Cured Fifteen Years Ago of Piles and Eczema

By Using Dr. Chase's Ointment—Certifies That the Cure Was Permanent.

Some people have tried so many doctors and so many treatments in their search for cure for piles and eczema that they find it difficult to believe there is an actual cure. The strong point about Dr. Chase's Ointment is that it not only brings relief promptly, but brings about actual and lasting cure. In 1897 Mr. Ketcheson, 28 Douro street, Peterborough, Ont. wrote as follows: "I was troubled for thirty years with piles and eczema. I could not sleep at night, and when I got warm the itching was terrible. Eczema covered my legs down to the knees, perfectly raw. I have tried every preparation I could hear of. Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me. I procured a box, and this Ointment effected a complete cure." On Sept. 25, 1912, Mr. Ketcheson wrote as follows: "I received a letter from you to-day, saying that you found on file a statement made by me 15 years ago. I have always given Dr. Chase's Ointment a good name since it cured me, and shall tell you how I came to use it. "I had suffered for many years from eczema and piles, and had tried doctors and everything I could hear of in vain. Reading about Dr. Chase's Ointment, I purchased it at once, and was soon completely cured. That was fifteen years ago, so there can be no doubt of the cure being a permanent one. I have met a great many people who have been cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment." Dr. Chase's Ointment, 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

A Prediction.

When the Armies of Earth are disbanded, And their capings are casted with dust; When the musket forever is silenced, And the cannon caulked with rust; When the sword and the helmet lie tarnished, 'Mid the rubbish of Pomp and display— We shall see to the glories drawing Of the promised Millennium Day.

And that day shall bring joy to the Nations; And the glow of its generous light shall invade the morasses of darkness, And dispel the miasmas of night, And the Empire of Night shall be founded, And the sway of its scepter increased, Till mankind shall stand shoulder to shoulder, In the ranks, not of War, but of Peace, And the thrones of Oppression shall crumble, And the spirit of Truth shall reign o'er us, And the world's banner shall be the banner, And the Mighty their mockings forsake, And the spirit of Truth shall reign o'er us, Till Immortal's message be wafted To the remotest side of the sea.

The Canning of Eggs.

Eggs are one of the most difficult cult of food produce to grade. Their external appearance gives but little indication as to their relative fitness for food and the contents cannot be sampled without destroying the fragile shell.

Fortunately an egg is semi-transparent when held before a light in a darkened room and permits, if carefully rotated, of even minor defects being seen. It is not necessary to use an extremely powerful light. A kerosene lamp, a gas jet, a 10 or 16 candle power incandescent bulb are the sources of light most generally used in commercial work.

From time to time various appliances have been invented to facilitate the candling of eggs in quantities. These have proven serviceable for the simple detection of bad eggs, but have not been found satisfactory for the purpose of fine grading.

Each and every egg, therefore, in commercial work as well as in private practice, must be passed separately and with a quick turning movement before the light. In the large wholesale produce houses where large quantities of eggs are handled some candlers become very expert.

The size of the air cell, the consistency of the albumen, the color and mobility of the yolk and the general transparency of the whole egg are the factors most generally recognized as completely fill the shell, but as cooling takes place contraction occurs and an air space is formed in the large end. The yolk is only slightly perceptible and should swing readily in the albumen when the egg is turned around.

A new laid egg or one which at least would grade new laid when received in the cooling room of a wholesale house should be of good size, clean, full (air space not larger than a ten cent piece) sweet and strong bodied (that is the albumen should not appear watery).

A stale or shrunken egg may be detected by the size of the air cell. The shell is porous and evaporation takes place whenever the egg is surrounded by a temperature above freezing.

In a stale egg, while the yolk is rather highly colored, it still retains the proper position and, although considerable evaporation has taken place, the size of the air cell would indicate that, although becoming stale, the egg is still suitable for ordinary domestic purposes (in other words, a good cooking egg).

'Spot rot' in eggs is due to the growth of bacteria or mould in the albumen of the egg. An egg, as laid, is practically sterile. The shell, however, is extremely porous and if the egg has been laid in a dirty nest and held in damp surroundings, infection is bound to occur. The albumen forms an excellent cultural medium for the bacterial and mould growth readily develop. Development takes place rapidly when the egg is exposed to favorable conditions of warmth and moisture, but even in the low temperature of the cold storage house some growth occurs. It is for this reason that dealers generally urge producers to keep their poultry houses clean and under no condition to wash eggs. The presence of excessive moisture tends to break down the tough inner membrane which is to a certain extent bacteria proof.

A heated egg in the early stages of incubation is readily detected under the light. As incubation advances the darkened section increases in size until the whole egg, excepting the air cell, becomes black.

In a thoroughly bad egg the contents are dark and opaque, the air cell is ruptured, the yolk and albumen have broken down, decomposition has set in and the contents shake or flow readily from one end of the egg to the other.

The candling of eggs is not a difficult process. It requires but little skill to tell at a glance the difference between good and bad eggs and anyone with practice can learn to differentiate between the various grades of good eggs.

Many simple appliances have been devised for the candling of eggs and with a view to encouraging the practice of candling among all those concerned in the Canadian egg trade, the Country Division of the Live Stock

Canada's Wars.

While the present conflict is the most important in which Canadians have ever been engaged, it is by no means the first time that Canadians have shouldered arms in defence of the Empire. On two other occasions Canadians went abroad to fight the battles of the Empire, although in the strictest sense of the term the South African War was the only other occasion on which the Canadian Government authorized the sending of troops.

Canadian troops took part in the defence of Khartoum when General Gordon was killed. On that occasion the Canadian Government did not organize, equip or recruit the men, but simply gave permission to the British Government to secure recruits in this country. In the South African War, however, the Government raised the men and sent them to fight in South Africa. In the present war the Canadian Government is not only raising and equipping the soldiers, but is paying for their maintenance at the front.

In domestic wars Canada has had her share. This country defended its borders in the revolutionary war of 1776 against American invaders, fought against the United States in 1812-15 and defeated itself again in the Fenian Raids of 1857 and 1870. Canadian soldiers also took part and put down the Riel Rebellion of 1869-70, and also the Northwest Rebellion of 1885. These struggles, in all of which the Canadians played a creditable part, sink into insignificance when compared with the titanic struggle which they are now waging on behalf of the Empire.—Montreal Journal of Commerce.

McGuire was taking a look round the tent which was to be his home for some months.

He wanted to enter one of the tents and 'pal up' with someone. He moved toward one of them, and was about to enter, when: 'Hallo, cried a sergeant; you can't go in there!'

'And why not?' asked Pat. 'It's the colonel's tent.'

'Then what's it marked 'Private' for?'

The school teacher with the eagle eye saw a little girl chewing gum. 'Mary,' she commanded, 'put that in to the waste basket.'

The child looked as though she would like to obey but she couldn't. 'Did you hear me?' insisted the teacher. 'Put the end of gum into the wastebasket immediately.'

'Please, teacher, I'd like to, but I can't see the wastebasket; it's—it belongs to my mother.'

A Difference to be Considered

The difference in cost between a pure, wholesome cream of tartar baking powder and one made of alum is a mere trifle, perhaps one cent for a whole cake or pan of biscuits.

But there is a vast difference in healthfulness in favor of food made with Royal Baking Powder.

Read the label on your can of baking powder and see what it is made of. There is which is made from Cream of Tartar, derived from grapes.

No Alum in ROYAL BAKING POWDER

England Now Conducting 8 Campaigns.

The British government is at present carrying out eight distinct campaigns: 1—France. 2—Dardanelles. 3—Egypt, in which the Suez Canal is being held against Turks. 4—Persian Gulf, where the Admiralty's oil field is being defended against the same enemy. 5—German East Africa, where a reverse was sustained in November, since when complete darkness has fallen upon the operations. 6—German southwest Africa where the Union troops seem to be making progress, concerning which nothing has been heard for months. 7—The Afghanistan frontier, where the invasion of Mohammedan tribes is being repelled.

Soldiers' Chewing Gum.

'Give me a smoke' is the continual request of Tommy Atkins; but 'Give me some chewing gum' is the cry of the Indian soldier at the front. The dusky fighter prizes his chewing gum as much as the British fighting man prizes his pipe or cigarette. The Indians claim that chewing gum not only allays nervousness, but by providing a supply of saliva it keeps the throat moist in the absence of water. Hundreds of years ago the Indians used the gum of sapdillo to relieve exhaustion and quench thirst, and it is for similar reasons that they chew gum on the battlefield to-day.
