AT THE THEATRES

Royal Alexandra

Blanche Bates in "The Fighting Hope"

Whatever criticism might be offered regarding the construction and dramatic quality of "The Fighting Hope," last night's performance at the Royal Alexandra left no scintilla of doubt as to its gripping power. Described as an American play of to-day by William J. Hurlbut, it deals with phases of the commercial situation in the United States, which are tolerably familiar to all readers of the daily papers. But the play does not derive its interest from the exposure of the devious methods of either the newly rich, or those hasting to be rich, but from the entirely human character of the story as it affects the principal characters.

These are naturally two—the man and the woman—both round them is woven a thread which, without involving anything in the nature of a problem play, yet closely touches universal experience. It turns on the devotion of a wife and mother who thinks her husband is dead, and the father of her children has been made unjustly the scapegoat for the sins of the men in authority. She becomes his private and confidential secretary in the hope of discovering the proof of his guilt. Instead she finds her husband has been justly condemned and that the man who was her youthful ideal has not only been justified, but has won her real love. This involves many intense situations arising from the conflict between maternal love and her sense of duty. Swayed now to one side, now to the other, and subjected to personal appeal from the husband who has escaped from prison, attempts to play upon her dearest sensibilities, but who she at last realizes to be utterly base and worthless, the Gordian knot is at last cut by his death at the hands of the guards, seeking to secure his recapture.

Miss Blanche Bates as the heroine has a role that calls for interpretation of a wide range of emotional situations, and it is a tribute to the quality of her art that she was at all times not only suggestive but satisfying. Without exaggeration, but on that account all the more powerful, Miss Bates easily commanded the large audience, who followed her impersonation with an interest that remained unbroken. She received excellent support from a small but very efficient company of players, including Woodrow Nowell as Bob, Grand and Miss Loretta Wells as Mrs. Mason made the most of these subordinate parts. There is no change of scene and as the action of the play is continuous, attention is retained throughout. "The Fighting Hope" is a good production of its class and ought to repeat in Toronto the success it has achieved in the United States. There will be two matinees on Thursday and Saturday.

Princess

Three Twins.

Mayne Gehrue and Clifton Crawford would make the fortune of any show, and with the collection of ingenious novelties, and the screaming funny book, and the excellent support accorded the principals in "Charles Dickens" and "The Twins," at the Princess last night, there was nothing for the audience to do but resign themselves to the absolute enjoyment of the greatest success of the season in musical farce. Since the days of Shakespeare the humor of mistaken identity has served to put audiences into convulsions. Last night the house, which was crowded to the doors, simply laughed itself into exhaustion in the first act, and if the curtain had not given a chance for recuperation, the funny things to follow would have made the audience faint.

The White Plague Tuberculosis

WILSON'S INVALIDS' PORT

his droll shafts are aimed at the Washington City type of politician rather than the Canadian, but that rather adds to their interest. The Azard Brothers, as sensational equilibrist and rapid fire gymnasts, furnish examples of a fine type of physical culture. The well balanced bill was rounded off by a series of excellent views.

Shea's

Eleanor Gordon & Co. with Jos. Sullivan have as funny a sketch at Shea's this week as is coming around in vaudeville. "The Tape" is the name of the novel which has to do with racing information and domestic ambition. It is one long loud howl from start to finish. Willard Simms is back with his rolls of manuscript and his pail of paste and trouble. His act was always a scream of merriment.

Marie Fenton sings songs with piano accompaniment. They are bright and Marie certainly wears some clothes. The Aerial Smiths have one of those flying trapeze sort of acts which hold you breath and wonder why anyone should take such chances. The Three Dolce Sisters have a very dainty and prettily dressed singing act in Toronto for many seasons. It is presented under the title of the Fashion Plates, and is a real beauty show. The girls are all handsome and well known to the audience. The show closes with Rex's Comedy Circus with punks and other aplenty. This is one of the most elaborate animal acts in the business and gets the kiddies, who are never forgotten on a Shea bill.

Star

An Exceptional Burlesque Show.

The attraction at the Star this week is the burlesque show, which has been seen in Toronto for many seasons. It is presented under the title of the Fashion Plates, and is a real beauty show. The girls are all handsome and well known to the audience. The show closes with Rex's Comedy Circus with punks and other aplenty. This is one of the most elaborate animal acts in the business and gets the kiddies, who are never forgotten on a Shea bill.

Charley Grapewin is as funny as ever in his new comedy, "Above the Limit," which made its first local appearance at the Grand last night, and charming Anna Chance aids and abets him. The audience that taxed the comedian's wit was kept in a continuous merry mood during the entire show.

Mr. Grapewin is one of those peculiar fellows who, in the presence of the stage, loses a laugh, no matter what his lines may be. The vehicle isn't essential—it's the man. In the role of Jimmy Hicks, race-track follower, he makes everybody pleased. His droll mannerisms, the quaint way of expressing himself, and his contagious chuckle put his audience at ease.

The plot of the play is worked out well. Jimmy Hicks, who has graduated from a street waif to a prize fighter, finds his way to the imposing home of Mr. Williamson, a manufacturer. He becomes "stuck" on the place, as he remarks. Mrs. Williamson's niece also captivates him. A truthful husband, and a lover of beautiful women, is the star comedian in an extremely laughable farce. "A Night at Brighton Beach," the burlesque on the play "The Sign of the Cross," is a very funny thing, turning up at the wrong time, spoils the sport of two jolly husbands on an evening's fun.

As for the play, it is chuck full of interesting features.

CANADA A GOOD MARKET FOR BRITISH INVESTORS

Sir Edward Speyer, Bart., Predicts

Glowing Future for This Country.

"That Canada is bound to make great strides during the past year of prosperity, without saying provided she realizes the paramount necessity of only offering such securities in the home market as are absolutely good, and as long as the old country will remember that credit is confidence and that both are delicate plants, which one cold blast might destroy."

With this note of warning the Right Hon. Sir Edward Speyer concluded an instructive and inspiring address to the Canadian Club yesterday noon. Sir Edward gave out as his subject "British Finance and the Export of Capital."

He began by referring to the recent election, stating that the budget was the most important financial question affecting business men and investors.

He pointed out that the "public becomes frightened, not by what is really happening, but by what the politicians say is happening."

A great deal has been said, remarked Sir Edward, about the unpopularity of home investments and the export of capital. Home investments, he said, were an expensive article, and compared with foreign investments relatively too high. Great Britain still enjoyed the highest credit in Europe—in fact in the world. Consols were still on a 3 per cent. basis. It was an adequate rate taking everything into consideration. If the investor went in to a foreign market he could get a much better yield on an almost equal security. He got an international market with a better security in England he would have to buy registered stock with a stamp and fees to be paid.

Continuing, Sir Edward declared that the indications for 1910 were favorable for the investment of a large amount of British capital abroad—in Canada, Australia, India, South Africa and South America. These large investments, he thought, would tend to an expansion in exports, both actually and in proportion to imports. He prophesied that the empire had entered upon a period of great and wide trade activity, when buyers and sellers would be in the comfortable position of finding ready buyers.

Canada's great natural wealth and the supply of unlimited capital from the old country at preferential rates, with free markets, good prices for produce and increasing supply of labor make this country's future assured.

SALE OF OLD MASTERS

J. M. Simpson, Art Dealer, Disposing of Famous Pictures.

Charles Henderson's King-street Auction Rooms were thronged with art lovers yesterday, who came to inspect the pictures which J. M. Simpson, the well-known long-street art dealer, will offer for sale to-day at 2.30 p.m.

Nearly 150 pictures are on view, many of them being the products of old masters, eminent British and representative Canadian artists.

A splendid landscape by that master of the brush, John Constable, R.A., excited considerable attention. The magnificent cloud effect being much admired. Benjamin West's "Death of Wolfe" is another valuable gem, and concerning this painting is an interesting story.

Some time ago Mr. Simpson, while visiting a London curio dealer's shop, discovered a small blackened painting which, on examination, proved to be the original picture from which the famous artist reproduced his well-known portrait of Wolfe's death. The painting after the death of George Washington, the hands of the present Duke of Westminster.

A water color by Birket Foster, that great interpreter of the beauties of the country lane, the fields and the garden, gave a fair idea of the wonderful grasp of perspective, for which that artist was so noted, and J. Harlow White's "Waterfall in South Wales," is a vivid, realistic reproduction of what scenery.

Amongst the collection is an excellent landscape by J. Turner, R.S.A., and a figure of a child by Sir Joshua Reynolds, P.R.A.

The Venetian school is represented by F. L. V. Royhet, whose painting of the interior of a Doge's palace, is characterized by a display of beautiful coloring.

Millinery Opening

At Robert Simpson's

Speaking of hats, what is the matter with the Moorish turban, the chandelier, the Mme. Tore model and sundry other designs? Well, yesterday was the auspicious occasion on which spring styles were thrown on the market, and quite a turn-out was created in the various emporiums where such sensations are a specialty. There was also the picture hat, albeit more expensive and picturesque than ever, not to mention the new styles, the new styles and other styles that have survived a season or more.

If yesterday's crowd at the Robert Simpson millinery department was not entirely of the feminine interest in this year's creations, it is shocking to contemplate the collection of head pieces which are about due for garret decoration purposes.

The ladies in hundreds, perhaps thousands, strolled about the spacious and handsomely decorated showrooms and admired the designs and criticized with enthusiastic exactitude the shades and trimmings. The world man mixed in the throng. He must have manifested unseemly interest in the roosters, the pheasants and other game birds which nestled in the vicinity of sundry straw and floral domes. "Those are chandeliers, but are you the farm editor or the sportsman?" questioned the man in charge, who had just returned from Paris and was conducting the reporter thru the maze of finery.

He then launched into an impromptu lecture on the wonders of the hat, as a thing of beauty and a joy for a season. The world man escaped finally with three ideas still intact. Here they are: Hats are bigger, bigger, bigger than ever. Paris creations in the finished stage are on sale at Simpson's as well as original designs made up of the startling features of several Parisian models. Lastly, if the hat-hunters of Toronto divest that 12,000 feet of floor space of the creations so attractively displayed, they will, in the words of the classics, have to "go home."

The defendants, he claimed, sold one share. Then the company allotted him three shares at $125. The stock dropped from 167 to 97. Judgment will be given to-day in the case.

A LARGE EXPENDITURE FOR NEW TRUNK ROADS

Provincial Treasurer Brings Down Additional Estimates—$125,000 for New Government House.

Over half of the additional supplementary estimates for the year ending Oct. 31, 1910, amounting to $804,584.14, which were presented by Hon. Col. Matheson in the legislature yesterday afternoon, were for colonization roads, for which no provision was made in the main supplementary estimates. The total expenditure under this head is $464,556.99. The largest item is an appropriation of $60,000 for new trunk roads. In addition to this sum, $30,000 is asked for the Sudbury-Sault Ste. Marie road, $25,000 for the Elk Lake to Gowganda road, $20,000 for the Charlton to Elk Lake road, and $5000 for drainage on Rainy River roads. Inspection and incidental expenses in connection with trunk roads is set at $15,000. The purchase of road making machinery will cost the province $5000. Individual expenditures in the Timiskaming district are South Lake road $5000, Mountain Chute to Elk Lake road $2000, Charlton and Englehart road $1000, Larder Lake road $1000.

Included in the estimates for the public works department are $20,000 for the Dog Lake dam near Port William, and $1315 for improving the Lake Shore road adjoining the Mimico Asylum.

For New Government House.

The sum of $125,000 is set aside for the purchase of new grounds for government house and for plans and buildings.

For fire protection to the parliamentary buildings, enlarging water mains, hydrants, etc., $4000 is appropriated. Other public buildings throughout the province are to have fire protection provided or improved.

Electric plants for the London Insane Asylum will cost $25,000, for the Hamilton Asylum $12,000, and for the Ontario Agricultural College $15,000.

An appropriation of $50,000 is made for addition to the centre building of Osgoode Hall.

For the erection of a cold storage building at the Eastern Dairy School $3000 is appropriated.

"Blind Pig" Pen.

"Blind pig" pen, officially designated as lockups, are provided for at Cochrane and Charlton at an expenditure of $1000 and $500 respectively.

For the salary (eight months) of a police magistrate at Superior Junction on the G.T.P. $200 is set aside. New Liskeard Hospital gets a grant of $1000; the Red Cross Hospital, Cobalt, $2000; the Mattawa Hospital $1000, and the Sudbury Hospital $1000.

For advances to assist in paying the passage of domestic servants from the old country the sum of $10,000 is appropriated.

Increases of salary are scheduled in a number of the departmental offices and public institutions. The salary justly by the minister of agriculture is increased by $350.

A vote of $4000 was passed for a gratuity to the widow of a late Trooper, Hodges, master-in-ordinary.

For experimental treatment of ore and collections of minerals at the parliament buildings, etc., $3550 was appropriated.

Sir James Whitney explained to the house in connection with the appropriation of $10,000 for assisting the passage of domestic servants, that the government expected to get at least three-fourths of this back. In reply to the strictures of Allan Studholme (E. Hamilton), he declared that the country districts were suffering fully more than the cities and towns from the scarcity of domestic help.

Hon. A. J. Matheson made a statement to the house regarding the $25,000 loan. Almost all was taken up, with the exception of about $20,000.

The Great Bread Question.

W. K. McNaught (North Toronto), in moving the second reading of his bill respecting the manufacture and sale of bread, said he hoped the question would be settled for good, as yearly changes disturbed trade.

W. F. Nickle (Kingston) said he was convinced of the necessity of a provincial standard of weight. Toronto bakers were now shipping all over the country. He decided objected to allowing a contract between consumer and baker for bread of any weight. The result stamped "Good for one loaf." This might be argued as an implied contract to take what weight loaf the baker chose to supply.

Consideration for Smaller Towns.

Mr. McNaught also made provision only for inspection at the bake shop. Outside municipalities would thus be deprived of all power of inspection.

"I fail to see," said Mr. Nickle, "why bread should be the only commodity in which the consumer should not be legally entitled to fix the weight of delivery to him. The loaf of bread should be the same as a ton of coal, a unit of weight."

Hon. A. G. MacKay agreed with Mr. Nickle that the smaller places were entitled to participation in the inspection.

Sir James Whitney stated that he had received a considerable number of letters from people in the smaller towns. None of these favored either bill. The legislation on the subject should be uniform throughout the province.
