A PLEA FOR PROHIBITION
Now so many people are talking and writing about prohibition I should like to give my version on the subject.

In the first place it's of no use quoting statistics because one could do so in favor of prohibition and against it.

I'm a man who has travelled the whole world over and I've seen things that would make the hardest adventurer disgusted.

I'm not what one would call a temperance crank. I have been through the mill and if anyone would have asked me a few short days ago what I was going to vote for, I should have said "Against Prohibition" and if you asked me why? my answer would have been, "My love of personal liberty and sociability."

But a change has taken place in me since those few short days and I have weighed those two up and found them wanting.

What is personal liberty when one's personal liberty is a menace to one's self and the community at large, and what does this so called sociability amount to?

When one's personal liberty becomes a menace to the society at large then it's up to the community to step in to save our mothers, wives and children.

Nine men out of ten who drink alcoholic beverages, do so for the effect, not to quench their thirst and in time that surly gets them.

Ask yourself the following questions:

What starts prostitution?
What leads young men to brothels?
What separates wives from their husbands?

What breaks up a happy home?
What keeps people in a state of poverty?

What leads men and women to prison, lunatic asylums and to an early grave?

One thing and one thing only, cursed drink.

Do we want the open bars and gin palaces that we have in London and other large cities and towns where men pile the gin, rum and whiskey down their throats until they are hopelessly drunk?

Do we want to see our wives and mothers with their babies at their breasts struggling with men to get near the bar counter to satisfy their craving for gin, etc? NO! GOD NO! That is what we have in London.

I will now tell you of one true story, I could tell you of scores but they all amount to the same thing.

A friend of mine who's profession was a Medical Doctor got married, had a beautiful home and in time three lovely children.

He started to drink. I could see that it was getting him, and I remonstrated with him, but to no avail. Three short years later I visited him, he had moved from his beautiful home which by the way had been taken to pay his debts to a squalid house in the slums of Stepney, London, where he rented one room. I shall never forget—no not if I live to be a hundred—the condition I found

Dear Sir:—
Yours of June 24th to hand, but as Mr. D. J. "The Miracle Man" Hailed As Picture Of Unusual Merit

New Paramount-Artcraft Film Has Most Powerful Heart Appeal

Hailed by critics as one of the greatest motion pictures ever produced, the Paramount-Artcraft feature, "The Miracle Man" will be displayed at the Happy Hour theatre on Wed. Thura. It is the screen version of George M. Cohan's play that opened so emphatically on Broadway some months ago, and which in turn was based on Frank L. Packard's famous novel. No picture in recent months has had so much praise lavished upon it for the dramatic quality of its story, its keen characterization, and beautiful photography.

The story of "The Miracle Man" centers around an old patriarch of the hills who has gained a reputation for his power to heal the sick and crippled. To him come a band of unscrupulous crooks from the slums of New York—Tom Burk, their leader; Rose, the Frog, and the Dope who have conceived the scheme of capitalizing the healer's gift and taking the money for themselves.

What follows is one of the most absorbing stories ever unfolded on the screen. In the hands of such talented players as Thomas Meighan, Elinor Fair, Betty Compson, Leo Chaney, and W. Lawson Pitt, the development of the chief characters under the influence of the deaf and blind patriarch is portrayed with admirable skill.
