PROGRESS OF THE WAR

[September 21 to September 27] THE week under review was one o important developments in the war, with steady and very considerable gains for the Entente Allies.

In the Western campaign there were artillery duels, in the Verdun sector, though little change was effected in positions. In the Somme sector, however, the British operating along a front extending in a segment of a circle from Thiepval to Combles and the French operating from combles to Vermandovillers, made very great and important advances along the whole front, the towns of Thiepval and Combles being occupied by them. The fighting was very fierce at numerou points, and the gains of the Entente Allies were only attained by very great sacrifice shared. The Allies took over 5.000 pris oners and vast quantities of military supplies. The importance of the capture o both Thienval and Combles is very great, and it will greatly facilitate the continuance of the drive on Bapaume and Peronne. At other points of the Western front there was considerable activity, but no changes in positions were effected.

Of the Eastern campaign the weel furnished little news of hostilities from Riga to Halicz; but it was evident that the Russians were holding all the ground previously regained, and were making th preparations necessary a further ad vance as weather conditions prove pro pitious. In the Carpathians the Russians aided by the Rumanians, continued their successes and extended their advance. In Transylvania these two forces were or cupying about one quarter of that Pro vince of Hungary.

In the Balkan campaign very great a tivity was maintained on practically the whole front, the Entente Allies making considerable gains at several points. Th fighting in Dobrudja Province of Rumani is to be reckoned as part of the Balkan campaign, and there the Rumanians an sians were able definitely to stop the Bulgarians, Turks, and Teutons under Gen. von Mackensen, whose previous success had been apparently, exaggerated in the reports given out from Berlin. The political situation in Greece lent addition l interest to the Balkan campaign during the week. A large section of the people on the mainland, in Crete, and in the "Isles of Greece," were in open revolt gainst the Government and were demand ing the participation of Greece in the war on the side of the Entente Allies. The indications at the week's close pointed to King Constantine definitely conceding the ands of the revolutionists by declaring himself for the Allies. Of the Caucasian campaign only meagre news was supplied during the week, the situation doubtlessly being somewhat the duties at the Chipman Hospital after a same as at the close of the week preced. ing, with an advantage in favor of the Russians, who were also reported to have ed from St. John where he spent Sunday. made further gains in Persia.

Silence continued concerning the ope ations in Mesopotamia; and there was Academy, Marion, Mass., as a student. practically no news from the Egyptian

Very little was reported concerning the campaign in German East Africa, but it was evident that the Belgians operating from the northwest and west, the British pleasant visit here and returned to their operating from the north, the southwest and the south, and the Portuguese from the southeast, were gradually hemming in the only remaining belligerent forces of the Germans in their last colony.
