TRAIN STRUCK THE WAGON

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jewel Were Thrown from it and the Former Was Badly Injured.

Dispute as to Whether the Locomotive Sounded its Whistle at the Crossing—Action Instituted.

The 8.15 passenger train, east bound on the G. T. R., struck a wagon in which Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jewel, of Northwood, were coming to the city. The accident occurred at the Livingston crossing about five miles east of Chatham, in Harwich. Both Mr. and Mrs. Jewel were thrown out and the wagon, badly wrecked, but the horses escaped injury. Mrs. Jewel was thrown into the ditch but fortunately escaped with a few bruises. Mr. Jewel was thrown on the other track and received painful injuries. He was badly bruised about the body and suffered from several contused wounds about the head. The train stopped and brought Mr. and Mrs. Jewel to this city. They were immediately removed by John Dunlop in the Rankin Hotel bus to the office of Drs. Holmes & McKenney. Mr. Jewel was quite delirious. His son Richard Jewel, employed with the T. H. Taylor Co., was notified and had his father removed to the Public General Hospital. Mrs. Jewel said that she and her husband were coming in with a guest and they couldn't see the train for the bushes. She blames the railroad company for negligence. Lewis & Richards have been consulted and it is the intention to bring an action against the railroad. John Pickering, who drove over the track just ahead of Mr. Jewel, says that he heard the whistle of the engine. Joseph Bush and Mary Ann Ross also witnessed the accident. Engineer Phipps, of the express, says that he sounded the whistle. The express had run into a couple of freight cars at London and was an hour behind time in consequence.

THE FIASCO QUESTION.

Barriester Geo. G. Martin says he would like to come in for a cigar—or something better—in this literary rumour. He says: "Now, while Fiasco means failure, it is properly used only as to ridiculous failures; more to the collapse of some scheme, chronic or musical entertainment than to a financial matter. As to this the word may not be improper strictly speaking, but it is not well chosen. Lord Macaulay would never have used it in this sense. Fiasco is a pure Italian word. In an Italian opera if a singer breaks down, the audience cry out, 'Ola, Ola, Fiasco!' Fiasco means literally a bottle or flask, and the allusion may be to the bursting of the bottle. The phrase is used also in French and German. It is properly used regarding some performance, and is entirely out of its element when applied to finances."

BRICKS AT FAULT

Mr. Stockton Thinks That the Laying of a Few New Bricks is all the King St. Pavement Needs.

Considerable comment is being made about the King St. pavement. A number of citizens say that the pavement should be repaired, and others think that it should be re-slashed. Others, again, think that the pavement is all right as it is, and needs no repairing.

Mr. Stockton, who was in charge of the work when the pavement was being laid, when interviewed by The Planet, said:—

"I see nothing wrong with the pavement. It is as good as when it was put down except in some places, where there is heavy teaming, the bricks are chipped and broken."

"I am not bound, however, to repair the broken bricks. That is no fault of the contractor. The bricks were bought by the city, and I might add, I myself advised the city at the time against purchasing the bricks as they did. As far as the re-slashing goes, the bricks are as solidly packed together as they ever were."

REAL REIGN OF TERROR

Incredible Wave of Crime Said to be Sweeping the City of New York.

Sensational Statements of the London Times Correspondent—Interview With Carnegie.

London, Oct. 25.—On the authority of the New York correspondent of the London Times, whose statement has been sent broadcast over Europe, a reign of terror exists in New York city. "It is no exaggeration to say," he declares, "that New York city is now as unsafe as a mining town was a generation ago. On the results of the political impotency of the majority of the city has been to turn loose in the city many of the most dangerous men in America. Criminals of every class, from the petty thief to the highwayman, are pressed into the service. Part of the price paid them is the promise of immunity from punishment, and resulting therefrom an incredible wave of crime is sweeping over the city. The shop-keepers are in a state bordering on panic. Citizens walk the secluded streets at night more precariously than in the days of the private watchmen, so great is the distrust of the police."

Andrew Carnegie announced tonight that he will preserve an absolutely impartial attitude in regard to the municipal campaign in New York. Any other course, he believes, would be highly improper, in view of his present and future relations with the municipal officials of New York in connection with his gift to that city.

Mr. Carnegie reiterated his disinclination to speak for publication on any phase of the elections, and evinced a keen desire that no one should attempt to quote or misquote him regarding that fight. However, he frankly deprecated such absurd misrepresentations of the conditions of New York city as occurred during the London Times his morning. Dealing with the Nicaragua Canal question, Mr. Carnegie said to a press representative—"Great Britain has acted with rare good sense. The canal ought to be American built, with American money, and by American workmen and American brains, and no doubt it will be. There is no doubt Great Britain will eventually be the greatest beneficiary, and will have no reason to regret the sensible course she adopted during the recent negotiations." Questioned regarding the rumors of a possible English steel trust, Mr. Carnegie laughingly declared that he was now out of business, and did not know or care anything more about it. "With the exception of the Nicaragua matter," he declared, "I have really nothing to say. I expect to remain in America until May." Mr. Carnegie's Scottish education trust is progressing to his satisfaction. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, Lord Pauncefote and Lady Pauncefote, sail for New York from Southampton tomorrow, on board the steamer St. Louis.

FINE CHAIR

Members of Peninsular Lodge, A. O. U. W. Honor Mr. Martin by a Presentation.

Peninsular Lodge No. 2, A. O. U. W., gave an entertainment to their members' wives and daughters last night in their hall, when it was crowded to the doors.

The following is the program given: Chairman's address—Charles Kelley, Master Workman, who gave many interesting statistics of the order and the good work being done all over the universe, by their noble order.

Recitation—Miss Broad. Solo—Harry Horstead. Due—Forsythe Brothers. Address—N. H. Stevens.

Solo—Miss Clements. Reading—S. M. Smith. Solo—Harry Horstead.

Bro. Scullard, on behalf of Peninsular Lodge, No. 2, was called to the platform and to bring Bro. W. Martin with him, when in a very appropriate speech, he presented the latter with a very fine easy chair, for the good work he had done (in order since he became a member, and at all times ready to assist them).

Bro. W. Martin was completely taken by surprise and could not find words to express his thanks for such a beautiful gift and he assured the brothers that anything he had done was what he considered his duty and would continue to do so as long as he was able.

After the presentation the large assemblage were treated to a bountiful spread which had been provided for them.

The enjoyable entertainment was brought to a close by the singing of God Save our King.

"We were very much pleased with the design you sent. It was beautiful and appropriate." The Victoria Ave. Greenhouses receive such words of commendation every day. Telephone No. 181.

CHAMBERLAIN'S ANNOUNCEMENT

Irish Obstruction will be Limited by Means of New Rules for British House.

Present Representation of Ireland "An Abuse and a Scandal"—Government Investigating.

Edinburgh, Oct. 25.—Mr. Chamberlain, the Colonial Secretary, addressing upwards of 8,000 persons in Waverly Market, Edinburgh, to-night, announced that the Government intended to frame new rules for the House of Commons, so as to limit Irish obstruction.

"We propose," said he, "to bring forward rules which shall give to the majority of the Commons greater control over its own business and greater control over the men who insult and outrage it; and we shall endeavor to protect the mother of parliaments from those who would destroy her usefulness and reputation."

But this was not the only thing Mr. Chamberlain declared the Government intended to do.

"The present representation of Ireland is," said he, "an abuse and a scandal. No alteration can be made except in immediate anticipation of a general dissolution, and we are not contemplating that. But when we get nearer to the time, we shall ask you whether you think Irish representation is so precious to you, is so valuable to the national interests, that it is desirable to continue it on a scale which gives the Irish a representation enormously exceeding the proportionate representation of Scotland and England."

The Colonial Secretary went on to point out that on the basis of population Ireland had 30 members too many in the House of Commons, and on the basis of her contributions for imperial purposes, as considered at the time of the union, she had from 40 to 50 members too many.

"I say that this constitutes an abuse," he continued, "and there is no reason why it should be perpetuated."

In another portion of the speech, which was largely devoted to the Irish question, he observed: "If these gentlemen who now openly shout for the Mahdi and pray for the Boers, if they had a Parliament of their own, if all the strings of Irish government had been in their hands, if they had the power, is it not certain that they would have refused to pay their contribution to the war, and that they would have placed us in a position of embarrassment?"

The relations of the parliamentary opposition with the Irish party, Mr. Chamberlain said, he considered "dangerous to the Empire."

GREATER SEVERITY.

Edinburgh, Oct. 25.—In his speech here to-day Mr. Chamberlain in reviewing the war in South Africa, which he declared again had been forced upon Great Britain by the Boers, he said the Government acknowledged that it had made a mistake as to the time of ending the war, and that he admired the tenacity of the Boers, but he insisted that it was the duty of Great Britain to meet this tenacity with equal resolution.

Then followed what is regarded as a most important declaration:

"I think the time has come, or is coming," said the colonial secretary, "when measures of greater severity may be necessary, and if that time comes we can find precedents for anything we do in the actions of those nations who now criticize our 'barbarity' and 'cruelty,' but whose example in Poland, in the Caucasus, in Algeria, in Tonquin, in Bosnia and the Franco-German war, we have never approached."

A concrete sidewalk is being laid on the east side of William street from the bridge to King street, in front of the Taylor Mills and O'Brien's new cigar factory. A couple of sidewalk signs are being put in front of the cigar factory. They are of a very unique style. A piece is cut out of the walk in the shape of a cigar and the cement which is put in afterwards is the same color as a real cigar. On each of these so-called cigars is printed in letters "O'Brien Bros."
