Royal Standard Dragged Down--Where-abouts of King Manuel Doubtful--May be Prisoner--May be Fighting in Palace, Which was Bombarded— May be a Refugee on Board Warship-Navy and part of Army aiding Revolutionists.

Special to Evening Telegram. PARIS. Oct. 5.

Portugal, since yesterday, has been isolated from the rest of the world. Circuitous reports declare that the country is in the throes, of a violent zilian statesman must have been a revolution. All the Portuguese navy and part of the army are reported to have cast in their lots with the revolutionists. The Portuguese warships shelled the Royal Palace, while the land forces, after desperate fighting in the streets, dragged down the Royal Standard and raised the banner of the Republic. King Manuel is said to volutionary society, with branches in be a prisoner in the palace. Although a revolution, peaceful or accomplished with violence, was not unexpected, it is generally believed that the immediate cause was the assassination in the capital of Professor Bombardi, a Republican and deputy chief of the Liberal League, by a lieutenant of the army. So intense was the feel ing against the throne that this incident, comparatively trivial in itself, was sufficient to start the outbreak. had gradually increased since the dis-On September 20th, policemen raided a bomb factory and arrested ten persons.
