

W.D. Wellington THE UNIVERSAL PIPE

You never had such a smoke as you get in a W.D. Wellington. There's no wheezing about it—no bubbling. The well catches all moisture and stray tobacco. It's just cool, dry smoke which comes up—away from the tongue—through the top opening bit. Look for the W.D. C. triangle trade-mark. It's a sure sign of a French briar bowl, guaranteed against cracking or burning through. All good dealers sell Wellingtons, in all shapes, at $1.00 and up.

"Condor" Charlie.

A REMINISCENCE

Baron Beresford, who died suddenly in England the other day, was for a long time better known as "Condor" Charlie and always was beloved by British seamen with whom he sailed the great waters for many years as an officer of the King's Navy. He became "Condor" Charlie away back in 1882 when he was the young commander of the gunboat Condor at the bombardment of Alexandria. Arabi Pasha's rebellion was to be put down but when the fleet swept down on Alexandria it met with stiff resistance from the Egyptian guns, which were set up on mounds of earth and rock. When the fire was hottest Beresford, who was later to become a baron and an admiral but was then only a young dare-devil captain, steered the Condor in toward shore. He sailed on until, at last, he was in such a position that the guns of the shore force could not be deflected sufficiently to bring the Condor within range, and then the young captain and his shipmates had a merry time blowing the gun emplacements and the guns and the gunners into the air. And Beresford had a decoration after that, but he also had the nickname which old seamen always affectionately used in speaking of him.

Careful speaking was never characteristic of "Condor Charlie," neither was total abstinence his habit. A tongue always quick and, on this occasion, loosened a bit by wine made him the cause, a few years after the Alexandria exploit, of a little diplomatic squabble; absurd it may seem when the incident is related, Beresford's words threatened to bring a breach between Britain and France and would have done so, it is said, if it had not been for the peace-making abilities of that Prince of Wales who was afterwards to be known as King Edward the Peace Maker. The Prince and "Condor Charlie" and the French ambassador to Britain at that time—a diplomat bearing the English name of Waddington and having the sensitiveness of his French mother—were guests together at a London dinner party. The wine had gone round several times, and had not passed by Beresford. In the midst of a discussion, in which the French ambassador had part, Beresford started the table by proclaiming that he would not fear to "run the Condor against the whole d—d French fleet." It was not a very diplomatic remark, under the circumstances, and it is said that the tone in which it was spoken did not make it more palatable to the diplomat from across the Channel. At all events, there was an unpleasant scene; Waddington was insulted, and since he was French Ambassador the insult was not to him alone. The relations between British and French threatened to be affected but, happily, the sound common sense of the future ruler of the Empire and his genius for removing differences and strained feeling were not exerted in vain.—Ex.

Revising the U. S. Prayer-Book.

A sensation was created in religious circles by the publication of a report which is to be presented to the Episcopal Church Convention in October by the Commission of the Revision and enrichment of the Book of Common Prayer, which contains twenty radical proposals, the most startling of which are the recognition of faith healing, anointing with holy oils, the Requiem, communions and prayers for the dead, reservation of the sacrament, and "intinction," or the use of a dipped wafer instead of common communion cup," says the New York correspondent of the Daily Telegraph.

"The commission anticipates bitter opposition to some of its proposals, and the prefatory statement to the report shows that the recommendations were by no means unanimously agreed to.

"Great popular interest is aroused in the recommendation to eliminate the word 'obey' from the marriage ceremony. The commission recognizes that many clergymen of the Protestant Episcopal Church, which is the nearest approach on this side to your Church of England, have refused to use the word 'obey,' the retention of which, they declare, is a survival of the days when wives were regarded as chattels. A further concession to modern demands is the decision to eliminate the statement by the bridegroom 'with all my worldly goods I thee endow.' It is held that the law safeguards dower rights. The allusion to Isaac and Rebecca is eliminated on the grounds that the domestic life of the Biblical couple were not model.

"Intinction," or the dipping of the consecrated wafer in the chalice, is urged on sanitary grounds, the Episcopalians claiming that the use of the common cup is a menace to public health. The Evangelicals, or Low Churchmen, bitterly oppose the proposal and the commission had to fight hard to obtain a majority vote for the adoption of many practices which it has recommended.

"Whit Sunday," despite all opposition, is changed to the Day of Pentecost, and all the Sundays until Advent are changed to read as Sundays after Pentecost, instead of after Trinity. Efforts to change the name of the Church to the 'American Catholic Church' were, however, defeated.

"Much controversy is expected over the proposal to include in the prayer for the dead the following: 'O God, whose mercies are unnumbered, accept our prayer on behalf of the soul of Thy servant departed and grant him an entrance into the land of light and joy in the fellowship of Thy Saints.' Such a prayer, it is claimed, is theologically unsound. There is also a prayer 'for social justice,' and another 'for every man in his work.'"

We Talk Too Much.

(From the San Francisco Bulletin.) On the Plains of Shinar, ages ago, somebody suggested that, with sufficient material and men, it would be possible to build a tower that would reach to the heavens. They began the job, but never completed the undertaking, because they talked too much, and there was a turmoil of tongues and a general mixup of languages.

The Tower of Babel is not the only experiment spoiled by too much talk. The popular but by no means polite phrase, "hot air," aptly states the case. It is a fact of international habit. It is action run to the weeds of words. Eloquence, or something that passes for that gift, often a 2 per cent. degree of oratory, is the end of many noble dreams in civil and economic affairs. It is a well-known fact that the people fear the words of Congress more than its works.

We talk too much, investigate too often, pass too many resolutions, make too many speeches, and probably write too many books. It would be a good thing for the country if we took Aristotle literally when he defined eloquence in three words, "action, action, action."

New Tanlac Plant Has Daily Capacity of 36,000 Bottles

Magnificent New Laboratory
Occupies Sixty Thousand
Square Feet of Floor Space.

What is said to be one of the largest pharmaceutical laboratories in the United States has been completed at Dayton, Ohio, for the manufacture of Tanlac, the well-known medicine, which according to recent reports is now having the largest sale of any medicine of its kind in the world.

The erection of the new plant was made necessary by the rapid growth of the business, as the older plant was found to be wholly inadequate to supply the ever-increasing demand which at the present rate of sale will amount to more than five million bottles for the present year alone.

By the erection of this plant the manufacturers of Tanlac are giving to the world just one more evidence of the remarkable growth and expansion of their business, and their absolute confidence in its future.

This announcement will be read with interest not only by the many thousands of Tanlac agents scattered throughout North America, but to the millions who have used it beneficially as well.

The new building occupies 60,000 square feet of floor space. It is six stories in height, practically fire-proof throughout, and is of striking architectural design. It also has private railway facilities.

This beautiful new structure now stands in striking contrast beside the older building where Tanlac was first made.

Visitors to the laboratories are strongly impressed with the extremely modern character of the equipment. Everything is provided and splendidly arranged to promote systematic and rapid production. The very latest machinery and devices known to invention and pharmaceutical science are here used.

The interior throughout is finished in spotless white, and all of the large force of employees wear white uniforms, which they are required to change daily. The main offices on the first floor are all finished in Carara marble and mahogany.

The entire process of manufacture is conducted under absolutely sanitary conditions. Even the bottles made expressly to contain Tanlac are washed and sterilized electrically by the ultra violet ray process. They are then filled by automatic machinery and the finished product is therefore never touched by human hands.

When Tanlac was introduced into Canada history repeated itself, and the demand which had been created in the United States was quickly duplicated in the Dominion Province. As a result, it was recently found necessary to establish another Tanlac Laboratory at Windsor, Canada, which is on a somewhat smaller scale than the plant at Dayton, but is no less modernly equipped.

The new facilities give a daily capacity of 36,000 bottles, but as Tanlac is rapidly being introduced into foreign countries it is probably only a question of a few years before even larger facilities will become necessary.

While the manufacturers are necessarily working for capacity production it is a fundamental rule of the Tanlac Laboratories that the quality of the medicine shall never be sacrificed to secure quantity output.

Uniform quality is guaranteed by a series of careful inspections by expert chemists, from the time the roots, herbs, and barks are received in their original packages, to the time the globe until their medicinal properties have been extracted by the most approved processes. The finished medicine is then bottled, labeled, and shipped out to the tens of thousands of druggists throughout the United States and Canada, to supply a demand never before equalled for this or any other medicine.

The executive sales offices are located in Atlanta, Georgia, and occupy almost an entire floor of the Fourth National Bank Building of that city. Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors under the personal direction of a special Tanlac Representative.—adv.

A Soldier's Complaint.

"If the Government had the power to send us to hell in France it has the power to tax men who made wealth while we were there," said Mr. J. H. Flynn, a returned soldier in speaking in a Toronto meeting the other day of the veterans' request for further financial assistance. Mr. Flynn touched upon an issue from which the Borden Govt. will never be able to escape. It made levies upon the man-power of the country but it never made levies upon the great wealth piled up by profiteers in this country during the war years through the exploitation of soldiers dependents and other families and through the sale of soldiers' supplies to the state at excessive costs. It has nibbled at wealth through the business profits' tax and it has taken another nibble by means of income tax but while it has done nothing toward lessening the burdens imposed upon the mass of people under the tariff laws it has utterly failed also to compel the war-millionaires to contribute their fair share to the revenue of the state. It has the power of compulsion in this regard, just as it had power to compel the soldier to do thus and so; in the latter instance it exercised its power and in the other it will not exercise compulsion and thus discriminates in favor of the few.—Sydney Record.
