Ketchell was as peevish and cranky as a one-armed shoemaker with the hives yesterday, and Manager Joe O'Connor was correspondingly happy. "When you see a fighter cross and nagging around a camp like a cub

On the Attell-Owen Moran affair the price against the English champion is 10 to 8, with lengthening tendencies. Moran not only believes he will beat Attell, but he is willing to bet $10,000 of his own coin that he turns the trick. So tickled is the little fellow at having made the weight with such ease that he sent that amount over to Tom Corbett last night, authorizing him to get the money down for him at best odds possible.
