WHAT THE MOTOR CAR
HAS DONE FOR THE
RUBBER INDUSTRY

We must give the bicycle credit for the start of the rubber tire industry. It was the bicycle and "saucy" people who first applied air-filled rubber tires to actual road conditions. But even when the vogue of bicycling was at its height the rubber tire business could scarcely be classed as a great industry.

It was not until the possibilities of gasoline as an automobile power were realized, that the pneumatic tire became a real factor in our industrial life. As the motor car developed, the rubber tire industry grew and prospered. It was the "cushion" of the motor car that gave it the speed and comfort that made it so popular.

Then came the discovery that gasoline was not only a power but also a fuel. This led to the development of the "hot air" engine, which was adapted to big loads and straightaway. The rubber tire industry has been a wonderful upward leap. Again they tried to find a substitute for rubber. They tried to use other materials, but they found that rubber was the only material that was suitable for the "cushion" of the motor car.
