Chief has heretofore determined to raise, by voluntary enlistment, three battalions of militia, which, together with the battalion now under the command of Major Howard, will constitute two full regiments, who will be required to serve for the space of three months on the western frontier, unless sooner discharged. These battalions must consist each of at least four companies, and each company of one captain, one first and second lieutenant, and one ensign, four sergeants, four corporals and sixty-four privates. It is desired ## the discharge of the gun, through her body, in the region of the heart.

Alas! ill fated innocence! Oh! unhappy parent! No parting kiss - no sad adieu. The imploring eyes of Mildred were turned in vain for a last sight of the approaching mother. They had lost the power of vision, and were immovably fixed forever. - Pale and expiring, her features were compressed even in the agonies of death.

What but religion could support a mother in such a scene of dismay! Fortunately, the lady has this support, and after the first paralyzing shock was over, bore her bereavement, under all its heart-rending circumstances, with Christian fortitude.

"O the depth both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!"

Will not the many accidents of this sort that occur, admonish persons to be more cautious in handling fire arms? The gun that proved fatal to the amiable and interesting young Mildred, (aged thirteen years) and of the deepest distress in the tender heart of many a friend and relation, was supposed not to be loaded - It had no priming in the pan, had been snapped repeatedly on the day of the catastrophe, and was at last accidentally discharged by a young lady.

Mrs. Womack's dream constitutes a rather singular feature in this unfortunate occurrence. She had told it before the event happened, and her spirits were evidently depressed in consequence.

But is there any thing of the marvellous in it? Who does not believe in the foreknowledge of God, and who can say how far it may consist with his will, under some circumstances, to give intimation of approaching events, to his creatures? Many instances are related of individuals feeling and expressing a strong presentiment of evil before it visits them. What instructive lessons may the reflecting mind draw from this fact.

BATTLE WITH THE FLORIDA INDIANS.
By an arrival from Tampa Bay of several of the volunteer Troops from this State last night, we learn that a serious battle was fought about twelve miles from Fort Brooke on the 27th April with the Indians. The engagement was between the Regiment of Volunteers from Tuscaloosa, principally under the command of Col. T. B. Childers, of Tuscaloosa, and as near as could be judged about four hundred Indians.

We have not learned the particulars - only that the Indians were routed with about 200 killed and wounded, and only 3 killed and 25 wounded on our side. The Indians attacked the regiment while under march and by surprise.

THE CREEK INDIANS.

Major M. confirms the statement made in yesterday's Courier, respecting the state of affairs among the Creek Nations. He passed through them on the 9th and 10th inst, thro' the upper road, which, for the present, would be the last stage that would venture through. The Indians had turned back the mail stage bound West from Columbus. The Hootahs and Hitchetoes, comprising about 1000 warriors are in arms, and have complete possession of the Federal road, and the surrounding settlements, and no doubt by this time have possession also of the upper road, which runs parallel with the old, and only about 15 miles apart.

The packet ship HENRI IV., Capt. Kearney, arrived last evening from Havre, whence she sailed the evening of the 19th April, and has brought about 300,000 dollars in gold, part of the French Indemnity.

Paris, April 15. - The Messenger mentions the following report as being current, but does not undertake to guarantee its authenticity: - "It is said that the English Government has just address'd to the President of the Council of France, through the medium of Lord Granville, a note destined for Don Carlos, and for which the approbation of M. Thiers was asked. The tenor of the note was to this effect: 'It is absolute necessary that the civil war, which is now desolating Spain, should have a termination; and the best method of attaining this end is the return within a month of Your Royal Highness to England or France. A position worthy of your high birth will be given you there but in case of your refusal, the Allied Powers are ready to use all the means in their power to force your Royal Highness to submit to the law of necessity.' It is not said whether M. Thiers has yet made known his intentions to the Ambassador."

The Messenger has the following: - "It appears that the applications of the Ambassadors of Spain, England and Portugal, to M. Thiers for an intervention have been so urgent, that a decision of this important question cannot be any longer deferred. It is even added that at the meeting of the Council held on Tuesday, the President, who has hitherto been decidedly against this measure supported it with all the energy with which he formerly opposed it. But his vacillating convictions were not, it is said, participated in by several of his colleagues, who on the ## contrary argued forcibly against him. Nothing seems to be determined upon, but this division in the Cabinet on a question so important gives rise to an idea that it may not be long before the Ministry of February 22 is modified."

ANACONDA. - People have various opinions as to the expediency of employing a physician in cases of sickness. Among those who think it best generally to employ one, not a few think it best to mix their own judgment with his prescriptions, instead of following the latter explicitly - a course in most cases extremely dangerous, and we suspect more frequently fatal than most people imagine. The following case just related to us by a friend acquainted with the fact, as in point. - Some years since a physician was called to a young woman, very sick - after a careful examination, he left her two kinds of powders to be given her alternately. One of the powders contained opium, and when administered, produced quiet to the patient. The next powder was somewhat nauseating, and the patient was less quiet under its operation. A convention of the women in the neighborhood was held, and addressed by one of their number in this wise: - "You see just how it is - the doctor must have a living, and must get it by his trade - one kind of powder makes her better the other makes her worse. If he gave her only the bad kind, he would soon kill her, and the good would soon cure her, so that in either case he would have but a small bill - that is why he gives her two kinds. Now let us act according to common sense, in disregard of the doctor's orders, whose interest it is to keep her along, let us give her only the good powder. This proposition was well received, and after an amendment at the suggestion of another, who proposed giving two of the good powders at a time, was adopted. The patient was easy and slept quietly under the operation, but she never awoke. - Banger Adv.

THE ROSE OF SHARON. - Two hours beyond the road verges from the shore, and enters the rich pasture-land of the valley of Sharon, clothed with fresh verdure as far as the eyes can reach. The white-clover springs spontaneously, and among the variety of shrubs and flowers, were a few dwarf tulips. I observed nothing bearing the appearance of what we call a rose; and, unless the "rose of Sharon," is the cistus reclus of Linnaeus, which grows abundantly, I knew not what it may be. This tract of land, glorious as it is to the eye, is yet deficient in water in its central part; and, for this reason, appears not to be frequented even by the Arabs; I traversed it for hours without noticing a single tent. The grass and the flowers spring to waste their sweetness, and to fall unseen; and the storks, striding to and fro are the only animals by which they are visited. The soil is light and the surface elastic; and the uneven foreground swells into Hills to the east, which are backed by the mountains of Samaria beyond. I could not help thinking how many a Liecestershire gentleman would cast a covetous eye over this country; would mark it out with posts and rails, root up the cistus, and plant a little gorse. - Menroe's Summer Rambles in Syria.

POTATOES, planted at one foot deep, produce shoots at the end of the spring; at two feet, not till the middle of the summer; at three feet, there roots were very short, and did not come to the surface; below three feet they never vegetated. Several were buried in a garden at three and a half feet, and after two years were found without any germination, but with their original freshness, firmness, and proper taste.

DISASTER ON LAKE ONTARIO. - By the Rochester Daily Democrat we learn, that the steamboat United States, Capt. Van Cleave, on her upward passage on Wednesday last, had between 500 and 600 passengers - a large portion of whom landed at the port of Rochester. At the lower end of the Lake, this steamboat was run foul of at night by the British schr. Eliza Ann, of Whitby, Canada, which schooner sunk in a few minutes, having on board 1,350 bushels Canadian wheat. Crew saved.

From the Globe of May.

We imagine that the quantity of labour performed at the public offices in this city, during a session of Congress, is not generally known through the country. We have been furnished with the following statement of a portion of the business of the War Department, which places this matter in a striking light.

During the present session of Congress, embracing about five and a half months, there have been received at the War Department, including its Bureau, 5,057 written applications for information from the two Houses of Congress, the committee and members, exclusive of the correspondence with the offices of the government with private citizens through the country.

All these applications led to investigations more or less extensive, and many of them require great labour, and employ a number of clerks, and much time.
