

Lord Morley's Advice

TO COLLEGE GRADUATES.

"Take Care of Your Time and Take Care You Do Not Throw Your Talents and Your Life Out of the Window at the Start."

Lord Morley, of Blackburn, attended a degree ceremony in the Whitworth Hall at the University in Manchester, and addressed the graduates and students. Lord Morley presided as Chancellor at the afternoon ceremony. In an opening speech he expressed his gratification at being present on such a day. It was, to his mind, always one of the most moving sights to see those who had done their best to equip themselves for the great journey of life setting upon it. "I am not going this afternoon," he continued, "to take up your time with any glorification of the new Universities which have to some degree taken the place, or widened the place, of the old Universities to which many of us here belong. I always look back upon Oxford, where I had the happiness to be trained, as the happiest portion of one's life. You are freed from the strict discipline of the school; you have not to bear the burden of the great responsibilities of life; you are acquiring knowledge; your delightful experiences are just as much the portion of you here in the great University of Manchester—because great it is and without arrogance we may contend that of the new Universities the University of Manchester is the foremost. (Applause.) The same sentiment does not yet exist possibly in the new Universities as existed or exists in the old. They have the surroundings of historic associations of infinite moment and infinite delight. Adaptability.

But, after all, one of the great advantages of the old Universities is yours also, and it is this University life, whether it be close, as it is in Oxford and Cambridge, or whether it be less close, as it necessarily is here, opens the eyes of the young men and women to new worlds. They perceive that their own home life, delectable as it is, dear as it is, does not include all the conditions of human existence. And I should have thought that in a business city like Manchester, and in the business communities that surround Manchester, the students here, the feeling that University life inspires adaptability or widened adaptability to conditions is an enormous gain in all the pursuits of which these countries are the home. I shall have the honor of conferring degrees upon doctors, lawyers, upon many who are going to teach. We have also, by the way, the honor of conferring an honorary degree upon a very distinguished and successful member of the teaching profession—Mr. Page. I do not believe the world will have found its true balance till it has recognized that the school teacher, and, of course, the professional teacher, are the most important agents in the diffusion of knowledge and the formation of character. Then I suppose the majority of those who will take their full degree today are going into the profession of medicine. From my various circumstances I am pretty well acquainted with that profession. I know its defects—(laughter)—but I am sure those defects will not exist in any of the medical graduates I am to give degrees to by and by. But the power of the doctor in dealing with difficulties in human life is really only second—and perhaps it is not second—to that of those who take degrees in theology. We won't enter into any competition of that kind to-day. Many of you will go abroad to Australia, to Canada, and so forth. What a thought it is that the ideas, the thoughts, the habits of mind that you have acquired here in Manchester you may be the agents for distributing, with improvements, all over the surface of the habitable globe.

SALMONIER, To-day.
Sir Edward arrived last evening. A dozen flags showed due respect to his office, otherwise there prevails a significant silence almost painful, later becoming amusing. The Premier and party did not appear in public after his arrival. He held no meeting and left for St. Mary's this morning.

I suppose some of you may go into politics. If you are on the right side, I hope you all will. (Laughter.) But whether in politics or literature, in your reading, your judgment of books in politics—your judgment of men and policies—see both sides. But not on the polling day. (Laughter.) The polling day is a different kind of day from any other day. But see both sides, try and understand both sets of argument, be sure that you give the final balance and preponderance to the right set of arguments. Some people may say, "I am for Wordsworth as a poet," someone else "I am for someone else as a poet." Have preferences, but do not have exclusions. I could go on and give you, I hope and think, a good deal of advice. But of course the first piece of advice that one has to give to anybody, especially to young men and young women who are coming out into the battle of life, is to take care of time. Of all things, a waste of time, the diffusion and dispersion of interest through waste of time, is the deadliest disability that can overtake any human character. Another piece of advice—take care you do not throw your talents and your life out of the window at the start. Those two admonitions only amount after all to "work hard, stick to your interests, and then watch what the consequences of your acts will be."

Has the Dough.

A business man of St. John's, yesterday had a communication from the principal of the P. J. Healey Co. He has been a contractor for years has dug out the subways and streets of New York, and is now a wealthy man. His son is now President of the P. J. Healey Co., the firm captained by his father. They are fine people and the principal timekeeper with him is a Newfoundlander. Some excellent engineering work has been done by Mr. Healey within the past few years and his business and fortune up to date, we hear, could be valued at $700,000. That's the kind of Newfoundlander we want to hear from.

Bruin Very Much In Evidence.

Vet. Donnelly who arrived yesterday from that place, says that out from about the capture of the bears near Badger, is not quite correct but that the animals during the past week or so have become a positive danger. In that time they have invaded the camps of the men out in the woods, have got away with flour, pork, beef, etc., and are bold enough to attack people unless they are well armed. Some of these days Bruin will get a warm reception.

Met With an Accident.

While returning home from the C. of E. picnic on Wednesday evening, Cecil Adams, a twelve year old boy, met with an accident. Cecil, in company with a number of other youths, was being driven in a four wheeled truck when he suddenly fell out. One of the wheels passed over his leg near the ankle. He bore the pain manfully until driven home and attended by a doctor. It is thought one of the small bones of the leg is fractured. The lad will go under X rays examination at the General Hospital this afternoon.

ST. PAUL, To-day.
Six persons were killed, and many others may have met death in a collision between two Great Northern trains near Superior Wis., last night.

OTTAWA, To-day.
The Roger Miller Company, Toronto, were awarded a contract for the Prince Edward Island terminal at Carleton, the point of the intercolonial Car Ferry. The figure is $950,000.

OTTAWA, To-day.
Two cows sleeping on the Grand Trunk right of way of Beatty Side, 248 miles from Ottawa, twelve miles from Perry Sound, caused the derailment of a Grand Trunk extra freight with the death of five men, and injuries to two others.

SHANGHAI, To-day.
Everything is quite here and also at Chapel. The rebel forces of this district have dwindled to one thousand. The Kiangnan arsenal has been relieved by the arrival of a thousand government troops overland and it is believed that negotiations are in progress with the rebels for the cessation of the Wu Tang forts.

ATHENS, To-day.
Official dispatches received here admit that a strong attack by Bulgarians compelled the Greeks to retire to defensive positions on the heights in the neighbourhood of Petchova and Kavitsa, but they claim fresh Bulgarian attacks near Djuma, in Rimelia, 45 miles south, were repulsed.

LONDON, To-day.
The Daily Telegraph correspondent with Greeks at Saloniki describes a battle between Greeks and Bulgarians in the Djuma district as the most hotly contested and sanguinary of the entire war. The Bulgarians, the correspondent says, were reinforced by fifty thousand men who had been withdrawn from the Serbian frontier, and made an unexpected attack on the Greek left wing. The fight raged two days, with varying successes, but the victory finally rested with the Greeks who captured again their lost positions. The Greek losses were two thousand men killed, including many officers bearing historic names, and between six and seven thousand wounded.

Decision Disputed.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—It is now reported that the home run made by Grace, of the B. I. S., in their match with the Shamrocks last evening has been disputed. The rule governing home runs reads:—"If a fielder is unable to get the ball home until the man has completed the circuit of the bases, the latter is entitled to a home run, provided the fielder has not made a misplay in handling the ball." The play last night was that the ball was hit fairly to centrefield, fielded and thrown to second, and from second home but the runner had got safely across the plate. There were no overthrows, fumbles or misplays anywhere, and such a decision on the part of the officials can only be regarded by spectators as boycotting the "natives." Perhaps they will explain their definition of a home run.

Yours truly,
AMERICA.

Ladies' Orange Lodge.

Mrs. J. Tulk, of Vancouver, B.C., who is the Grand Mistress of the Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association of British North America met at short notice last night in the British Hall a number of Protestant ladies, while the banquet was being held in the Methodist College Hall, and discussed informally the formation of a branch in Newfoundland. It is in contemplation to establish a lodge in St. John's and another in Bay Roberts. Such lodges have been established from Cape Breton to British Columbia with subordinate and superior organization. The Grand Lodge is entitled to two delegates at the triennial Convention of the Sovereign Grand Lodge of B. A. Another meeting will be held to-night at 8 o'clock and Mrs. Tulk will be glad to meet all the ladies who are interested in the movement.

Personal.

Mrs. Gus Hodder left by Monday's express for Boston on a visit to her aunt.

Mother de Paul and Sister Vincentine, sister and niece of Mr. John Peddie, arrived by the Florizel on a visit.
