

If I Were A City Controller

I WOULD TRY
TO MAKE GOOD.
To get things DONE.
To give everybody A SQUARE DEAL.
To secure A DOL-LAR'S VALUE FOR A DOLLAR SPENT.
To SAVE where possible, but to SPEND where needed. To save or spend FEAR-LESSLY.
To apply my experience of ten years in commerce and fifteen in law towards the production of a BUSI-NESS ADMINIS-TRATION.

WILLIAM F. O'CONNOR, K.C., Candidate for Board of Control.

In short, I would endeavor to produce CIVIC EFFICIENCY
EFFICIENCY is merely APPLIED COMMON SENSE—the doing of the needed thing as SOON as possible, as WELL as possible, as CHEAPLY as possible—but the DOING of it because needed.
I might make specific promises, but I deliberately refrain. Instead, I promise to aim at CIVIC EFFICIENCY, which will ensure the supply of all things necessary and obtainable within the limits of civil-means. Surely this is no more than COMMON SENSE. Civic efficiency will entail such things as more lights, better police protection, and many other blessings as MORE INCIDENTS of proper city government.
CIVIC EFFICIENCY includes the institution of efficient business practices in city departments, and precision, orderliness and economy in the performance of civic tasks. It implies avoidance of topocracy and of a too hasty interference with the things that are. TIME AND CAUTION ARE REQUISITE TO EFFECT CHANGES AND TO INSTITUTE REFORMS.
A HARD TIME AHEAD
This controllership business is a new thing and an experiment. Therefore, I think that the first controllers of the City of Halifax ought carefully to guard themselves against TOO MUCH SELF CONFIDENCE.
Along with the opportunity for two years of hard, intelligent, constructive work lurks the possibility of the engulfing of some reputations in the breakdown of a new system.
I am led to anticipate election, and cannot contemplate it without considerable concern. If elected, my next two years will be occupied day in and day out with the solving of innumerable definite and unfamiliar problems, each requiring the application of clear knowledge, prompt decision and effective action. If such is to be, I shall devote to the solution of these problems the best that is in me. I class myself no higher than as AN HUMBLE APOSTLE OF THE PRINCIPLE OF THE SQUARE DEAL.

HELP WANTED

This is a cry for help. I am one of those who believe that any four of the candidates in the field would, under proper conditions, form a competent Board of Control. But official integrity, clean purpose and ability, alone are not a guarantee of efficient city government. It is necessary that to these be added the support of an INFORMED, ALERT, EXACTING CITIZENSHIP, and the sympathy of a WELL-CONDUCTED PRESS.
The citizen is sovereign.
For that reason, I believe in co-operation between the civic governing body and citizen associations in all efforts for the promotion of commerce, social improvement and public spirit; yet I conceive that in case of conflict of opinion the CIVIC GOVERNORS must decide what is the real popular will and DAUNT-LESSLY ACT UPON IT.

THE PUBLIC'S RIGHTS

I believe that the public is entitled to full knowledge of all the activities of the various city departments, and that citizens should be ENCOURAGED TO MAKE ENQUIRIES, submit complaints, and propose improvements in the public service, with THE ASSURANCE OF QUICK, INTELLIGENT AND EFFECTIVE ATTENTION. I think that the civic government should issue frequent, brief and understandable reports. I am sure that among the results would be a much needed quickening of interest in civic affairs.

A WORD OF THANKS

This is the last word I shall have with the electors during the present campaign. I make the occasion one for sincerely thanking a host of friends who have assisted me throughout, the couple of thousand electors whose names appear upon my nomination paper, and the many others who have promised me support.
I APPRAISE TO ALL RATEPAYERS, WHETHER FOR OR AGAINST ME, NOT TO NEGLECT THE EXERCISE OF THEIR FRANCHISE, BUT, IN THE INTEREST OF THIS GOOD OLD TOWN AND IN PERFORMANCE OF THEIR PLAIN DUTY AS CITIZENS, TO TURN OUT AND VOTE.

Yours very sincerely,

WILLIAM F. O'CONNOR.

To the Electors of Ward 1:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:
I have accepted the nomination of candidate for one of the Aldermen for Ward 1, and I take this means of requesting your votes and support, and of thanking those who honored me with the nomination.

HEDLEY V. WIER, For Alderman in Ward 1.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:
I am a candidate for one of the aldermanic seats in Ward One.
I am not backed by any party organization, nor am I fettered in any way whatever to influences opposed to the best interests of the City. I stand for a progressive, farsighted and aggressive policy, in respect of all civic matters, and if elected, I intend discharging my duties to the best of my ability.
As the time between now and election day is brief, it will be impossible for me to see all my friends, so I take this opportunity to urge all to be punctual when the day of voting comes and support one who will support the highest interests of the city.
May I have one of your (two) votes?

To the Electors of Ward Four:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:
At the request of a number of Ratepayers, I am offering for one of the Aldermanic vacancies.
It is to be regretted that our civic affairs have not in the past been kept more free from political pressures, and to be hoped that now where we are about to try out a new system that the Ratepayers in justice to the experiment and to their interests will support those whom they feel are best qualified to carry out the work.
If a majority of you desire to have a representative one who will stand apart from ring rule and support or oppose all questions that come up absolutely on their merits, then you can with safety give me your vote.
From past experience you will have placed your estimate on what promise made at this stage amount to. I have some idea of the many obstacles to be overcome in carrying through some of the many promises which are likely to meet, and will simply say, when I give my vote to any of you, you can depend on it that I will leave no stone unturned in the carrying out of same.
And every vote is of equal value, and also feeling that after a personal interview my chances of enlisting your support are just that much improved.
In the event of my not being able to see you all personally, I take this opportunity of asking your support, and assure you that if elected, I will spare no efforts in seeing that Ward Four's interests are done justice to.

ONE IS NOT

I fondly look the circle of
As with me at the table
My house both and wife
With laughing eyes and flowing curls
But on my lips there is a hint For one is not.
I smile a round and happy face With cheeks of red and eyes of brown.
A baby's voice is heard to sing
My house both and wife
The present times still haunt me This voice did once my heart thrill Now it is still.
The vacant place is with me yet Though many years have passed away.
And other shoes bless my feet And all my home is filled with light And small feet patter on the floor.
No more with me, but this I know My treasure is not lost to love And if the father's mission fair There shall not be one vacant chair.
There shall not be through his dear grace One missing face.

CHAPTER XVII.—(Continued.)
"I wonder if you could do what few men and fewer women are capable of," he said, as he looked at her.
"You could learn to live in the present." He lifted his head slowly and met her eyes. "This is an experiment," he said. "And like all experiments, it has good phases and bad. When the bad phases come round I—I want you to tell yourself that you are not alone in this unhappiness—that I am suffering too—and suffer with you."

"No, I haven't got the right,"
you to tell yourself that you are not alone in this unhappiness—
that I am suffering too—and suffer
with you."
There was silence when he had spoken, and for a space it seemed that they would make no response. Then the last surprise in a day's surprises came to him. With a slight start, a slight, quick rustle of skirts, she stepped forward and laid her hand on his.
"The gesture was simple and everything was said. He looked at her, and in the silence that followed, he saw the surrender of a proud woman. Loder's blood stirred, the undeniable suggestion of the moment, the thrill of discovery, the thrill of a triumph of emotion. Honor, duty, principle, rose in a triple barrier, but honor, duty and principle are words to be beaten down by a man whose will is as hard as steel. The full significance of his position came to him as he laid his hand on her. His hand rested on her, but he bent toward her, his pulses beating unusually. "You," he said, "then at the sound of my voice, you are suddenly hesitating, everything but his own existence." Then very quietly he drew away from her, releasing her hands.
"No, I haven't got the right,"
he said.

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE night had been the first time since he had adopted his dual role as Loder III. He was not a man over whom imagination held any power. He was doubts and misgivings seldom ran to speculation upon future possibilities.
Nevertheless, the fact that, consciously or unconsciously, he had adopted a new attitude toward Eve came home to him with unpleasant force during the hours of darkness and long before the first hint of daylight had slipped through the heavy window curtains he had arranged a plan of action—a plan whereby by the simple method of altogether avoiding her, he might soothe his own conscience and safeguard Chilcote's domestic interests.
It was a satisfactory, if somewhat negative arrangement, and he rose next morning with a feeling that things had begun to shape themselves. But chance sometimes has a disconcerting knack of foretelling even our best planned schemes. He dressed slowly and descended to his solitary breakfast with the pleasant sensation of having put last night out of consideration by the turning over of a new leaf. And so actually he had been open Chilcote's letters, scarcely had he taken a cursory glance at the message addressed to him, when borne in upon him that not only a new leaf, but a whole sheet of new leaves, had been turned in his prospect by a hand infinitely more powerful and arbitrary than his own. He realized within the space of a few moments that the leisure he might have claimed, the leisure he might have been tempted to devote to her, was no longer his to dispose of, being already demanded of him from a quarter that allowed of no refusal.

For the first rumbling of the political earthquakes that was to shake the country made itself audible beyond denial at that morning of March 27 when the news spread through England that the view of the disorganized state of the Persian army and the shah's consequent inability to suppress the open insurrection of the border tribes in the northeastern districts of Mesopotamia, Great danger in headachef.

with a great show of magnanimity, had come to the rescue by dispatching a large armed force from her military station at Merv across the Persian frontier to the seat of the disturbance.
To many hundreds of Englishmen who read their papers on that morning this announcement conveyed but little.
That there was a country as Persia we all know, that English interests predominate in the south and Russian interests in the north we have all superficially understood from childhood, but in this knowledge, coupled with the fact that Persia is comfortably far away, we are apt to rest content. It is only to the eyes that see through long distance glasses, the minds that regard the present as nothing more or less than an inevitable link joining the future to the past, that this distant, debatable land stands out as its true political significance.
To the average reader of news the statement of Russia's move seemed scarcely more important than had the first report of the border rising in January, but to the men who had watched the growth of the disturbance it came charged with portentous meaning. Through the entire ranks of the opposition, from Fraide himself downward, it caused a thrill of expectation that peculiar prophetic sensation that every politician has experienced at some moment of his career.
No member of his party did this feeling strike deeper root than in Loder.
Imbued with a lifelong interest in the eastern question, specially equipped by personal knowledge to hold and proclaim an opinion upon Persian affairs, he read the signs and portents with intuitive insight. Seated at Chilcote's table, surrounded by Chilcote's letters and papers, he forgot the breakfast that was slowly growing cold, forgot the interests and dangers, personal or pleasurable, of the night before, while his mental eye persistently conjured up the map of Persia, traveling with steady deliberation from Merv to Meshed, from Meshed to Teheran, from Teheran to the empire of India. For it was not the fact that the Hazaras had risen against the shah that occupied the thinking mind, nor was it the fact that Russian and not Persian troops were destined to subdue them, but the deeply important consideration that an armed Russian force had crossed the frontier and was encamped within twenty miles of Mehad-Mehad, upon which curious Russian eyes have rested ever since the days of Peter the Great.
So Loder's thoughts, as he read and reread the news from the varying political standpoints, and so they continued to run when, some hours later, an urgent telephone message from the St. George's Gazette asked him to call at Lakelley's office.
The message was interesting as well as imperative, and he made an instant response. The thought of Lakelley's keen eyes and shrewd enthusiasms always possessed strong attractions for his own slower temperament, but even had this impetus been lacking, the knowledge that at the St. George's office, where Lakelley was waiting, he would find the corner of the tall building, but already the keen spirit that Lakelley possessed was making itself felt.
Loder smiled to himself as he eyes fell on the day's placards with their uncomprehending headings and sub-headings, and with a renewed sense of anticipation and energy he passed through the doorway and ran upstairs.
Passing unobserved through the long corridor that led to Lakelley's office, he caught a fresh impression of action and vitality from the click of the tape machine in the subeditor's office, and a glimpse through the open door of the subeditors themselves, each occupied with his particular task; then without time for further observation he found himself at Lakelley's door. Without waiting to knock, as he had felt compelled to do on the one or two previous occasions that business had brought him there, he immediately turned the handle and entered the room.
Editors' offices differ but little in general effect. Lakelley's surroundings were rather more elaborate than is usual, as became the dignity of the oldest York evening paper, but the atmosphere was unmistakable. As Loder entered he glanced up from the desk at which he was sitting, but instantly returned to his task of looking through the files of copy of early editions of clippings that were spread around him.
His coat was off and hung on the chair behind him, and he pulled vigorously on a long cigar.
"Hello! That's right," he said laconically.
"Make yourself comfortable half a second, while I skim the St.
Stephens's."
His situation pleased Loder. With a nod of acquiescence he crossed the office to the brick fire that burned in the grate.
For a minute or two Lakelley worked stealthily, occasionally breaking the quiet with an unintelligible remark or a vigorous stroke of his pencil. At last he dropped the paper with a gesture of satisfaction and leaned back in his chair.
Loder turned round. "I think," he said, "that you must be over-tired."
Lakelley laughed and took a long pull at his cigar. "And we must be," he said to let the St. Stephens's know it, eh? He waved his hand to the corner of the first edition that hung on the wall.
Loder, following his glance, smiled.
