fact that no less than 11 Ministers sat out the whole of it. The Ministers were istreading to the personal attacks willfrid Laurier, Sir Louis Davies, Sir Henri Joly, Messrs. Sifton, Mulock, Fielding, Paterson, Fisher, Borden, Tarte and Dobell. Solicitor-General Fitzpatrick also sat it out. It was a noticeable feature of the speech that it was listened to with attention and decorum by all the Ministers, with the exception of Mr. Sifton, and all the supporters of the Government, except Rev. Mr. Maxwell, who rudely interrupted by calling out: "Tommy rot!" and was severely called down by Sir Hibbert, on account of his connection with the lease of Deadman's Island. The charges as formulated made a most formidable indictment, and will constitute a case which the Government will be obliged to investigate either by granting the Royal Commission asked for by Sir Hibbert, or by a Parliamentary enquiry.

Inothing left him to fall back on but a display of temper. Sir Hibbert con the personal attacks made by the Premier on the leader of the Counting freely from the official debates of the Nova Scotia Legislation in 1855 and other documents, to show that William was altogether inacqurate in the historical portion of his speech. In and commerce (Sir Richard Cartwight) and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Sir Louis Davies), to show that they did hold the same opinion as the leader of the Government about the leader of the Government about the leader of the Government, he quoted from speeches made by the Premier on the leader of the Government, to show that they did hold the same opinion as the leader of the Government about the leader of the Government, he quoted from speeches made by the Premier on the leader of the Government, and they make the Historical portion of his speech. Sir C. H. Tupper on the Debate.

Sir Hibbert Tupper, in resuming the debate on the address, in reply to the Speech from the Throne, said that the leader of the Government had long been accustomed to indulge in Indefinite statements, but now he was in office he had tried to become definite and he had not been successful. The leader of the Government had apparently been hit hard in the early part of the debate and had shown it in his reply to the strong criticisms of the leader of the Opposition, and the violence of language he had been forced to indulge in because he could not answer the arguments adduced.

Stricted reciprocity," but that, having proclaimed to the United States at the outset facilitied to the United States at the outset find he subsequently restricted the offer. In those old days, "I tell you," was enough for the Liberal leader, but now with his long record of repudiation, he uses such expressions as "So help me God," "God knows," "Upon my honor," etc. [Laughter,] Touching on the Washington conference, he said that the Canadian Commission were unsuccessful because they were confronted with their own utternaces, while in Opposition and the record of the Liberal party.

Ottawa, March 30.—(Special.)—For nearly six hours this afternoon and evening Sir Hibbert Tupper held the attention of a rather slim, but appreciative House, while he made a series of most serious charges of gross corruption, incompetency and immorality against the officials first sent into the Yukon, and against the administration of that territory by the Minister of the Interior. The arraignment was the most severe one which could be made, and that

Charges Must Be Investigated—
People Will Demand It.

Ottawa, March 20.—(Special.)—On the opening of the House to-day Sir Charles Tupper asked whether the leader of the Government could give any further information about the Auditor-General's report.

A Question of Veracity.

Charles Tupper had stated in an interview published in The London Daily News, that Great Britain would never denounce the dark and produced a copy of the interview to show that no such statement was ever made. Reading from a book containing Sir. Wilfrid Laurier's specifes from 1871 to 1889, Sir Hibbert quoted when in 1888, replying to the late Hon. Thomas White's denunciation of unrestricted reciprocity as disloyal Sir Wilfrid Laurier said he was informed by the Auditor-General that his report was all in the hands of the printer with the exception of the portions relating to Mounted Police and Trade and Commerce, and he hoped to have it distributed next Wednesday.

lusions were made from speeches of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in which such expressions were used as that the pelagic sealing was an industry of the past. Of course it happened that in that very year, 1874, the catch was the largest on record, but how awkward it must have been for the commission to have to disprove their own views at every turn, and it explained why everything was botched and bungled as it was.

He would go into a saloon and tell the keeper (that he had been assessed so much for the hospital and that if he did not pay it lifs Heense would be canceiled and his place closed. He hoped Mr. Wade would come to Ottawa so that he may meet this and other charges.

A Scandalous Mail Service.

Continuing, he said that the postal service into the Yukon had ben scandalous and tons of mail matter were piled up at Lake Bernett.

Hon. Mr. Mulock denied there was anything wrong with the mail service, and that mails should be sent out and received regularly.

Sir Hibbert maintained the will be, which was investigated before the Minister of the interior not long ago, in which Major Walsh and Lucille Elliott figured.

Sir Hibbert maintained that he knew better as he had a law partner in Dawson and could not either get letters to him or receive letters from him. After some little cross-firing Sir Hibbert was handed an envelope addressed to A. Martin, M.P., mailed in Glenora on 1st Dec., 1898, and was only received in Ottawa on 1st March. The envelope had the postmarks on it, and this clesed the incident as the Postmaster-General had no more to say.
