SKATING RENK COLLAPSED.

The roof of the big skating rink at Picton, Ontario, fell in on Saturday afternoon, owing to the weight of BARRISTER & NOTARY PUBLIC snow, Forty children were playing hockey at the time. The caretaker heard the rending of timbers, and ran in and gave warning. The children fled from the ice, but before they could get outside, the roof came down with a deafening crash and the air was filled with an avalanche of snow. The children escaped unhurt, as the ends of the building stood firm, and they had asembled there. The caretaker, however, was pinned under the timbers, but was subsequently released, not serious-
