Death and Dirt.

Joseph Wardar Found Dead at His Home on York Street.

Mrs. Murtaugh's Misery Mortifies the Medical Health Officer.

Medical Health Officer Hutchinson came across a couple of pitiable cases yesterday. His first visit was made to the house of old Joe Wardar, opposite the freight sheds on York street, where he found the man lying on an old couch, cold and stiff in death. The house, the doctor says, was a sight. The old woman knew nothing of her husband's death. In answer to questions, she said he had laid down to have a sleep, but she could not re-member how long he had been there. Dr. Hutchinson said the corpse was cold and stiff when he got there, and the man must have been dead about four hours. The ambulance was called and the body removed to the cemetery, where it was interred at the city's expense. Death ensued from natural

On visiting the place, yesterday afternoon, he found the old woman in bed, where she evidently had been for the last three days, during which time she had no attention. Everything was frozen, and the place unfit for a human being to live in. The door was barred, and when the doctor entered, the old woman was sitting on the edge of the bed shivering. He ordered the am-bulance, and had her conveyed to St. Joseph's Hospital.

WOMEN STENOGRAPHERS.

They Now Have a National Association

With Headquarters at Chicago. The enterprising women who have formed the National Association of Wemen Stenographers want to make their or-ganization national in character as well as in name and are just now agitating the enterprise with commendable zeal. The association has its headquarters in Chieago, to which city the membership is now largely confined. It was started there during the World's fair at the instigation of Mrs. Potter Palmer, who wished the stenographers to be represented in the women's congress as an organized body. For awhile after the exposition closed the affairs of the association were almost forgotten, but the organization was revived and made a permanent one.

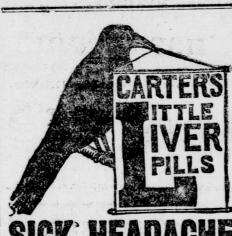

At present there are only about 200 members, but Chicago alone has about 5,000 stenographers, and there is a large field from which to draw recruits. Connected with the association is a sick benefit scheme, which, it is thought, will be very popular when it is understood.
