

Canada is entirely deserving of the highest consideration and I fully understand the difficulties of its position in the matter of the formation of the English Speaking Union in Canada, which might be misunderstood and produce more harmful results that would more than offset any advantage that might come from bringing the English speaking people closer together. You will see, therefore, that I quite agree with you as to the importance of devoting the most careful thought to the subject and of not taking any steps until the matter can be fully considered.

Sincerely yours,

Albert J. Isaacs.
