The Belgian Deportations.

In many of the actions of Germany during late days some see a defiant challenge to the United States. Things more surprising and less true have been said. There are already welcome signs in America of a firm, if not a changed, attitude towards the war and Germany's conduct. President Wilson is reinstated and the German vote disappears as even a remote influence upon his decision. Much, too, has been said that compels attention to the effect that the Allies have been mistaken in their antagonism towards him, and it has been pointed out that the election of Hughes would not have been the unmitigated blessing to our cause that some have thought. Certainly, his economic policy, about the only one that has defined clearly, would have interfered directly with the blockade of Germany, which it is more than ever necessary now to apply with increasing severity; and his denunciations of German methods of warfare have not had a convincing spot-taneous ring. Added to which is the fact that after the first mistake in accepting the extraordinary status of the submarine which it has now acquired in warfare, Wilson has adhered firmly and consistently to it and will probably continue to do so.

The Marins case is not yet disposed of by any means and Germany has offered America no explanation. The latest outrage in removing Belgian civilians and workmen to Germany is only calculated to arouse extreme resentment and hostility throughout the United States. Farly in reputation of their Government's failure to protect in any way when that country's neutrality was first set at naught, but mostly from credible feelings of pity and sympathy, the American people have been active and generous in their work of relief, and the case of Belgium is one which they have taken very much to heart. There is such a thing as the universal feeling of a nation finding expression in official utterances and acts by its government, as Germany may soon discover. Washington has already shown its hand and received the responsive approval of Britain. None of the Allies has ever asked for active intervention by the United States, but they have looked for their moral support, and the moral support of a great neutral means much in these times. More quickly, too, than we may expect it is apt to translate itself into an active one, and he makes a great mistake who imagines that America is incapable of action. War she may not desire, but she can do a very great deal without firing a shot. Not the slightest shadow of justification can be shown by Germany of this latest tyranny, abhorrent to the practice of nations and the instincts of humanity, and she makes little effort to show one. However strongly America may protest, she is not likely to be heeded or the practice discontinued, but the matter will not tend to expedite or make easier a settlement of the Marins trouble.

White Bay Fishery a Failure.

Government Must Act Quickly.
We learn from a gentleman in the city who has recently returned from White Bay that the fishery along that part of the coast has been absolutely a failure during the past season and as a consequence many a fisherman with a large family to support is at his wits' end as to how he is going to keep the lean gray wolf from the door during the long dark winter months. Some of the fishermen have not secured more than five quintals of fish since last May. People living in St. John's are accustomed to say, why don't those people go to work at Grand Falls, Bell Island and other places? But have those same city folks ever considered the fact that these very same fishermen have not the means whereby to go to these places and seek work, and should they manage to do so, who is going to keep their wives and children supplied with firewood while they are absent from home? As our informant is a gentleman of great experience in relation to the condition under which our outport people live, we hasten to bring this matter to the attention of the Government, which we hope will act quickly, as there is no time to spare.

LEAVE all the WORK to me, when you need WATERED FISH, by giving me a standing order. J. J. WHELAN.—11

Caught Red-Handed.

Last night Richard Gray, an undesirable character, went on board the schooner Burscon, an intoxicated state and began to feel his way around to see if there was anything doing in his line. The crew of the vessel were ashore and Dick thought there was no danger. After a brief search in the cabin he came across a valise that took his fancy. He at once opened it and started to take articles out of it, when Constable Simmonds, an expert in the detective line, who had been on the qui vive for the previous hour or so, pounced upon the would-be thief, placed him under arrest and with the assistance of Constable Whelan, took him to the Police Station. This morning he appeared before Judge Morris and was sent to the lake side for a month.

The Harmony From the North.

After an absence of about five weeks the Moravian steamer Harmony returned from visiting the various mission stations along the Northern Labrador Coast. She brought a full cargo of cod, herring, oil, furs and other products of the far north. The little steamer met with very unfavourable weather since leaving here which forced her to shelter several times during the voyage. Winter with all its forces has set in and the Esquimaux have gone inland to the winter hunt. During the past month a number of old seals were secured, but not in such plenty as in other years at this season. However, inland game and sea birds are fairly plentiful and with a good supply of provisions at the various stations the inhabitants will not fare badly this winter.

McMurdo's Store News

SATURDAY, Nov. 18th, 1916.
Tepeco Tooth Paste forms a substitute and a thoroughly effective one, for Febeco, a well known dentifrice of enemy manufacture. If your hands are inclined to be rough, we have a splendid collection of Cream—Witch Hazel and Almond, White Rose, Violet, Nylas, Williams', Pond's Extract, Colgate's, etc., and it should be no difficult matter to satisfy everybody. Prices 25c to 50c a bottle or crock.

DID YOU KNOW RILEY?

James Whitcomb Riley, of whom Mary E. Wilkins Freeman said: "One might as well try to make a home attractive without flowers as without the grace of James Whitcomb Riley's verses."
Of whom Booth Tarkington said: "He was the first and the foremost distinctly American poet and at the time of his death he was the greatest American."
And of whom a Poet has sung: The world was gettin' dreary, there was too much sigh an' frown In this vale of moral strivin', so God sent Jim Riley down.
An' he said: "Go there an' cheer 'em in your good old fashioned way With your songs of tender sweetness, but don't make your plans to stay 'Cuz you're needed up in Heaven, I am lendin' you to men Just to help 'em with your music, but I'll wait you back again."
An' Riley came, an' mortals heard the music of his voice An' they caught his songs o' beauty an' they started to rejoice; An' they leaned on him in sorrow, an' they shared with him their joys— An' they walked with him the path-ways that they knew when they were boys.
But the Heavenly angel misread him, missed his tender, gentle knack Of making people happy, an' they wrote that he was dead.
Here are his Poems:—
Riley Child Rhymes—A collection of the favorite child-rhymes, including "Little Orphan Annie," etc., etc.
Riley Love Lyrics—The favorite passionate and tender love poems, including "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," etc.

Riley Farm Rhymes—The many poems by Mr. Riley in which is mirrored his love of the great outdoors.

Riley Songs of Cheer—A collection of the favorites of Mr. Riley's poems of gladness, content and consolation.

Riley Songs of Summer—The loveliest and best-loved poems about summer and the out-door summer land.

Riley Songs of Home—A collection of the best-loved songs, sounding the note of fireside joy, and homely philosophy.

Riley Songs of Friendship—Half a hundred poems here—including favorites that voice in homely fashion the poet's greetings.

Seven volumes of them, selling at 75c. each, 2c. extra if mailed. Never before published at less than $1.25 per copy. There are only five copies of each to be had. If you want to get yours you will need to act promptly.
