"The Luck of the Navy" is by Mrs. Clifford Mills and is a parsubmerging, and another spectacular effect showing the British fleet in action at night and the destruction of a German zeppelin over the North Sea. These initial scenes lay the foundation for the subsequent dramatic action in the drawing-room of an English home, where all sorts of exciting things hap-pen in an effort to trap the young British lieutenant who is in command of the submarine. There are a host of minor villains, even the waiters and the parlor maids turning out to be in the pay of the kaiser.
