THIS WOMAN TO THIS MAN

—BY—
C. N. and A. M. Williamson

(COPYRIGHT)

From Thursday's Daily.
When he left her at last at the door of her own hotel everything was settled for the wedding day and after. Knight was to produce two friends, both men, to one of whom must fall the fatherly duty of giving the bride away. He suggested their both calling upon her in the morning, while he was with her at the Savoy, in order that they might not meet as strangers at the church, and the girl thought this a wise idea. As for the honeymoon, Knight confessed to knowing little of England, outside London, and asked Annesley if she had a choice. Would she like to have a week or so in some warm county like Devonshire or Cornwall, or would she enjoy a trip to Paris or the Riviera? It was all one to him, he assured her; only he had set his heart on getting back to London soon, finding a house, and beginning life as they meant to live it.

Annesley chose Devonshire, her native county. She said she would like to show it to Knight.
"I think you'll love it," she told him. "We might stay at several places I used to adore when I was a child. And if we got to Sidmouth, maybe you'll have a glimpse of those unknown cousins of mine you were talking about, the Annesleys-Setsons, believe they have a place near by called Valley House; but I don't know whether they live there or not."

"We'll go to Sidmouth," he said. The girl smiled. His desire that she should scrape acquaintance with Lord and Lady Annesley-Seton seemed quite boyish and amusing to her, but she did not see how it could be brought about.

Next morning at eleven o'clock, when Annesley had been up for two hours, packing her new trunk in her new trunk and the gorgeous new dressing bag, she was informed that Mr. Nelson Smith had arrived. The girl had forgotten that Knight had hinted at something to tell and something to show her on the morning of their marriage day, and had expected to find his two friends with him, but he had come alone.
"We've got a clear half hour together," he said. "Then Dr. Torrance and the Marchese di Morello may turn up at any minute. Torrance is an elderly man, a decent sort of chap and deeply respectable. He'll do the heavy father act well enough. Paolo di Morello is an Italian. I don't care for him much. I admit he's the troublesome business about my name is a handicap."

"I can trust these men. And at least they won't put you to shame. You can judge them when they come, so enough about them for the present. I didn't come to talk of Torrance and Morello. This is my excuse for being here," and he put into Annesley's hand a flat, oval-shaped parcel. "My wedding gift to my bride," he added, in a different and softer tone. "Open it, sweet."

The white paper wrapping was fastened with small red seals. If the girl had had knowledge of such things, she would have known at once that it was a jeweller's parcel. But as it was, the white, gold-stamp-

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Says an inside bath, before breakfast helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Sparkling and vivacious—merry bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place, instead of the thousands of sickly, anemic-looking men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of nerve wrecks, "run-downs," "brain tags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance, awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

ed silk case within surprised her. She pressed a tiny knob, and the cover flew up to show a string of pearls which made her gasp.

"For the Princess, from her Knight," he said. "And here"—he took from an inner pocket of his coat a band of gold set with a big white diamond—"is your engagement ring. Every girl must have one, you know, even if her engagement is the shortest on record. I've the wedding ring, too. But it isn't time for that yet. A good-sized diamond's the obvious sort of thing; advertises itself for what it is, and that's what we want. You'll wear like a fairyland elixir. But if there wasn't a reason against it, this is what I should like to put on your finger."

As he spoke, he hid the spark of light in his other hand, and from the pocket whence it had just come produced another ring.
If she had not seen this, Annesley would have been satisfied with the brilliant as big as a small pea, which Knight put aside so carelessly. But the extraordinary contrast between the handsome ring and the fine "solitaire" diamond, and the wonderful rival he gave it, silenced her. She was no judge of jewelry, and never possessed any worth having; but she knew without telling that this second ring was a rare as well as beautiful antique. It looked worthy, she thought, of a real princess.

Even the gold was different from other gold, the little that could be seen, for the square-cut stone, of pale, scintillating blue, was surrounded by a frame of tiny brilliant, encrusting the band as far as could be seen on the back of the band, when the ring was worn.
"A sapphire!" Annesley exclaimed. "My favorite stone. Yet I never saw a sapphire like it before. It's wonderful—brighter than a diamond."
"It is a diamond," said Knight. "A blue diamond, and considered rather a remarkable one. It's what your friend Ruthven Smith would call a 'museum piece.' If you showed it to him, but you mustn't. He'd make a heap of money out of it if you did. Nobody must see it but you and me. It wouldn't be safe. It's too valuable. And if you were known to have it, you'd be in danger from all the jewel thieves in Europe and America. You wouldn't like that, would you?"

"No, it would be horrible!" Annesley shuddered. "But what a pity it must be hidden. Is it yours?"

"It's yours at present," said Knight. "If you'll keep it to yourself, and look at it only when you and I are alone together. I can't give it to you, precisely, to have and to hold till death do us part (as I shall give you myself in a few more hours), because this ring is more a trust than a possession. Something may happen which will force me to ask you for it. But then again, it may not. And, anyhow, I want you to have the ring until that time comes. I've bought a thin, gold chain, and you can have it round your neck, unless—I almost think you'd prefer a chain of pearls."
Another mystery! But the blue diamond, in its scintillating frame, was so beautiful, so alluring, that Annesley could not make up her mind to refuse. She knew that she would have more pleasure in peeping surreptitiously at the secret blue diamond sometimes than in seeing the "blue" diamond on her finger every day and hour.

"I can't give it up!" she said, laughing nervously. "But I do hope it isn't one of those dreadful historic stones which have caused murders and all sorts of crimes committed for it, like famous jewels one reads of. I

Dyspepsia

Extremely Severe
Halifax (N.S.) Sergeant in the C.E.F.
Cured Completely by Dr. Cassell's Tablets.

SEARGENT DUNCAN MACNEIL, of the CANADIAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, is 115, PLEASANT STREET, HALIFAX, N.S.

"When the war broke out I joined the Expeditionary Force and came to England. I had not been long there, however, when my old trouble returned, and I had to go to hospital. While in hospital I tried Dr. Cassell's Tablets, and I decided to try them. The first box brought such pronounced relief that I continued the treatment. To make a long story short, a complete cure was effected."

"Since taking Dr. Cassell's Tablets I have been able to do my work as usual. I have almost been able to obtain little or no relief. I found human endurance, but not one because utterly discouraged, and had almost given up all hope of cure."

The above is the frank, clear testimony of a Canadian soldier. He has been cured of extremely severe dyspepsia, which even the healthful life of the training ground could not overcome, and he wishes to tell others that he owes that cure to Dr. Cass
