Dr. W. P. Percival,
Director of Protestant Education,
Quebec. P. Q.

My dear Dr. Percival,

There came to see me yesterday a Mr. Morrison who is, I believe anxious to resume teaching in the Province of Quebec, and who has written to you about this. He probably has given you full information of what he has done since graduating from this University as Bachelor of Arts in 1913. I can only tell you a little more definitely the kind of man he is.

He gave up his post-graduate work at the University of Wisconsin to go to War, where he had a highly creditable service with the Canadian Artillery. He married a young woman from Victoria, B.C. whom I knew; she, unfortunately died about five or six years and I think I know the second Mrs. Morrison. His sister is the wife of my Professor Corbett, Dean of the Faculty of Law. The family is, all through, of the best type, and I think Mr. Morrison is just the kind of man who would make a first-class high school teacher.
