WEEKLY JOURNAL A

Alminn

One of the best known

W.C. ANSLOW

Jan. 22 1889.

1lec. 23, 1891.

Derby Nov. 15, 1890.

Our Country with its United Interests.

EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

VOL. XXVI.--No. 50.

Waverley Hotel.

. J. MacCULLY, M. A. M. D.,

Memb. BOY. COL. SURG., LONDON,

Newcastle, Wednesday, September 20, 1893.

WHOLE No. 1350. Briggs had nothing to wait for but must go on. But I'll tell you what I been robbed from the inside. I have During the voyage she had three or four Selucted Siterature. be seemed in no hurry to go. While I continued with my writing he chatted and talked on business topics of interest. I was betweed with his chatter but I was bethered with his chatter, but of hours later, get the ceremony over explanation of the mystery, or it may my side. could not exactly ask him to leave, espe-and come back.' "Oh !' I said, 'with this hanging over my hand on the man who did it, or tell to keep her head up.

Advocate.

and country			your age; that document came into existence on the night of the day before		'Until his appearance, I had, in a dim	you wrote to that evening of the robbery,	When Gladstone declared before the	e .
	CONVENIENT of Access,	The Steamer " Nelson" and " Jairamichi' will run daily on their respective routes from	that for which my own mendions was ast	t. the envelope containing the thirteen	way, made up my mind that all would be	you wrote to that evening of the robbery, and you sent him more than you intend- ed.'	house of commons that drink had in-
Q D L'actor & Qan	Good Sample rooms for Com-	and after Monday, Sept. 18th, as follows :-	'After to-morrow you will be a part	bills and the memorandum I had made	by his absconding. His arrival showed
S. R. Foster & Son,	mercial travellers.	"Str. MIRAMICHI,"Capt. DeGrace.	ner with me in my business, and wil	of their numbers had disappeared.'	that he meant to brazen the thing out	and the mosting oneet with humbers :	was he indulging in a mere rhetorical	1
MANUFACTUERS OF		will leave Chatham for points up River at 7 a. m. and Newcastle for Chatham and points,	begin at a p-int that I could hardly		with me, and I felt from that moment	I know I couldn't have done that, for I	exaggeration? When the supreme court	0
WIDE NAILO	MUSICAL TUITION-	down River at 7.45 a. m.		8 my feet and tapped the glass over the	helpless and paralyzed	saw the memorandum on the slope of	of the United States solemnly declared in its official decision in the case of	at the second
WIRE NAILS,	MODIOAL TOTTION.	STR. "NELSON,"	ago. I was, in those early days, book	· document enving fand this is the name		the desk after closing his letter and	California vs. Christiansen, (1890)	)
WIRE BRADS	Miss Edith Troy,	CAPT. JOHN BULLICK,	keeper and correspondence clerk in the	e with the number of the stolen notes on	talk (when you same high for your	handing it with the others to Briggs.'	that a greater amount of misery and crime is shown by the statistics	Y
Stooland BIBIC	Graduate of Mount Allisen	-WILL LEAVE-	indicate nouce of fichacison a feter	° II.	stick last night did you gotice the money	the slope of the desk with the ink side	of every state to be attributable to	· · ·
	Conservatory of Music, is now	Chatham. Nelson. Newcastle.	at a salary of fifty-five dollars a month		vou gave me on the desk where I put it?	" up, and you copied Mr. Young's letter in	drink than to any other source,' was	8
	prepared to take pupils in		Our office and warehouse was situated	I that is not the paper with the number	No we look tobe to T 111 1	the copying press, and while it was	thoughtless statement for the purpose	1
And SFIKES, TACKS, BRADS, SHOE	FINNU FUNIE, FIFE UNUMNY ALL	for Douglastown for Newcastle, (Call's Wharf) Bushville, Bushville, for Bushville,		of the stolen notes on it' said John	the threshold of this room '	damp put it down on the list of the	of pleasing the temperance people?	2
NAILS. HUNGARIAN NAILS, &c.	Terms on Applicatian.	Newcastle & Douglastown Douglastown Nelson. & Chatham, & Chatham.	water front, Usually the office was closed at half past live, but in order be			notes in the unblotted copying ink, and	Well perhaps so. Gladstone may	y
	Newcastle, June 6th, 1893.	SOLAR TIME SOLAR TIME. SOLAR TIME.	fore starting on my wedding irip, I was	s 'From the moment I left the office to	You did not see cr touch the money	the numbers of the notes more faintly	shave been out of his head and the	e
ST. JOHN N. B.		9 00 a. m. 9 40 a. m. 10 15 a. m. 11 00 a. m. 11 40 a. m. 12 15 p. m.	obliged to work long after hours that	t show Briggs out that night, twenty-five	taken lann the second of the second	but clearly copied, reversed of course, on	Let us make a little nxcursion into mathe-
	Nation Of Sala	2.00 p. m. 2 40 p. m. 4 00 p. m. 6 00 p. m. 5 10 p. m. 6 45 p. m.	night.	years ago, no one has ever seen the list	and do the the multicers of the notes i	the ny-leaf of Young's letter, and Mr.	matics to see.
	Notice Of Sale.		'I arranged with Mr. Henderson that	I made of the notes. Briggs must have	'No, certainly not. I could not see		In 1889 the British Medical Journal published the result of an
MITTNERVI		Carrying freight and passengers between the	1 would close the warchouse on the first	street.	your lesk from the door, and I was not further than the door. You do not seem		inquiry made by the British Medi-
	To James C. Brown, of Newcastle, in the County of Northumberland, Stage-driver, and all others	points named. RATES OF PASSAGE.	floor at the usual time and after com-			leaf of Young's letter, and there were	cal association (the principal asso-whom it may concern:-	Single fare between Chatham and Newcastle,	pleting my office work would lock the			the numbers of the notes, dim to be sure,	perhaps, in the world). The in-
I have opened as usual an elegant line of	TAKE notice that there will be sold at Public auction in front of the Engine House, New,	an Nalaan on vias norma 00 santa Dotown	safe and deliver the key at his house on		'The cash you brought in last night,	but not quite as dim then as they are	quiry was conducted during a per-
Ladies' and Children's	auction in front of the Engine House, New- castle, in the said county of Northumberland, on MONDAY the THEREENTH day of NOVEMBER next at	Tickets issued on board at 30 cents. Card Tickets good for 25 trips issued at the rate of 12	posted and the footings carefully made	· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	the twelve hundred dollars, has been	now under the glass.	iod of nineteen months (May 9th, 1885, to Dec. 11, 1886), and related
NEW OFRING MILLINERT	ten o'clock in the forenoon, all that certain lot or parcel of land and premises, situate. lying and	cents a trip, to other points corresponding	and carried forward, and I had placed		stolen, that's all.' said I.	"He stole the money, Arkright said,"	to the effects of drink ou mortality.
with all the latest novelties in trimmings. Also dress trimmings in Surah Silk, Lace, Jet	being in Newcastle aforesaid and abutted and	STR. "MIRAMICHI,"	the books in the safe and was writing	while I was in no particular favor with			Each of the doctors contributing to	2
ac. Ladies' Whitewear, Corsets, Lace Mitts	ly side of Water Street, at the South West angle of the piece of land conveyed by Oliver Willard to	IL DE DODIOR	letters at the best speed possible, when	the firm, although, I believe, up to that	don't mean to say that ! I cannot, I	ruin you, or anyway he wanted to sad- dle you with the theft, and for a while	sections of Great Britain) took his
&c., and a variety of articles too numerous to !	Roderick McKenzie, thence Southerly along the	will leave Chathaua for points down-river, viz.	I heard a loud knock on the street door.			I more than suspected you. But all is	death certificate book and from the
The start and a low la lat of Their mod	said McKenzie's Westerly side line to the South- erly side of Land owned by Mrs. Mary Vondy, thence Westerly along the said Mary Vondy's lard	Church, Neguac, and Point aux Carr. DAILY.	I put my head out of the window to see			clear at last, and I'll pay you handsome-	counterfoils of three years gave, in	1
MILLINERY, ranging from one dollar upwards	Fifty ought foot thomas Southealy on a line negelicit	at 9 a m. calling at Escun inac on Mouday, Wednsday and Fridays, and Bay du Vin on	what was wanted and saw Harry Briggs	s in following the thief, even if I knew	1	ly one day for suspecting you.'	over twenty-five years of age, the	3
which cannot fail to please. All orders executed in first class style.	water Street and thence Easterly along the	Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, carrying	-our collector-standing before the		1: C. Alexa 1. S. Martin and Lange	'And so he did,' said my father in law.	immediate cause of death, the age
Mar I December	Northerly side of Water Street fifty eight feet to the place of beginning, which piece			Broadway. Of course no marriage could take place the next morning.	and astonishment. I could hardly be-	'He lent me the money to buy a part-	at death and the drink habits of the man who Jied, From the data of land was conveyed to the said James C. Brown by one Dorothy Fowler by inden- ture bearing date the twenty third day of August, in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hum.				lieve my eyes and ears. I had spent a	uership in the firm, and I am the firm	supplied by this inquiry has been younger, if anything and was very		steepless mgnt, and was nail dazed and	all to myself now, and shall be until the	(120,000) of intemperate persons dred and Eighty as by reference to the said deed will more fully appear, together with all the		popular both with the members of the firm and his fellow clerks. To me per-		wholly stupid and in despair. For a	new partner comes in tomorrow.
TAILORING.	appurtenances. The above sale will be made under and by virtue		sonally he had shown a disagreeable	what had happened. Whether he would	while I felt that, after all, he might be	He rose and shook me by the hand, and tapped me on the shoulder, saying	Wales from all causes, and, what is of a power of sale contained in a certain indenture of mortgage bearing date the sixteenth day of April	tor points down river, the regular fares will be charged.	side of his nature several times and it	t lelieve me or not who could say? Not	innocent, and that I, in a moment of	as he dismissed me with a smile : 'Your	the more important, the number of those who were killed by drink
				1, anyway. He might reasonably order	monon and the monon lun in some	Inarthan for life will be wondering what	This latter number is a little over generally that I am still	Brown and his wife of the first part and S. Des- mond of the second part. Default having been made in the payment of the moneys secured by	down-river must have it on the wharf not later than 8.30 a.m. All Freight charges must be	well with him. I was just about to ask	me into custody. Very well, if he did	place of security which I could not now	has kept you, my boy.'-Cottage Hearth.	30,000. It does not include those (infants and others) dying as a re-
	said naentare of mortgage Terms CASH.	prepaid, on both boats, Freight will be at shippers or owners risk.	him to wait until I could close up, when	1 - mater not gramote or reer agorieved.	recall.		sult of crime or negligence on the
in the old stand over Messra. Sutherland and Creaghan's Store. I have a fine	Dated this second day of August, A. D. 1853. E. P. WILLISTON.	W. T. CONNORS, MANAGER.	he informed me that he had a large sum	Our wedding was fixed for eleven	'Mr. Henderson, on reaching the	A COURAGEOUS WOMAN.	part of drinkers, or as a result of
LINE OF SAMPLES	SOLICITOR TO MORTGAGLE.	Chatham, Sept. 16, 1893.	of money that he desired to put in the	e o clock next morning. By that time I	0° 1.1° 1 1 1 1'		inherited defects, but simply those might he in fall shared with a l'	office half an hour earlier than his us-	and the second s	who kill themselves with alcohol.
to select from. Parties furnishing their own goods can have them made up in			safe over night.	might be in jail, charged with stealing	Inst time now endow for mother much	A veteran sailor, Captain Eastwick,	who kill themselves with alcohol. The number is about the same for	• goods can have them made up in GOOD STYLE		, , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , ,	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down	the money or being an accomplice in the	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or	declares that of all the wonten with	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on goods can have them made up in GOOD STVLE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis-		,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was	the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day.	whom he was ever at sea he never met	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the pasis of the ratio of absolute	• goods can have them made up in GOOD STVLE			safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was auxious to get away to my sweetheart	hight be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery. 1 locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly de-	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in	whom he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries.	•
goods can have them made up in GOOD STVLE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. McDONALD.			safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was auxious to get away to my sweetheart	hight be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery. 1 locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly de-	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I	when he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year goods can have them made up in GOOD STYLE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future.		at is	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all	hight be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery. (1 locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly de- layed, jumped into a hansom, and drove	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender-	when he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States. 30,000 more
goods can have them made up in GOOD STVLE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. MCDONALD.			safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alone, old man ?' he cried, as I opened	hight be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery. 1 locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly de- layed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house. 1 told the servant to take in word that	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't through how it hannaad but I did not	whom he was ever at sea he never met more than oue who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal
goods can have them made up in GOOD STVLE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. MCDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862,			safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alonc, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door; 'you'll ruin your health	hight be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery. 1 locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly de- layed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house. 1 told the servant to take in word that 1 wished to see Mr. Henderson most	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feal this much. I did not feal anything	when he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England, Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and
goods can have them made up in GOOD STVLE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. MCDONALD.			safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alonc, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and don't get paid for extra time either.	hight be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery. 1 locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly de- layed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house. 1 told the servant to take in word that 1 wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor.	when he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean when he was sighted by two	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England, Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum-
goods can have them made up in GOOD STVLE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. MCDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862,			safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alonc, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door; 'you'll ruin your health and den't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along.	hight be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery. (1) locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly de- layed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house. (1) to Henderson's house. (2) I told the servant to take in word that (1) wished to see Mr. Henderson most (2) particularly. I suppose she had heard (2) about my wedding ; anyway she smiled	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson	when he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean when he was sighted by two	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England, Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum-
goods can have them made up in GOOD STTLE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. MCDUNALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLINERY. I have just opened a beautiful line of Ladies			safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alone, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door; 'you'll ruin your health and don't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve hundred dollars home and guarantee it	hight be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery. (1) locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly de- layed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house. (1) told the servant to take in word that 1) wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said: (1) hope to word hear in the servant weather and said hear	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me	when he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread;	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England, Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro-
goods can have them made up in GOOD STTLE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guaraatee the same in the future. J. R. MCDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLINERRY. Thave just opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's			safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alone, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door; 'you'll ruin your health and don't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve hundred dollars home and guarantee it	hight be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery. (1) locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly de- layed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house. (1) told the servant to take in word that 1) wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard (about my wedding; anyway she smilled very knowingly and said: (1) hope you'll have fine weather and good luck on your holiday. Mr. Arkright, though	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not	when he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned.	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German
goods can have them made up in GOOD STTLE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. McDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLINERY. T have just opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's SPRING MILLINERY	What Contract of the second se	at is ORTA	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alone, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and don't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.'	hight be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery. (1) locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly de- layed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house. (1) told the servant to take in word that 1) wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said: (1) hough ty ou'll have fine weather and good linck on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not fee! this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of	when he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost.	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England, Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland,
goods can have them made up in GOOD STTLE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. MCDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLINERY. Thave just opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's SPRING MILLINERY with all the newest trimmings. Also an as- sortment of plain and spot pongee silk, surah	What Contract of the second se		safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alonc, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and don't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve hundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,'	<ul> <li>might be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>i locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take in word that I wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding ; any way she smiled very knowingly and said : 'I hope tyou'll have fine weather and good lick on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect 'fine weather. Gracious are you ill?' she</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now	when he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. "It was morning, and my wife had	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England, Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- may and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six
goods can have them made up in GOOD STTLE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. MCDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLINERY. I have just opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's SPRING MILLINERY with all the newest trimmings. Also an as- softment of plain and spot pongee silk, surah silk and jet, suitable for dress trimmings. Ladies silk and muslin Neckties, Aprons ard	What What Casteria is Dr. Samuel Pitche	at is OCRIAN er's prescription for Infants	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alonc, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and don't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve hundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place	<ul> <li>ninght be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>i locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take in word that I wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said: 'I hope tyou'll have fine weather and good luck on your holiday, Mr. Aikright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill? she cried at the end. I dare say that my</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now	when he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and
goods can have them made up in GOOD STTLE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. MCDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLINERY. Thave just opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's SPRING MILLINERY with all the newest trimmings. Also an as- sortment of plain and spot pongee silk, surah silk and jet, suit-ble for dress trimmings.	What What Casteria is Dr. Samuel Pitche and Children. It contains no	at is OCRICA er's prescription for Infants either Opium, Morphine nor	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alonc, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and don't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve hundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items,'	hight be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery. (1) locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly de- layed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house. (1) to Henderson's house. (2) I told the servant to take in word that (1) wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said: 'I hope ty you'll have fine weather and good luck (2) on your holiday, Mr. Aikright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill? she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money. I could hear.'	when he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs,	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be
goods can have them made up in GOOD STTLE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. MCDUNALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLINERY. Thave just opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's SPRING MILLINFERY with all the newest trimmings. Also an as- softment of plain and spot poorgee silk, surah silk and jet, suitable for dress trimmings. Ladies silk and muslin Neckties, Aprons and Candiderchie's Collary, Infant's	What What What What What What What What	at is OCRICATION TO PROVIDE AND	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alone, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and den't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items,' and I prepared to make a memorandum	hight be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery. 1 locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly de- layed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house. 1 told the servant to take in word that 1 wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said: 'I hope tyou'll have fine weather and good lick on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill?' she e cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not	whom he was ever at sea he never met more than oue who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. 'It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, Frazce, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver-
goods can have them made up in GOOD STULE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. / J. R. MCDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLINEERY. I have just opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's SPRING MILLINERS with all the newest trimmings. Also an as- sortment of plain and spot pongee silk, surah silk and jet, suitable for dress trimmings. Ladies silk and muslin Neckties, Aprons ard Chandkerchie's. Children's Collars, Infant's Chacks, Bonnets, Bibs, etc. Trimmed Millinery always on hand Latest Novelties and Lowest prices.	What What Casteria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher and Children. It contains no ether Narcotic substance. for Paregorie, Drops, Soothi	at is OCRICATION CORRESSION of the second states of	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alone, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and den't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against less. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face	hight be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery. (1) locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly de- layed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house. (1) to Henderson's house. (2) I told the servant to take in word that 1) wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding ; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said : (1) hope ty you'll have fine weather and good linck on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill? she e cried at the end. 1) dare say that my face told tales. (Not ill,' I said, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if you please.'	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stoo i, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.'	whom he was ever at sea he never met more than oue who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. 'It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, Frazce, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six
goods can have them made up in GOOD STULE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. MCDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLEINEERY . Thave just opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's SPRING MILLINFERX with all the newest trimmings. Also an as- sortment of plain and spot pongee silk, surah silk and jet, suitable for dress trimmings. Ladies silk and muslin Neckties, Aprons and Candkerchie's. Children's Collars, Infant's Class, Bonnets, Bibs, etc. Trimmed Millinery always on hand Latest Novelties and Lowest prices. All work done promptly and in first class style	What What What What What What What What	at is OCRACIAN CORRELATION of the second state of the second state	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alone, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door; 'you'll ruin your health and den't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,'I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps.	<ul> <li>ninght be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>'1 locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take in word that 1 wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said: '1 hope tyou'll have fine weather and good linck on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill?' she e cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I said, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.'</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.' 'This was as good as accusing me of	whom he was ever at sea he never met more than oue who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. 'It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 360,000the
goods can have them made up in GOOD STULE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. McDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLEINEERY. Thave just opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's SPRING MILLINFERY with all the newest trimmings. Also an as- softment of plain and spot pongee silk, surah silk and jet, suitable for dress trimmings. Ladies silk and muslin Neckties, Aprons ard Chaks, Bonnets, Bibs, etc. Trimmed Millinery always on hand Latest Novelties and Lowest prices. All work done promptly and in first class style JENNIE E. WRIGHT.	What What What What What What What What	at is OCTOPICS or's prescription for Infants either Opium, Morphine nor It is a harmless substituto ing Syrups, and Castor Oil, tee is thirty years' use by in destroys Worms and allays	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alone, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door; 'you'll ruin your health and den't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,'I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps.	<ul> <li>ninght be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>'1 locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take in word that 1 wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said: '1 hope tyou'll have fine weather and good linck on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill?' she e cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I said, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.'</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.' 'This was as good as accusing me of	whom he was ever at sea he never met more than oue who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. 'It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 360,000the
goods can have them made up in GOOD STULE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. McDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLINEERY. Thave just opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's SPRING MILLINFERS with all the newest trimmings. Also an as- softment of plain and spot pongee silk, surah silk and jet, suitvble for dress trimmings. Ladies silk and muslin Neckties, Aprons ard Chaks, Bonnets, Bibs, etc. Trimmed Millinery always on hand Latest Novelties and Lowest prices. All work done promptly and in first class style LENNE E. WRIGHT. Next Messrs. H. Williston & Co., Jewelers	What What What What What What What What	at is OCTOPICS of the second state of the seco	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alone, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and den't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the	<ul> <li>ninght be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>'1 locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take in word that 1 wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said: 'I hope tyou'll have fine weather and good lick on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill?' she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,'I ssid, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.'</li> <li>'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and in a few seconds the head of the firm entered smiling. He, no doubt</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the polec that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.' 'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little	when he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass suread, and were sailing three	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink.
goods can have them made up in GOOD STULE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. McDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLEINEERY. Thave just opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's SPRING MILLINGERY with all the newest trimmings. Also an as- sortment of plain and spot pongee silk, surth silk and jet, suitable for dress trimmings. Ladies silk and muslin Neckties, Aprons ard Candkerchiefs. Children's Collars, Infant's Chaks, Bonnet's, Bibs, etc. Trimmed Millinery always on hand Latest Novelties and Lowest prices. All work done promptly and in first class style JENNIE E. WRIGHT.	What What What What What What What What	at is OCTOPICS of the second state of the seco	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alonc, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and den't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the country was subject to a discount. This	<ul> <li>might be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>i locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take in word that I wished to see Mr. Henderson most, about my wedding ; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said : 'I hope ty you'll have fine weather and good luck on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill? she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I said, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.'</li> <li>'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and in a few seconds the head of the firm entered smiling. He, no doubt thought my anxiety to see him was con-</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the polec that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.' 'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little or nothing beyond helpless and numb-	when he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass spread, and were sailing three feet for our two. A creat feeling of	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 360,000the number of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink. Three hundred and sixty thou-
goods can have them made up in GOOD STULE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. McDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLEINEERY. Thave just opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's SPRING MILLINFERS with all the newest trimmings. Also an as- softment of plain and spot pongee silk, surah silk and jet, suitable for dress trimmings. Ladies silk and muslin Neckties, Aprons ard Chaks, Bonnets, Bibs, etc. Trimmed Millinery always on hand Latest Novelties and Lowest prices. All work done promptly and in first class style LENELE WRIGHT. Next Messrs. H. Williston & Co., Jewelers	What What What What What What What What	at is OCTOPICS of the second state of the seco	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alonc, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and don't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the country was subject to a discount. This mide it necessary for me to keep a	<ul> <li>ninght be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>'I locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take in word that I wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding ; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said : 'I hope tyou'll have fine weather and good luck on your holiday, Mr. Atkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill? she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I said, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.'</li> <li>'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and in a few seconds the head of the firm entered smiling. He, no doubt thought my anxiety to see him was connected with my marinage.</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sum went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.' 'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little or nothing beyond helpless and numb- ed. Before I left that evening Briggs rent me a note begging me, for my own	when he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass spread, and were sailing three feet for our two. A great feeling of despondency came over me as I saw this, and thought of my young wife standing	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 360,000the number of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink. Three hundred and sixty thou- sand a year 1 In an average genera- tion of thirty-three years the num- ber is nearly 12,000,000 (11,880,000).
goods can have them made up in COOD STULE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- factor has been given in the past and I can uarantee the same in the future. J. R. McDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLINEERY. Thave just opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's SPRING MILLINEERY with all the newest trimmings. Also an as- softment of plain and spot pongee silk, surah sik and jet, suitable for dress trimmings. Ladies silk and muslin Neckties, Aprons and Children's Children's Collars, Infant's Children's Collars, Infant's Children's Children's Collars, Infant's Children's divides and Lowest prices. All work done promptly and in first class style JENNE E. WRIGHT. Next Messrs. H. Williston & Co., Jewelers. New astle, April 18, 1893.	What What What What What What What What	at is OCTOPICS of the second state of the seco	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alonc, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and den't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the country was subject to a discount. This mide it necessary for me to keep a record of the bills that we received and	<ul> <li>might be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>i locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take in word that I wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding ; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said : 'I hope you'll have fine weather and good luck on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill? she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I said, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.' 'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and in a few seconds the head of the firm entered smiling. He, no doubt thought my anxiety to see him was connected with my marnage.</li> <li>'When he heard my story he was</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.' 'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little or nothing beyond helpless and numb- ed. Before I left that evening Briggs rent me a note begging me, for my own sake, not to think of bolting ! 'Bolting.'	whom he was ever at sea he never met more than oue who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. "It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass spread, and were sailing three feet for our two. A great feeling of despondency came over me as I saw this, and thought of my young wife standing	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 360,000the number of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink. Three hundred and sixty thou- sand a year ! In an average genera- tion of thirty-three years the num- ber is nearly 12,000,000 (11,880,000). In the lifetime of a man of seventy goods can have them made up in GOOD STULE The content of the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. MCDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLINEERY . Thave just opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's SPRING MILLINFERY With all the newest trimmings. Also an as- softment of plain and spot pongee silk, surah silk and jet, suitvible for dress trimmings. Ladies silk and muslin Neckties, Aprons ard Ladies, Children's Collars, Infant's Cloaks, Bonnets, Bibs, etc. Trimmed Millinery always on hand Latest Novelties and Lowest prices. All work done promptly and in first class style DENEE E. WRIGHT. Rest Messrs. H. Williston & Co., Jewelers	What What What What What What What What	at is COPPICATION COPPICIENT	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alonc, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and den't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the country was subject to a discount. This mide it necessary for me to keep a record of the bills that we received and	<ul> <li>night be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>'I locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take in word that I wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said: 'I hope tyou'll have fine weather and good luck on your holiday, Mr. Atkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill? she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I said, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.'</li> <li>'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and in a few seconds the head of the firm entered smiling. He, no doubt thought my anxiety to see him was connected with my marnage.</li> <li>'When he heard my story he was grave enough. Twelve hundred dollars</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.' 'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little or nothing beyond helpless and numb- ed. Before I left that evening Briggs rent me a note begging me, for my own sake, not to think of bolting ! 'Bolting,' said he, 'in a case of this kind, would	whom he was ever at sea he never met more than oue who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. "It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass spread, and were sailing three feet for our two. A great feeling of despondency came over me as I saw this, and thought of my young wife standing there in front of me and the fate that might be in store for her : then to	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 360,000the number of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink. Three hundred and sixty thou- sand a year ! In an average genera- tion of thirty-three years the num- ber is nearly 12,000,000 (11,880,000). In the lifetime of a man of seventy years the aggregate death roll will reach
goods can have them made up in GOOD STULE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can your and the same in the future. J. R. McDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLINEERY. MILLINEERY. Thave just opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's SPRING MILLINEERY with all the newest trimmings. Also an as- sortment of plain and spot pongee silk, surah silk and jet, suitable for dress trimmings. Ladies silk and muslin Neckties, Aprons and Chindren's Collars, Infant's Chards, Bonnets, Bibs, etc. Trimmed Millinery always on hand Latest Novelties and Lowest prices. All work done promptly and in tirst class style LENNE E. WRIGHT. New castle, April 18, 1893.	What What What What What What What What	at is COPPICATION COPPICIENT	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alone, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and don't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve hundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing, I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items, and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and free value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the country was subject to a discount. This mide it necessary for me to keep an record of the bills that we received and the'r numbers on each account, so that a man could be credited with the amount for which the money he paid us in pass-	<ul> <li>night be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>'1 locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take in word that 1 wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding ; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said : '1 hope you'll have fine weather and good lick on your holiday, Mr. Aikright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill? she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I ssid, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.'</li> <li>'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and in a few seconds the head of the fine metered smiling. He, no doubt thought my anxiety to see him was connected with my marnage.</li> <li>'When he heard my story he was grave enough. Twelve hundred dollars gone?' said he, frowning.</li> <li>'Gone,' I said like an echo.</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stoo i, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.' 'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little or nothing beyond helpless and numb- ed. Before I left that evening Briggs rent me a note begging me, for my own sake, not to think of bolting ! 'Bolting,' said he, 'in a case of this kind, would be taken as an admission of the very-	whom he was ever at sea he never met more than oue who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. "It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass spread, and were sailing three feet for our two. A great feeling of despondency came over me as I saw this, and thought of my young wife standing there in front of me and the fate that might be in store for her; then to increase the danger, the brigs owned	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 360,000the number of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink. Three hundred and sixty thou- sand a year ! In an average genera- tion of thirty-three years the num- ber is nearly 12,000,000 (11,880,000). In the lifetime of a man of seventy years the aggregate death roll will reach the amazing figure of over 25,000,000
<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	What What What What What What What What	at is OCTOPICS of the second state of the seco	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alone, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and don't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve hundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the country was subject to a discount. This made it necessary for me to keep a record of the bills that we received and their numbers on each account, so that a man could be credited with the amount for which the moony he paid us in pass- ed current at our bank. It was a heavy,	<ul> <li>night be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>'1 locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take in word that the wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said: '1 hope tyou'll have fine weather and good luck on your holiday, Mr. Aikright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill? she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I said, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.'</li> <li>'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and, in a few seconds the head of the fine metered smiling. He, no doubt thought my anxiety to see him was connected with my marnage.</li> <li>'When he heard my story he was t gone?' said he, frowning.</li> <li>'Gone,' I said like an echo.</li> <li>'And the number of the potes gone.'</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the polec that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.' 'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little or nothing beyond helpless and numb- ed. Before I left that evening Briggs rent me a note begging me, for my own sake, not to think of bolting ! 'Bolting,' said he, 'in a case of this kind, would be taken as an admission of the very worst.' Even this daring impudence	when he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. "It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass spread, and were sailing three feet for our two. A great feeling of despondency came over me as I saw this, and thought of my young wife standing there in front of me and the fate that might be in stere for her; then to increase the danger, the brigs opene d fire, and a shot came skipping afterus,	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each, year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as in England and the United States alone. The same function of alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of an an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 360,000the number of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink. Three hundred and sixty thou- sand a year ! In an average genera- tion of thirty-three years the num- ber is nearly 12,000,000 (11,880,000). In the lifetime of a man of seventy years the aggregate death roll will reach the amazing figure of over 25,000,000 (25,200,000). Remember in looking at these
goods can have them made up in GOOD STULE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. McDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLINEERY. Thave just opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's SPRING MILLINFERY with all the newest trimmings. Also an as- sortment of plain and spot pongee silk, surch silk and jet, suitvible for dress trimmings. Ladies silk and muslin Neckties, Aprons ard Silk and jet, Suitvible for dress trimmings. Chaks, Bonnets, Bibs, etc. Trimmed Millinery always on hand Latest Novelties and Lowest prices. All work done promptly and in first class style DENNE E. WRIGHT. Next Messrs. H. Williston & Co., Jewelers. New zastle, April 18, 1893. Miss Annie Nicholson is prepared to receive a limited number of pupils for instruction in	What What What What What What What What	at is Correction of the storage of	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alone, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and don't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve hundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against less. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing, I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items, and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the country was subject to a discount. This made it necessary for me to keep a record of the bills that we received and the'r numbers on each account, so that a man could be credited with the amount for which the mouey he paid us in pass- ed current at our bank. It was a heavy, cumbrous system, and attended by	<ul> <li>might be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>1 locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>1 told the servant to take in word that I wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding ; any way she smiled very knowingly and said : 'I hope you'll have fine weather and good lick on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill?' she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I ssid, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.' 'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and in a few seconds the head of the firm entered smiling. He, no doubt thought my anxiety to see him was connected with my marriage.</li> <li>'When he heard my story he was grave enough. Twelve hundred dollars gone?' said he, frowning.</li> <li>'Gone,' I said like an echo.</li> <li>'And the number of the notes gone with the money?' said he, looking me</li> </ul>	<ul> <li>ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day.</li> <li>'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Henderson's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor.</li> <li>'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.'</li> <li>'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little or nothing beyond helpless and numbed. Before I left that evening Briggs rent me a note begging me, for my own sake, not to think of bolting ! 'Bolting,' said he, 'in a case of this kind, would be taken as an admission of the very worst.' Even this daring impudence did not rouse me, did not waken me; through the whole terrible affair I do</li> </ul>	when he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned, and much precious time was lost. "It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass spread, and were sailing three feet for our two. A great feeling of despondency came over me as I saw this, and thought of my young wife standing there in front of me and the fate that might be in store for her; then to increase the danger, the brigs opene d fire, and 'a shot came skipping afterus, but fell short. In a few minutes more	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each, year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 360,000the number of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink. Three hundred and sixty thou- sand a year 1 In an average genera- tion of thirty-three years the num- ber is nearly 12,000,000 (11,880,000). In the lifetime of a man of seventy years the aggregate death roll will reach the amazing figure of over 25,000,000 (25,200,000). Remember in looking at these stupendous figures, that they represent not the number of drinkers who have
goods can have them made up in GOOD STULE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and 1 can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. McDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLINEERY. Thave just opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's SPRING MILLINFERM with all the newest trimmings. Also an as- sortment of plain and spot pongee silk, surah silk and jet, suitable for dress trimmings. Ladies silk and muslin Neckties, Aprons and Latest Novelties and Lowest prices. Al work done promptly and in first class style DENNE E. WRIGHT. New castle, April 18, 1893. SCHOORTHADADAD Miss Annie Nicholson is prepared to receive a limited number of pupils for instruction in the above. Terms will be made known on	What What What What What What What What	at is OCTOPICATION or s prescription for Infants cither Opium, Morphine nor It is a harmless substituto ing Syrups, and Castor Oil, to is thirty years' use by indestroys Worms and allays vents vomiting Sour Curd, ad colic. Castoria relieves onstipation and flatulency, od, regulates the stomach by and natural sleep. Cas- acca-the Mother's Friend.	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alone, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and don't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve hundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing, I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items, and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and free value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the country was subject to a discount. This mide it necessary for me to keep a record of the bills that we received and their numbers on each account, so that a man could be credited with the amount for which the money he paid us in pass- ed current at our bank. It was a heavy, cumbrous system, and attended by heavy risks from failures of which	<ul> <li>might be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>1 locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take in word that I wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding ; any way she smiled very knowingly and said: 'I hope ty you'll have fine weather and good lick on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill?' she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I ssid, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.' 'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and in a few seconds the head of the firm entered smiling. He, no doubt thought my anxiety to see him was connected with my marnage.</li> <li>'When he heard my story he was grave enough. Twelve hundred dollars gone?' said he, frowning.</li> <li>'Gone,' I said like an echo.</li> <li>'And the number of the notes gone with the money?' said he, looking me full in the face, with a heavier frown.</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.' 'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little or nothing beyond helpless and numb- ed. Before I left that evening Briggs rent me a note begging me, for my own sake, not to think of bolting ! 'Bolting,' said he, 'in a case of this kind, would be taken as an admission of the very worst.' Even this daring impudence did not rouse me, did not waken me ; through the whole terrible affair I do not think I was ever as much excited	when he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned, and much precious time was lost. "It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass spread, and were sailing three feet for our two. A great feeling of despondency came over me as I saw this, and thought of my young wife standing there in front of me and the fate that might be in store for her; then to increase the danger, the brigs opene d fire, and 'a shot came skipping afterus, but fell short. In a few minutes more	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each, year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 360,000the number of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink. Three hundred and sixty thou- sand a year 1 In an average genera- tion of thirty-three years the num- ber is nearly 12,000,000 (11,880,000). In the lifetime of a man of seventy years the aggregate death roll will reach the amazing figure of over 25,000,000 (25,200,000). Remember in looking at these stupendous figures, that they represent not the number of drinkers who have
goods can have them made up in GOOD STTLE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and I can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. McDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLINEERY. Thave just opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's SPRING MILLINFERY with all the newest trimmings. Also an as- softment of plain and spot pongee silk, surch with all the newest trimmings. Also an as- softment of plain and spot pongee silk, surch that is softment of plain and spot pongee silk, surch Chaks, Bonnets, Bibs, etc. Trimmed Millinery always on hand Latest Novelties and Lowest prices. All work done promptly and in first class style DENNE E. WRIGHT. Next Messrs. H. Williston & Co., Jewelers. New astle, April 18, 1893. Miss Annie Nicholson is prepared to receive a limited number of pupils for instruction in	What What What What What What What What	at is OCTOPICATION The second state of the state of the second state of the sta	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alone, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and don't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve hundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the country was subject to a discount. This made it necessary for me to keep a record of the bills that we received and their numbers on each account, so that a man could be credited with the amount for which the moony he paid us in pass- ed current at our bank. It was a heavy, cumbrous system, and attended by heavy risks from failures of which nothing is known nowadays.	<ul> <li>might be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>1 locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take m word that I wished to see Mr. Henderson most, particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding ; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said: 'I hope you'll have fine weather and good luck on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill? she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I ssid, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.' 'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and in a few seconds the head of the firm entered smiling. He, no doubt thought my anxiety to see him was connected with my marnage.</li> <li>'When he heard my story he was grave enough. Twelve hundred dollars gone?' said he, frowning.</li> <li>'Gone,' I said like an echo.</li> <li>'And the number of the notes gone with the money ?' said he, looking me full in the face, with a heavier frown.</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.' 'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little or nothing beyond helpless and numb- ed. Before I left that evening Briggs rent me a note begging me, for my own sake, not to think of bolting ! 'Bolting,' said he, 'in a case of this kind, would be taken as an admission of the very worst.' Even this daring impudence did not rouse me, did not waken me ; through the whole terrible affair I do not think I was ever as much excited	whom he was ever at sea he never met more than oue who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. "It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass spread, and were sailing three feet for our two. A great feeling of despondency came over me as I saw this, and thought of my young wife standing there in front of me and the fate that might be in stere for her; then to increase the danger, the brigs opene d fire, and 'a shot came skipping afterus, but fell short. In a few minutes more they fired again; aud now it was evident that we should soon be in range, and I	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, Frazce, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 360,000the number of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink. Three hundred and sixty thou- sand a year ! In an average genera- tion of thirty-three years the num- ber is nearly 12,000,000 (11,880,000). In the lifetime of a man of seventy years the aggregate death roll will reach the amazing figure of over 25,000,000 (25,200,000). Remember in looking at these stupendous figures, that they represent not the number of drinkers who have died, but the number who were killed by drink.
goods can have them made up in GOOD STULE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- factor has been given in the past and 1 can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. McDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLINEERY. There inst opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's SPERING MAILLINGERY with all the newest trimmings. Also an as- soit of the analysis of the satistic states is and children's of the satistic states of the satistic states and Lowest prices. And work done promptly and in first class states BENEE E. WRIGHT. Mate Messers. It. Williston & Co., Jewelers New sates, April 18, 1893. SCHOORTCHADADOL Miss Annie Nicholson is prepared to receive a limited number of pupils for instruction in the above. Terms will be made known on application.	What         Image: Constant and Children. It contains not other Narcotic substance.         Sasteria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher and Children. It contains not other Narcotic substance.         Sar Paregorie, Drops, Soother It is Pleasant. Its guarant hillions of Mothers. Castoria feverisiness. Castoria preventing troubles, cures of castoria assimilates the for and bowels, giving health toria is the Children's Pane.         Castoria is an excellent medicino for children's contains of the children's pane.	at is OCCAPTION OF A STATE OF A	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alone, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and den't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the country was subject to a discount. This made it necessary for me to keep a record of the bills that we received and their numbers on each account, so that a man could be credited with the amount for which the mouey he paid us in pass- ed current at our bank. It was a heavy, cumbrous system, and attended by heavy risks from failures of which nothing is known nowadays. 'All right,' drawing out hns wallet.—	<ul> <li>might be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>4 I locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>1 told the servant to take in word that I wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding ; any way she smiled very knowingly and said: 'I hope you'll have fine weather and good lick on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill?' she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I ssid, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.' 'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and in a few seconds the head of the firm entered smiling. He, no doubt thought my anxiety to see him was connected with my marnage.</li> <li>'When he heard my story he was grave enough. Twelve hundred dollars gone?' said he, frowning.</li> <li>'Gone,' I said like an echo.</li> <li>'And the number of the notes gone with the money?' said he, looking me full in the face, with a heavier frown.</li> <li>'Not a trace left of the paper on which I took the numbers.'</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.' 'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little or nothing beyond helpless and numb- ed. Before I left that evening Briggs rent me a note begging me, for my own sake, not to think of bolting ! 'Bolting,' said he, 'in a case of this kind, would be taken as an admission of the very worst.' Even this daring impudence did not rouse me, did not waken me ; through the whole terrible affair I do not think I was ever as much excited as I an now. 'Next day Mr. Henderson said not a	when he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. "It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass spread, and were sailing three feet for our two. A great feeling of despondency came over me as I saw this, and thought of my young wife standing there in front of me and the fate that might be in store for her; then to increase the danger, the brigs opene d fire, and 'a shot came skipping afterus, but fell short. In a few minutes more they fired again; aud now it was evident that we should soon be in range, and I called my wife to go below; but she refused to do so. Another shot came	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each, year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 360,000-the number of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink. Three hundred and sixty thou- sand a year ! In an average genera- tion of thirty-three years the num- ber is nearly 12,000,000 (11,880,000). In the lifetime of a man of seventy years the aggregate death roll will reach the amazing figure of over 25,000,000 (25,200,000). Remember in looking at these stupendous figures, that they represent not the number of drinkers who have died, but the number the estimate is based upon reliable data furnished by one of the best scientific associatione
<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	What What What What What What What What	at is COPPICATION AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AN	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alonc, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and den't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the itens,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the country was subject to a discount. This mide it necessary for me to keep a record of the bills that we received and the'r numbers on each account, so that a man could be credited with the amount for which the money he paid us in pass- ed current at our bank. It was a heavy, cumbrous system, and attended by heavy risks from failures of which nothing is known nowadays. 'All right,' drawing out hns wallet.— 'It won't take you but a minute. There	<ul> <li>might be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>'1 locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take in word that 1 wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding ; any way she smiled very knowingly and said : '1 hope you'll have fue weather and good luck on your holiday, Mr. Aikright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill? she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I ssid, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.' 'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and in a few seconds the head of the fine metered smiling. He, no doubt thought my anxiety to see him was connected with my marriage.</li> <li>'When he heard my story he was grave enough. Twelve hundred dollars gone?' said he, frowning.</li> <li>'Gone,' I said like an echo.</li> <li>'And the number of the notes gone with the money ?' said he, looking me full in the face, with a heavier frown.</li> <li>'Not a trace left of the paper on which I took the numbers.'</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.' 'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little or nothing beyond helpless and numb- ed. Before I left that evening Briggs rent me a note begging me, for my own sake, not to think of bolting ! 'Bolting,' said he, 'in a case of this kind, would be taken as an admission of the very- worst.' Even this daring impudence did not rouse me, did not waken me ; through the whole terrible affair I do not think I was ever as much cxcited as I an now. 'Next day Mr. Hendercon said not a syllable about employing the volice or	whom he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. "It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass spread, and were sailing three feet for our two. A great feeling of despondency came over me as I saw this, and thought of my young wife standing there in front of me and the fate that might be in stere for her; then to increase the danger, the brigs opene d fire, and 'a shot came skipping afterus, but fell short. In a few minutes more they fired again; aud now it was evident that we should soon be in range, and I called my wife to go below; but she refused to do so. Another shot came closer to us than any urevious one and	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each, year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 360,000the number of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink. Three hundred and sixty thou- sand a year ! In an average genera- tion of thirty-three years the num- ber is nearly 12,000,000 (11,880,000). In the lifetime of a man of seventy years the aggregate death roll will reach the amazing figure of over 25,000,000 (25,200,000). Remember in looking at these stupendous ligures, that they represent not the number of trinkers who have died, but the number who were killed by drink. Remember the estimate is based upon reliable data furnished by one of the best estimate is based upon reliable data furnisher by one of the carth- Remember
goods can have them made up in GOOD STULE and Cheaper than elsewhere. Perfect Satis- faction has been given in the past and 1 can guarantee the same in the future. J. R. McDONALD. Newcastle Sept. 1862, MILLINEERY. Thave just opened a beautiful line of Ladies and Children's SPRINC MILLINFERY With all the newest trimmings. Also an as- sortment of plain and spot pongee sitk, surch sitk and jet, suitvible for dress trimmings. Ladies silk and muslin Neckties, Aprons and Latest Novelties and Lowest prices. All work done promptly and in first class style Mext Messrs. H. Williston & Co., Jewelers. New castle, April 18, 1893. Miss Annie Nicholson is prepared to receive a limited number of pupils for instruction in the above. Terms will be made known on application.	What         Image: Constant as presented by the constant as presented by the constant as the constan	at is COPPICATION AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AN	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alonc, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door; 'you'll ruin your health and den't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the itens,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the country was subject to a discount. This mide it necessary for me to keep a record of the bills that we received and the'r numbers on each account, so that a man could be credited with the amount for which the money he paid us in pass- ed current at our bank. It was a heavy, cumbrous system, and attended by heavy risks from failures of which nothing is known nowadays. 'All right,' drawing out hns wallet.— 'It won't take you but a minute. There are just thirteen bills—eleven hundreds	<ul> <li>might be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>'1 locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take in word that 1 wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding ; any way she smiled very knowingly and said : '1 hope you'll have fine weather and good lick on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill? she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I suid, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.' 'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and in a few seconds the head of the firm entered smiling. He, no doubt thought my anxiety to see him was connected with my marriage.</li> <li>'When he heard my story he was grave enough. Twelve hundred dollars gone?' said he, frowning.</li> <li>'Gone,' I said like an echo.</li> <li>'And the number of the notes gone with the money?' said he, looking me full in the face, with a heavier frown.</li> <li>'Not a trace left of the paper on which I took the numbers.''</li> </ul>	<ul> <li>ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day.</li> <li>'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Henderson's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor.</li> <li>'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stoci, he should be obliged to take action.</li> <li>'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little or nothing beyond helpless and numbed. Before I left that evening Briggs rent me a note begging me, for my own sake, not to think of bolting ! 'Bolting,' said he, 'in a case of this kind, would be taken as an admission of the veryworst.' Even this daring impudence did not rouse me, did not waken me ; through the whole terrible affair I do not think I was ever as much excited as I an now.</li> </ul>	whom he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. "It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass spread, and were sailing three feet for our two. A great feeling of despondency came over me as I saw this, and thought of my young wife standing there in front of me and the fate that might be in store for her; then to increase the danger, the brigs opene d fire, and 'a shot came skipping afterus, but fell short. In a few minutes more they fired again; aud now it was evident that we should soon be in range, and I called my wife to go below; but she refused to do so. Another shot came closer to us than any previous one, and I shouted to double their exertions : but	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each, year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 360,000the number of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink. Three hundred and sixty thou- sand a year ! In an average genera- tion of thirty-three years the num- ber is nearly 12,000,000 (11,880,000). In the lifetime of a man of seventy years the aggregate death roll will reach the amazing figure of over 25,000,000 (25,200,000). Remember in looking at these stupendous figures, that they represent not the number of drinkers who have died, but the number who were killed by drink. Remember the estimate is based upon reliable data furnished by one of the best scientific associationes on the face of the carth- Remember that in these figures is not included the
<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	What What What When When When When When When When When	<section-header><section-header></section-header></section-header>	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alonc, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and den't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the itens,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the country was subject to a discount. This mide it necessary for me to keep a record of the bills that we received and the'r numbers on each account, so that a man could be credited with the amount for which the money he paid us in pass- ed current at our bank. It was a heavy, cumbrous system, and attended by heavy risks from failures of which nothing is known nowadays. 'All right,' drawing out hns wallet.— 'It won't take you but a minute. There	<ul> <li>might be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>'1 locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take in word that 1 wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding ; any way she smiled very knowingly and said : '1 hope you'll have fine weather and good lick on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill? she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I suid, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.' 'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and in a few seconds the head of the firm entered smiling. He, no doubt thought my anxiety to see him was connected with my marriage.</li> <li>'When he heard my story he was grave enough. Twelve hundred dollars gone?' said he, frowning.</li> <li>'Gone,' I said like an echo.</li> <li>'And the number of the notes gone with the money?' said he, looking me full in the face, with a heavier frown.</li> <li>'Not a trace left of the paper on which I took the numbers.''</li> </ul>	<ul> <li>ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day.</li> <li>'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Henderson's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor.</li> <li>'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action.</li> <li>'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little or nothing beyond helpless and numbed. Before I left that evening Briggs rent me a note begging me, for my own sake, not to think of bolting ! 'Bolting,' said he, 'in a case of this kind, would be taken as an admission of the veryworst.' Even this daring impudence did not rouse me, did not waken me ; through the whole terrible affair I do not think I was ever as much excited as I an now.</li> <li>'Next day Mr. Henderson said not a syllable about employing the police or indeed about the affair at all, nor did he, as far as I knew, take steps in the</li> </ul>	whom he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. "It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass spread, and were sailing three feet for our two. A great feeling of despondency came over me as I saw this, and thought of my young wife standing there in front of me and the fate that might be in store for her; then to increase the danger, the brigs opene d fire, and 'a shot came skipping afterus, but fell short. In a few minutes more they fired again; aud now it was evident that we should soon be in range, and I called my wife to go below; but she refused to do so. Another shot came closer to us than any previous one, and I shouted to double their exertions; but they, unable to cope with the work in	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each, year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 360,000the number of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink. Three hundred and sixty thou- sand a year ! In an average genera- tion of thirty-three years the num- ber is nearly 12,000,000 (11,880,000). In the lifetime of a man of seventy years the aggregate death roll will reach the amazing figure of over 25,000,000 (25,200,000). Remember in looking at these stupendous figures, that they represent not the number of drinkers who have died, but the number who were killed by drink. Remember the estimate is based upon reliable data furnished by one of the best scientific associations on the face of the carth- Remember that in these figures is not included the large but indeterminate number of those
<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	<text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text>	<section-header></section-header>	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alone, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and den't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the itens,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the country was subject to a discount. This mide it necessary for me to keep a record of the bills that we received and the'r numbers on each account, so that a man could be credited with the amount for which the money he paid us in pass- ed current at our bank. It was a heavy, cumbrous system, and attended by heavy risks from failures of which nothing is known nowadays. 'All right,' drawing out hns wallet.— 'It won't take you but a minute. There are just thirteen bills—eleven hundreds and two fifties, all of three Philadelphia	<ul> <li>night be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>'I locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take in word that the wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said: 'I hope tyou'll have fine weather and good luck on your holiday, Mr. Aikright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill? she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I said, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.'</li> <li>'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and, in a few seconds the head of the firm entered smiling. He, no doubt thought my anxiety to see him was connected with my marnage.</li> <li>'When he heard my story he was grave enough. Twelve hundred dollars gone?' said he, frowning.</li> <li>'Gone,' I said like an echo.</li> <li>'And the number of the notes gone with the money ?' said he, looking me full in the face, with a heavier frown.</li> <li>'Not a trace left of the paper on which I took the numbers.'</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the polec that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.' 'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little or nothing beyond helpless and numb- ed. Before I left that evening Briggs rent me a note begging me, for my own sake, not to think of bolting ! 'Bolting,' said he, 'in a case of this kind, would be taken as an admission of the very worst.' Even this daring impudence did not rouse me, did not waken me; through the whole terrible affair I do not think I was ever as much excited as I am now. 'Next day Mr. Hendercon said not a syllable about the affair at all, nor did he, as far as I knew, take steps in the matter. On the day following he made.	whom he was ever at sea he never met more than oue who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass spread, and were sailing three feet for our two. A great feeling of despondency came over me as I saw this, and thought of my young wife standing there in front of me and the fate that might be in store for her; then to increase the danger, the brigs opene d fire, and 'a shot came skipping afterus, but fell short. In a few minutes more they fired again; aud now it was evident that we should soon be in range, and I called my wife to go below; but she refused to do so. Another shot came closer to us than any previous one, and I shouted to double their exertions; but they, unable to cope with the work in hand. auswerel that they wanted help.	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 260,000the number of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink. Three hundred and sixty thou- sand a year ! In an average genera- tion of thirty-three years the num- ber is nearly 12,000,000 (11,880,000). In the lifetime of a man of seventy years the aggregate death roll will reach the amazing figure of over 25,000,000 (25,200,000). Remember in looking at these stupendous figures, that they represent not the number of drinkers who have died, but the number who were killed by drink. Remember the estimate is based upon reliable data furnished by one of the best scientific associatione on the face of the carth- Bemember that in these figures is not included the large but indeterminate number of those dying as the result of inherited defects dying as the result of inherited defects
<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	<text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text>	<section-header><section-header><text><text><text></text></text></text></section-header></section-header>	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alone, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and den't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the country was subject to a discount. This made it necessary for me to keep a record of the bills that we received and their numbers on each account, so that a man could be credited with the amount for which the money he paid us in pass- ed current at our bank. It was a heavy, cumbrous system, and attended by heavy risks from failures of which nothing is known nowadays. 'All right,' drawing out his wallet.— 'It won't take you but a minute. There are just thirteen bills—eleven hundreds and two fifties, all of three Philadelphia banks and good money, too.' 'I soon completed the transaction by handing Briggs an acknowledgement	<ul> <li>might be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>i locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take in word that I wished to see Mr. Henderson most, particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding ; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said: 'I hope you'll have fine weather and good lick on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill? she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I said, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.' 'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and in a few seconds the head of the firm entered smiling. He, no doubt thought my anxiety to see him was connected with my marnage.</li> <li>'When he heard my story he was grave enough. Twelve hundred dollars t gone?' said he, frowning.</li> <li>'Gone,' I said like an echo.</li> <li>'And the number of the notes gone with the money?' said he, looking me full in the face, with a heavier frown.</li> <li>'Not a trace left of the paper on which I took the numbers.'</li> <li>'Are you sure no one but Briggs could have entered the counting room?' he asked.</li> <li>'Perfectly sure. All the doors communicating with the other parts of the</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the polec that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.' 'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little or nothing beyond helpless and numb- ed. Before I left that evening Briggs rent me a note begging me, for my own sake, not to think of bolting ! 'Bolting,' said he, 'in a case of this kind, would be taken as an admission of the very worst.' Even this daring impudence did not rouse me, did not waken me; through the whole terrible affair I do not think I was ever as much excited as I am now. 'Next day Mr. Hendercon said not a syllable about employing the police or indeed about the affair at all, nor did he, as far as I knew, take steps in the matter. On the day following he made an astonishing annoancement. Ife	whom he was ever at sea he never met more than oue who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass spread, and were sailing three feet for our two. A great feeling of despondency came over me as I saw this, and thought of my young wife standing there in front of me and the fate that might be in store for her; then to increase the danger, the brigs opene d fire, and 'a shot came skipping afterus, but fell short. In a few minutes more they fired again; aud now it was evident that we should soon be in range, and I called my wife to go below; but she refused to do so. Another shot came closer to us than any previous one, and I shouted to double their exertions; but they, unable to cope with the work in hand, answere I that they wanted help. There was only myself who could aid	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, France, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 260,000the number of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink. Three hundred and sixty thou- sand a year 1 In an average genera- tion of thirty-three years the num- ber is nearly 12,000,000 (11,880,000). In the lifetime of a man of seventy years the aggregate death roll will reach the amazing figure of over 25,000,000 (25,200,000). Remember in looking at these stupendous figures, that they represent not the number of drinkers who have died, but the number who were killed by drink. Remember the estimate is based upon reliable data furnished by one of the best scientific associatione on the face of the carth. Remember that in these figures is not included the large but indeterminate number of those dying as the result of inherited defects due to drink, or the result of rinken and negligence on the part of drunken men
<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	<text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	<section-header><section-header><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></section-header></section-header>	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alonc, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and den't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the country was subject to a discount. This mide it necessary for me to keep a record of the bills that we received and their numbers on each account, so that a man could be credited with the amount for which the money he paid us in pass- ed current at our bank. It was a heavy, cumbrous system, and attended by heavy risks from failures of which nothing is known nowadays. 'All right,' drawing out hs wallet.— 'It won't take you but a minute. There are just thirteen bills—eleven hundreds and two fifties, all of three Philadelphia banks and goed money, too.' 'I soon completed the transaction by handing Briggs an acknowledgement of the receipt of twelve hundred dollars	<ul> <li>might be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>4 I locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take m word that I wished to see Mr. Henderson most, particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding ; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said: 'I hope you'll have fine weather and good luck on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill? she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I ssid, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.' 'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and in a few seconds the head of the firm entered smiling. He, no doubt thought my anxiety to see him was connected with my marriage.</li> <li>'When he heard my story he was grave enough. Twelve hundred dollars gone?' said he, frowning.</li> <li>'Gone,' I said like an echo.</li> <li>'And the number of the notes gone with the money ?' said he, looking me full in the face, with a heavier frown.</li> <li>'Not a trace left of the paper on which I took the numbers.'</li> <li>'Are you sure no one but Briggs could have entered the counting room ?' he acked.</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stoo i, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.' 'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little or nothing beyond helpless and numb- ed. Before I left that evening Briggs rent me a note begging me, for my own sake, not to think of bolting ! 'Bolting,' said he, 'in a case of this kind, would be taken as an admission of the very worst.' Even this daring impudence did not rouse me, did not waken me ; through the whole terrible affair I do not think I was ever as much excited as I am now. 'Next day Mr. Hendercon said not a syllable about employing the police or indeed about the affair at all, nor did he, as far as I knew, take steps in the matter. On the day following he made an astonishing announcement. Ife called Briggs and me into his private office, and saat:	whom he was ever at sea he never met more than oue who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. "It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass spread, and were sailing three feet for our two. A great feeling of despondency came over me as I saw this, and thought of my young wife standing there in front of me and the fate that might be in store for her; then to increase the danger, the brigs opene d fire, and 'a shot came skipping afterus, but fell short. In a few minutes more they fired again; aud now it was evident that we should soon be in range, and I called my wife to go below; but she refused to do so. Another shot came closer to us than any previous one, and I shouted to double their exertions; but they, unable to cope with the work in hand, answerel that they wanted help. There was only myself who could aid them, and I dare not leave the wheel.	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, Frazce, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 360,000the number of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink. Three hundred and sixty thou- sand a year ! In an average genera- tion of thirty-three years the num- ber is nearly 12,000,000 (11,880,000). In the lifetime of a man of seventy years the aggregate death roll will reach the amazing figure of over 25,000,000 (25,200,000). Remember in looking at these stupendous figures, that they represent not the number of drinkers who have died, but the number who were killed by drink. Remember the estimate is based upon reliable data furnished by one of the best scientific associatione on the face of the carth- Remember that in these figures is not included the large but indeterminate number of those dying as the result of inherited defects due to drink, or the result of crime and negligence on the part of drunken men and women. Remember that the esti- mate above is lower by one half than the
<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	<text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	<section-header><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></section-header>	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alonc, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and den't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the country was subject to a discount. This mide it necessary for me to keep a record of the bills that we received and their numbers on each account, so that a man could be credited with the amount for which the money he paid us in pass- ed current at our bank. It was a heavy, cumbrous system, and attended by heavy risks from failures of which nothing is known nowadays. 'All right,' drawing out hs wallet.— 'It won't take you but a minute. There are just thirteen bills—eleven hundreds and two fifties, all of three Philadelphia banks and good money, too.' 'I scon completed the transaction by handing Briggs an acknowledgement of the account of collections and asked	<ul> <li>might be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>'1 locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take m word that I wished to see Mr. Henderson most, particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding ; any way she smiled very knowingly and said: '1 hope you'll have fine weather and good luck on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill? she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I ssid, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.' 'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and in a few seconds the head of the firm entered smiling. He, no doubt thought my anxiety to see him was connected with my marnage.</li> <li>'When he heard my story he was grave enough. Twelve hundred dollars gone?' said he, frowning.</li> <li>'Gone,' I said like an echo.</li> <li>'And the number of the notes gone with the money?' said he, looking me full in the face, with a heavier frown.</li> <li>'Not a trace left of the paper on which I took the numbers.'</li> <li>'Are you sure no one but Briggs could have entered the counting room?' he acked.</li> <li>'Perfectly sure. All the doors communicating with the other parts of the house were shut, had been locked for the night, and I had not been outside</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.' 'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little or nothing beyond helpless and numb- ed. Before I left that evening Briggs rent me a note begging me, for my own sake, not to think of bolting ! 'Bolting,' said he, 'in a case of this kind, would be taken as an admission of the very worst.' Even this daring impudence did not rouse me, did not waken me ; through the whole terrible affair I do not think I was ever as much excited as I am now. 'Next day Mr. Hendercon said not a syllable about employing the police or indeed about the affair at all, nor did he, as far as I knew, take steps in the matter. On the day following he made an astonishing announcement. He called Briggs and me into his private office, and said :	when he was ever at sea he never met more than oue who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. "It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass spread, and were sailing three feet for our two. A great feeling of despondency came over me as I saw this, and thought of my young wife standing there in front of me and the fate that might be in store for her; then to increase the danger, the brigs opene d fire, and 'a shot came skipping afterus, but fell short. In a few minutes more they fired again; aud now it was evident that we should soon be in range, and I called my wife to go below; but she refused to do so. Another shot came closer to us than any previous one, and I shouted to double their exertions; but they, unable to cope with the work in hand, answerel that they wanted help. There was only myself who could aid them, and I dare not leave the wheel. We were sailing close to the wind, and	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each, year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, Frace, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 360,000the number of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink. Three hundred and sixty thou- sand a year ! In an average genera- tion of thirty-three years the num- ber is nearly 12,000,000 (11,880,000). In the lifetime of a man of seventy years the aggregate death roll will reach the amazing figure of over 25,000,000 (25,200,000). Remember in looking at these stupendous figures, that they represent not the number of drinkers who have died, but the number the estimate is based upon reliable data furnishet by one of the best scientific associatione on the face of the carth- Bemember that in these figures is not included the large but indeterminate number of those dying as the result of inherited defects due to drink, or the result of crime and negligence on the part of drunken nem- and women. Remember that the esti- mate above is lower by one half than the usual estimate given of all persons slain
<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alonc, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and den't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the country was subject to a discount. This mide it necessary for me to keep a record of the bills that we received and their numbers on each account, so that a man could be credited with the amount for which the money he paid us in pass- ed current at our bank. It was a heavy, cumbrous system, and attended by heavy risks from failures of which nothing is known nowadays. 'All right,' drawing out his wallet.— 'It won't take you but a minute. There are just thirteen bills—eleven hundreds and two fifties, all of three Philadelphia banks and good money, too.' 'I scon completed the transaction by handing Briggs an acknowledgement of the account of collections and asked him it he had any entry of the numbers	<ul> <li>might be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>i locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take in word that I wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding ; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said : 'I hope you'll have fine weather and good linck on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill? she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I said, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.' 'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and in a few seconds the head of the firm entered smiling. He, no doubt thought my anxiety to see him was connected with my marnage.</li> <li>'When he heard my story he was grave enough. Twelve hundred dollars to gone?' said he, frowning.</li> <li>'Gone,' I said like an echo.</li> <li>'And the number of the notes gone with the money?' said he, looking me full in the face, with a heavier frown.</li> <li>'Not a trace left of the paper on which I took the numbers.'</li> <li>'Are you sure no one but Briggs could have entered the counting room?' he asked.</li> <li>'Perfectly sure. All the doors communicating with the other parts of the night, and I had not been outside the counting house since luncheon.'</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.' 'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little or nothing beyond helpless and numb- ed. Before I left that evening Briggs rent me a note begging me, for my own sake, not to think of bolting ! 'Bolting,' said he, 'in a case of this kind, would be taken as an admission of the very worst.' Even this daring impudence did not rouse me, did not waken me ; through the whole terrible affair I do not think I was ever as much excited as I am now. 'Next day Mr. Hendercon said not a syllable about employing the police or indeed about the affair at all, nor did he, as far as I knew, take steps in the matter. On the day following he made an astonishing announcement. Ife called Briggs and me into his private office, and said :— 'The present is the first time in the bistory of our time, that anything of	whom he was ever at sea he never met more than oue who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass spread, and were sailing three feet for our two. A great feeling of despondency came over me as I saw this, and thought of my young wife standing there in front of me and the fate that might be in store for her; then to increase the danger, the brigs opened fire, and 'a shot came skipping afterus, but fell short. In a few minutes more they fired again; aud now it was evident that we should soon be in range, and I called my wife to go below; but she refused to do so. Another shot came closer to us than any previous one, and I shouted to double their exertions; but they, unable to cope with the work in hand, answerel that they wanted help. There was only myself who could aid them, and I dare not heave the wheel. We were sailing close to the wind, and any deviation from our course might throw all sails aback and be our ruin.	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, Frazce, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 360,000the number of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink. Three hundred and sixty thou- sand a year ! In an average genera- tion of thirty-three years the num- ber is nearly 12,000,000 (11,880,000). In the lifetime of a man of seventy years the aggregate death roll will reach the amazing figure of over 25,000,000 (25,200,000). Remember in looking at these stupendous ligures, that they represent not the number of drinkers who have died, but the number who were killed by drink. Remember the estimate is based upon reliable data furnished by one of the best scientific associatione on the face of the carth. Remember that in these figures is not included the large but indeterminate number of those dying as the result of inherited defacts due to drink, or the result of crime and negligence on the part of drunken men and women. Remember that the esti- mate above is lower by one half than the usual estimate given of all persons slain by drink. And remember that the esti- mate above is lower by one half than the usual estimate given of all persons slain
<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	<section-header><text><text><section-header><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></section-header></text></text></section-header>	safe over night. 'There was nothing to do but go down and open the door, of course, but I was very much put out about it, as I was anxious to get away to my sweetheart.— His coming with money meant delay.— 'What ! working at this hour and all alonc, old man ?' he cried, as I opened the street door ; 'you'll ruin your health and den't get paid for extra time either. I was glad to see a light as I came along, for I have no hankering to carry twelve bundred dollars home and guarantee it to the firm against loss. Out of town collecting is slow work.' 'The safe here is better than nothing,' I answered shortly, 'but the best place is the bank. Let me have the items,' and I prepared to make a memorandum of the amounts, and numbers and face value of the bills. The state banks at that time issued money, which, perhaps, in the vicinity of the bank passed at its value, but in remoter sections of the country was subject to a discount. This mide it necessary for me to keep a record of the bills that we received and their numbers on each account, so that a man could be credited with the amount for which the money he paid us in pass- ed current at our bank. It was a heavy, cumbrous system, and attended by heavy risks from failures of which nothing is known nowadays. 'All right,' drawing out hs wallet.— 'It won't take you but a minute. There are just thirteen bills—eleven hundreds and two fifties, all of three Philadelphia banks and good money, too.' 'I scon completed the transaction by handing Briggs an acknowledgement of the account of collections and asked	<ul> <li>might be in jail, charged with stealing the money or being an accomplice in the robbery.</li> <li>i locked the office, telegraphed to Mary that I had been unexpectedly delayed, jumped into a hansom, and drove to Henderson's house.</li> <li>I told the servant to take in word that I wished to see Mr. Henderson most particularly. I suppose she had heard about my wedding ; anyway she smiled very knowingly and said : 'I hope you'll have fine weather and good linck on your holiday, Mr. Arkright, though it is rather late in the year to expect fine weather. Gracious are you ill? she cried at the end. I dare say that my face told tales.</li> <li>'Not ill,' I said, but anxious to see Mr. Henderson at once, if ycu please.' 'She showed me into the library, hurried off, and in a few seconds the head of the firm entered smiling. He, no doubt thought my anxiety to see him was connected with my marnage.</li> <li>'When he heard my story he was grave enough. Twelve hundred dollars to gone?' said he, frowning.</li> <li>'Gone,' I said like an echo.</li> <li>'And the number of the notes gone with the money?' said he, looking me full in the face, with a heavier frown.</li> <li>'Not a trace left of the paper on which I took the numbers.'</li> <li>'Are you sure no one but Briggs could have entered the counting room?' he asked.</li> <li>'Perfectly sure. All the doors communicating with the other parts of the night, and I had not been outside the counting house since luncheon.'</li> </ul>	ual time gave orders for another search. It was quite unavailing. No tale or tidings of the cash came that day. 'No secret was made of the affair in the office, and as the hours went on I became confident that in Mr. Hender- son's eyes I was a criminal. I don't know how it happened, but I did not feel this much. I did not feel anything much. I was in a dream, a stupor. 'Late in the afternoon Mr. Henderson called me into his office, and told me that considering everything, he did not intend placing the affair in the hands of the police that day, but that if to-morrow's sun went down upon matters as they now stool, he should be obliged to take action. 'The loss of the money, I could bear,' said he, 'but the ingratitude I will not stand.' 'This was as good as accusing me of the robbery. Again I wonder that I was not more put out, but I felt little or nothing beyond helpless and numb- ed. Before I left that evening Briggs rent me a note begging me, for my own sake, not to think of bolting ! 'Bolting,' said he, 'in a case of this kind, would be taken as an admission of the very worst.' Even this daring impudence did not rouse me, did not waken me ; through the whole terrible affair I do not think I was ever as much excited as I am now. 'Next day Mr. Hendercon said not a syllable about employing the police or indeed about the affair at all, nor did he, as far as I knew, take steps in the matter. On the day following he made an astonishing announcement. Ife called Briggs and me into his private office, and said :— 'The present is the first time in the bistory of our time, that anything of	whom he was ever at sea he never met more than one who could refrain from asking questions in moments of extreme peril and urgency. That one was his wite; and elsewhere in his autobiography he pays another tribute to her courageous disposition. He had just ridden out a gale with much difficulty in the Indian Ocean, when he was sighted by two Dutch brigs-of-war, which immediately gave chase. He ordered all sail spread; but his ship was insufficiently manned. and much precious time was lost. "It was morning, and my wife had come on deck, and stood with my glass in her hand looking at the two brigs, while I had taken the wheel, so as to spare every man for the urgent work aloft. Every minute I glanced back over my shoulder to see the position of the enemy. They had every stitch of canvass spread, and were sailing three feet for our two. A great feeling of despondency came over me as I saw this, and thought of my young wife standing there in front of me and the fate that might be in store for her; then to increase the danger, the brigs opene d fire, and 'a shot came skipping afterus, but fell short. In a few minutes more they fired again; aud now it was evident that we should soon be in range, and I called my wife to go below; but she refused to do so. Another shot came closer to us than any previous one, and I shouted to double their exertions; but they, unable to cope with the work in hand, answere! that they wanted help. There was only myself who could aid them, and I dare not leave the wheel. We were sailing close to the wind, and any deviation from our course might	The number is about the same for the United States, estimating on the basis of the ratio of absolute alcohol consumed in the two coun- tries. Thirty thousand killed each year in the United States, 30,000 more in England. Let us go further. In the report of the Swiss federal council in 1885, after a special and exhaustive investigation, it appears that the amount of alcohol consum- ed in the countries of Canada, Nor- way and Sweden, United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Austro- Hungary, Frazce, Russia, German Zollverein, Belgium, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Denmark is 676,724,985 gallons, or about six times as much as in England and the United States alone. The same amount of absolute alcohol can be safely reckoned as causing an equal amount of mortality on an aver- age, in all these countries. Six times 60,000 equals 360,000the number of deaths each year caused in these countries by drink. Three hundred and sixty thou- sand a year ! In an average genera- tion of thirty-three years the num- ber is nearly 12,000,000 (11,880,000). In the lifetime of a man of seventy years the aggregate death roll will reach the amazing figure of over 25,000,000 (25,200,000). Remember in looking at these stupendous ligures, that they represent not the number of drinkers who have died, but the number who were killed by drink. Remember the estimate is based upon reliable data furnished by one of the best scientific associatione on the face of the carth. Remember that in these figures is not included the large but indeterminate number of those dying as the result of inherited defacts due to drink, or the result of crime and negligence on the part of drunken men and women. Remember that the esti- mate above is lower by one half than the usual estimate given of all persons slain by drink. And remember that the esti- mate above is lower by one half than the usual estimate given of all persons slain

Dimension Lumber in hard and soft woods, Spool Wood, etc. JOHN MORRISON & Co.

Elm Tree, Polit Rocher, Nov. 19, 1892.

velope and laid the memorandum beside said he, is that you are to be married me on the desk.

'tomorrow. Of course your marriage

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

Spain, Italy, Portugal and oriental countries.

