

Some valuable progress has been made. Much, however, remains to be done. Let me assure you that high among Canada's international objectives is the determination to take every opportunity to further strengthen and increase the machinery for keeping the peace among the nations of the world. I have no doubt that some day in the future the symbol of the international policeman will bring to mind those same reassuring thoughts of integrity and certainty of established law and order which we now associate with the individual policeman on his beat in the towns and cities of Ontario.
