Brockville, Jan. 8.—Samuel Keefer, C. E., died yesterday morning at his residence, of pneumonia. The deceased gentleman has been in poor health for some time past, having contracted maisrial fever in the West some two years since, which was followed last winter by pneumonia, from the effects of which he never fully recovered. Mr. Keefer was widely known as a man of more than ordinary ability as an engineer, more especially in connection with the Suspension Bridge at the Falls, and various Canadian public works. He was highly esteemed as a citizen. Death of Samuel Keefer, C.E.

Beath of Empress Augusta.

Berlin, Jan. 8.—The death of the Empress Augusta was announced to the people by the lowering of the Imperial standard over the palace. The Empress passed away peacefully surrounded by all her near relatives and her much attached attendants. As the end came near the mourners knelt around the bed, and the court chaplain offered a prayer and then blessed the remains. Emperor William and the Empress soon after left the chamber. The Empress Augusta suffered from influenza for three days, when pneumonia was developed. The streets are draped with mourning. The court festivities, which had been resumed upon the expiration of the mourning for Emperor Frederick, are now abandoned. The remains of the ex-Empress will be laid temporarily beside those of her husband. The Reichsanzieger states that the Emperor and the whole Imperial family are in deepest affliction at the sad event. It says: The year 1888 twas one filled with heavy trials for her Majesty. The death of her beloved husband, to whom she clung faithfully in all vicissitudes of life; the death of her son and grandson, all contributed to sadden the last two years of her life. These years she spent principally at Berlin, at the castle of Babelsburg, at Coblentz and in Baden, conquering her sorrow by the greatness of her mind, and remaining to the last breath of her richly-blessed life ever active in doing good and relieving distress. The royal house and the country will forever cherish her memory.

Portugal and England.

Lord Salisbury's note was menacing and peremptory, requiring Portugal to act at once, as if the rectitude of England's position was beyond doubt. It is believed Portugal cannot concede so much, but that the Foreign Minister will intimate the Portugalese Government is willing to order the maintenance of the statu quo in Africa pending negotiations, if England will do the same. The main point of Portugal's answer will meet in part at least the terms of Lord Salisbury's demand, which was that the Portuguese Government should give its agents in Africa such instructions as would prevent the repetition of acts like those attributed to Pinto, as otherwise tranquil diplomatic discussion would be impossible.

The Admiralty yacht Enchantress has sailed for Gibraltar with sealed orders for the ironclads Benbow and Colossus. There is thought to be no doubt that the orders relate to Portugal.

The London Times reports that the Portuguese authorities have forbidden the reception by British steamers at Quaillamanne of letters from the Vice-Consul or other persons, insisting that all must go through the Portuguese postoffice.

The Lisbon papers accuse the Scotch missionaries in Africa of trumping up old stories and retailing them as news, with a view of widening the breach between England and Portugal. The Diaro, a leading journal, of moderate tone, easy it does not believe the English telegrams, but that even if they are all true it cannot refrain from approving as perfectly correct and patriotic the proceedings of the Portuguese authorities in Africa in having energetically repelled the piratical acts of foreign invaders in territory belinging to Portugal.

Are Beautiful Women Happiest?

Are Beautiful Women Happiest?

In my life I have known many women well. Among them is a fair majority of what the truly appreciative would call happy, for which fact I thank God, as it has helped me to take, on the whole, a hopeful view of life, as well as human nature. Now, are those women, blest as many of them are with devoted husbands, cheerful homes, cultivated society and leisure for the exercise of any special talent they may possess, beautiful women! With one or two exceptions, No. Indeed, more than a few of them are positively plain, if feature only is considered, while from the rest I can single out but two or three whose faces and figures conform to any of the recognized standards of physical perfection. But they are loved, they are honored, they are deferred to. While not eliciting the admiration of every passer-by, they have acquired through the force, the sweetness, or originality of their character, the appreciation of those whose appreciation confers honor and happiness, and, consequently their days pass in an atmosphere of peace and good will, which is as far above the delirious admiration accorded to the simply beautiful, as the placid shining of the sunbeam is to the phenominal blaze of as evanescent flame.—[Anna Katharine Green in Ladies' Home Journal.

It Was an Easy Matter for Him.

"Yes, sir, I believe in thrashing a boy," he was saying in a loud voice to a carful of passengers; "the more you thrash a boy the better it is for the boy."

"I think, sir," remarked a meek-looking man next to him, "that your language is very intemperate."

"What do you object to, may I ask? Is it the word thrash? You wouldn't have me say 'beat,' would you? Perhaps flog would suit you better."

"I cannot see the pacessitue of the say in the word that the word that the word through the word would suit you better."

"I cannot see the necessity of flogging boys, sir."
"What would you do with them, may I

"What would you do with them, may I ask?"

"Reason with them. Talk to them in mild and encouraging tones. Remember that you were once a boy yourself."

"I do, sir; and I am thankful every day of my life for the personal chastisement my good father bestowed on me."

"Cruel, cruel," murmured the meek man. "It is degrading to a boy to be whipped like a brute beast. No boy requires it. He can always be managed with kindness."

Every woman in the car looked curiously at the meek man, and the advocate of thrashing had a temporary chill. Then he leaned forward and inquired of the other:

"Can you manage your boys without corporeal punishment".

"I haven't any boys," was the serene answer, and everybody laughed.
