

WILLS ENGLISH : PILLS

For indigestion of the Stomach.

One of the commonest maladies of the day is indigestion of the stomach. Thousands suffer from it, and consider it one of the simple ailments of life. Let us assure such people that no malady is more dangerous if allowed to run on unchecked.

The stomach and bowels are intimately connected and are a part of one canal through which the food enters and passes away. Indigestion affects both the stomach and bowels; both suffer severely from the same symptoms. It can be said with truth that the stomach and bowels regulate the health of the human body. A weak, inactive stomach means poor digestive power, and a difficulty of passing chyme and other portions of the food into the intestines.

A constipated condition of the bowels is felt at once by the stomach in many ways. The bowels should be well cleaned—flushed out, in the same way as we would clean a choked and clogged sewer. All accumulations of putrid matter should be got rid of, so that the entire digestive machinery may work with order and harmony.

This great work is accomplished by using Wills' English Pills at the right time. They are prepared specially for this great work of cleansing, toning and strengthening, and never fail to do the work well. Physicians and others who have had an experience with Wills' English Pills strongly recommend them, and say they are the best family pill ever used.

WILLS' ENGLISH

AN AUXILIARY TO

Paine's Celery Compound

Experience has proved the great English Pills in connection with the nerve medicine, Paine's Celery Compound, to be the most certain stages of troubles, which have troubled the complicated nerve system, Wills' English Pills have been found valuable auxiliaries and the great Compound is used.

In certain forms of nervous troubles, women suffer terribly from constipation. Paine's Celery Compound of itself possesses powers sufficient for ordinary cases of constipation; yet it often happens that for something more powerful—a true cathartic action on the bowels is prompt, positive and permanent—a pill that surely and certainly cleanses the system a hardened and clogged mass of putrid matter.

As an agent for this work, Wills' English Pills are unsurpassed in action; and the medicine is used in England and the United States have the head of all cathartic remedies.

After these pills have done their great work, then that Paine's Celery Compound should be used, its sufficient powers as a nerve, bone and flesh tonic, giving continued health, robustness, energy and vigor.

These two wonderful agents are always to be used together harmoniously for one common purpose—health—should be found in every home where they are valued.