

garden, and made him pay him some money. At last the whole school rose against him, and Johnny, in particular, put Nap down, and, with Mrs. Europa's consent, turned him out of school. Now it was a bad feature of Louis' character that he was always setting up this bad boy, Nap, as his pattern, praising him, and professing great admiration of him. This style of proceeding caused Johnny apprehension, who did not want to have all the trouble of Nap repeated again; and none of the monitors really trusted Louis; they each had a hole in their arbours, through which to watch him, and whenever they went about they kept one eye on him to see what he was up to. This was the case with one small boy especially, who was always in a fright lest Louis should come and seize his pretty garden, which was famous for Brussels sprouts.

Johnny, in particular, did not like
