MRS. EDDY'S CASE.

The action which for some time has been before the courts over the disposition of the estate of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy is not merely an examination into the mental condition of a feeble old woman, the phase which is most apparent, but of late has been developing into a trial of the Christian Science belief. As such it promises to create wide interest and to become a bitterly fought contest. Briefly Mrs. Eddy's wealth accumulated by her writings and by other means, chiefly from adherents to that belief of which she is regarded as the founder, was for many years administered personally. But advancing age rendered this impracticable and the estate has for some time been in the hands of trustees. Mrs. Eddy has publicly intimated that her entire fortune, amounting to millions of dollars and still rapidly increasing is to be given to Christian Science, that no part of it be bequeathed to relatives, for she could not be a consistent leader and leave her money to persons other than those who are instructed to administer it in the interests of the denomination. This is not wholly agreeable to Mrs. Eddy's son, George W. Glover, and other relatives, who naturally do not desire to see the millions slip through their fingers. They, accordingly, brought action as next friends, claiming among other things that Mrs. Eddy is not in a condition to manage her estate or to direct its management, that she is self-appointed, or that if chosen by Mrs. Eddy she was not at the time in a proper state mentally, to make a wise selection. The question resolved itself into when Mrs. Eddy mentally sound when she made the appointment, and if she is now afflicted have the trustees any right to remain in office? The first part of this question opened up a wide range of argument, the contention of the "next friends" is that at no time has Mrs. Eddy been wholly sane. This was supported by the argument that from the beginning of her career Mrs. Eddy has been mentally afflicted. The Christian Science doctrines propounded by her, that the supposedly material universe is an imaginative delusion, that man has no substance and that disease is mental rather than physical could not, it was claimed emanate from a healthy brain. Hence from the time when she first preached her religion Mrs. Eddy, according to her relatives, has been of unsound mind. This declaration was an open defiance of the whole Christian Science belief; the denomination was placed on trial, and by opening up such a range of counsel for the next friends prepared for themselves a stupendous task. Mrs. Eddy's fortune is the prize, and it is large enough to warrant a hard fight, but the opposing counsel have evidently come to the conclusion that the task is too great, and have applied for dismissal. As yet there has been no report from the court officials as to Mrs. Eddy's mental condition and the plaintiffs in the present case by withdrawing reserve the right to enter action in the future along a different line.

KEEP AT IT.

In every public or private undertaking it is the follow-up policy that brings success. The platform must of course be carefully planned, but no matter how substantial it is, the desired results cannot be achieved unless those who profess an interest bend their energies to the work. Hence all these academic and economic discussions by the maritime board of trade and other bodies unless the resolutions are supported by active committee work. No one in authority pays any attention to resolutions. They are passed chiefly for the purpose of obtaining expressions of opinion from representative assemblies, but when those who are responsible go to the trouble of backing their ideas by well directed and continued effort, the powers that be are compelled to sit up and take notice. The Maritime Board of Trade yesterday expressed itself on several of the most important questions now confronting the people of Canada. Technical education on some general system suited to the needs of the provinces is a subject to which too much thought cannot be given. While it is well to know that such a body as the board of trade, representative of the industrial and commercial interests of eastern Canada heartily endorses this proposal, it would be of far greater benefit to learn that this same body contemplates active effort looking towards the introduction of the system.

The same is true when applied to the other matters under discussion, the pulpwood industry, railroad affairs and all those subjects touched upon. The follow-up policy is what brings results.

CALL OF THE ENGLISH TONGUE.

The following verses were written for the Victoria Colonist by Harold Begbie, a member of the staff of the Daily Chronicle, London. Mr. Begbie is with the visiting British journalists:—

So good to the ears of the wind and sea
Was the speech which our fathers used
That its notes with the farthest breeze
Were mixed, with the uttermost tide were fused.
And better than sight of Britain's flag
From a thousand nations hung
Is the sound in the gates on her quay-linked coasts of the conquering English tongue.

For many a year, on many a sea,
In many an alien land,
Wherever the need of a fearless brain
And a happening hefty hand,
Valley and mountain, prairie and plain,
Forest and shore have rung
With the pluck which mounts in our British blood and sings in the English tongue.

The Mother may chide with the Daughter Lands, and the Daughter Lands rebel But peace shall be made in the golden speech that Shakespeare used as a spell.
And the strife shall be who can hold
The song that our race has sung
Since it learned to quarrel and fight
And build and love in the English tongue.

Surely it is to this English song that India's morning breaks,
Surely it is to this English song that
The East and West are linked
And the strife shall be who can hold
The song that our race has sung
Since it learned to quarrel and fight
And build and love in the English tongue.

We shall go down to the great white dead, down from the light of the sun
When our wives have kissed us Our last good-night and our work for the weans is done,
But forever our souls shall hear the song of a nation with three strung.

Who march to the God of the English heart, to the hymn of the English tongue.

PLATE GLASS.
The first plate glass was made in 1688 at St. Peter, France, where the process was found out by accident.

THE WORLD'S WATER.
The surface of the sea is estimated at 150,000,000 square miles, taking the whole surface of the globe at 197,000,000, and its greatest depth supposedly the height of the highest mountain, or, four miles.

HIGHEST AVERAGE OF LIFE.
Statistics show that the highest average of life is found among agricultural workers.

FREE LANCES.
After the crusades a great many knights and their esquires found themselves out of employment. Wandering from state to state, selling their services to any lord who was willing to pay them their price, they were given the very appropriate name of "free lances"—men who were at liberty to fight for any one who wanted them.

LAKE ISLANDS.
Lake Huron contains 3,000 islands.
Loch Erne, in Ireland, has 365. The Lake of the Thousand Isles is only an expansion of the St. Lawrence River and has 1,700.

AIR CLEANSING PAINTINGS.
In some of the European art galleries the dust is removed from the paintings and statuary by means of an air pump, a jet of air being thrown with great force against the article which needs dusting.

Two men were out, the bases were full, and the pinch hitter of the team was at bat.
The umpire had called three balls
and two strikes.
The excitement was intense, but too dear for words, when the pinch hitter began to wind himself up, preparatory to delivering the ball, the silence was painful.

It was broken by a loud, penetrating voice in the grand stand.
"Ladies and gentlemen," exclaimed the voice, "who wants another bag of this justly celebrated popcorn?"

Charles M. Schwab, speaking of forgotten fame, said:
"I am reminded of a story about Westminster Abbey.
"An antiquary one day visited the abbey and found a stonecutter at work in the little cloisters, recutting the name of William, the great tenor of Shakespeare's day.
"The antiquary began to tell the stonecutter about Wilson, how he had been Shakespeare's friend, and Ben Jonson's, and Kit Marlowe's, and how all the men loved and honored him.
"The stonecutter, looking up from his work, frowned and shook his head.
"I wish, sir," he said, "we'd known he was such a swell afore we run that drain pipe through him."

THERE WILL BE TOO MUCH

WATER ON THE BEANS
BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 21.—Dr. H. F.
Scharff, of Dublin, a delegate to the International Zoological congress, now in session here, who explained to the congress the new theory of ascertaining the former position and extent of continents by studying forms of present animal life. In an interview with a local newspaper reporter tonight, he gave it as his opinion that indications point to the gradual submergence of the eastern coast of North America and the gradual upheaval of the Pacific Coast. "Yes," he said, "your Boston will ultimately sink into the sea.
It will not happen in your life time or mine. We cannot speak of zoological changes in hundreds or thousands of years; they are very gradual, yet they do take place."

THE SULTAN OF MOROCCO.

English Writer Finds in Him a Dual Personality.

Weak and Unstable, Yet Maintaining the Grand Manner—Starts Modern Reforms and Then Relapses into the Moor.

ABD EL AZIZ—"The Beloved"—in his spotless garments, with the hood of his turban over his head, is not so much like the Sultan of Morocco as the living embodiment of one of the Apocryphal sayings of the Bible. He is a strange dual personality, such a contradiction in temperaments and tempers, writes Frances Campbell in the London Daily Mail.

Personally his appearance is very striking, yet he is a tall man, but rather short, short necked and approaching dangerously near to embonpoint. But he has such dignity and distinction, such an air of imperial yet genial pride, such instinctive command, that he would be recognized in a crowd as one born in the purple and accustomed to homage.

Moreover, in spite of his monastic retirement and seclusion and the fervency of those he meets from outside he never descends to familiarity with his intimates, never allows them to forget that he is "My Lord the Sultan" and they his servants or subjects; Abd el Aziz never doffs the grand manner. But for it all the duality of him is most striking. Thus there is one of him that is a great scholar, learned in all the abstruse questions that distinguish Arabic literature and Persian thought. For instance, the German Ambassador to his court quoted wrongly in a conversation a line from one of the rare old Arabic books he had brought. The Sultan from his master William II. of Germany. Abd el Aziz unconsciously almost, repeated the line as it is written, in that beautiful classical Arabic that hardly any one in Morocco speaks. He is a great scholar, learned in all the abstruse questions that distinguish Arabic literature and Persian thought.

The Beloved covers his head in the Moorish fashion, but the concealing folds that encircle his head do not hide away the beautiful molding of the eyebrows or the delicate outline of the eye-brows and nose. The eyes are large, long and luminous, filled with a melancholy, thoughtful, and withal a feeble glow of King Charles's foreknowledge of suffering, and who knows what else? The upper portion of his face is wholly poetical, scholarly, and aristocratic. The falling off comes with the mouth, low lipped and thick, with a weak, vacillating chin and a feeble jaw with a forward droop. A man weak and unstable, who ponders for his misdeeds on another stronger than himself, too weak to resist, too indolent to resent. Shut off as he is by his advisers from the world, how can he be otherwise than a succession of reflections, mirroring in the transience of his foolish and determined, strong and feeble, good and bad, and withal a very brave man, who has had the courage to fight against the instincts of his race and family and attempt to rule in an enlightened modern fashion over those subjects of his, who belong to the age of Genesis.

"Yes," says Abd el Aziz now, when the Nazir talks of reform, "but the time is not yet. Haste is of the devil!" Yet he is the same man who was persuaded into a new system of taxation that left the Moors in a condition of absolute want, and who by the same influence was urged to assassinate from the shrines of Mulai Idrees, the hitherto inviolable sanctuary of Morocco and the holiest mosque, and put him forthwith to death. The man who has been so weak to let himself be so easily deceived, and who by the same influence was urged to assassinate from the shrines of Mulai Idrees, the hitherto inviolable sanctuary of Morocco and the holiest mosque, and put him forthwith to death.
