

Teachers' Guild Elects Miss Tolhurst President

Annual Meeting Given Over To Addresses From Old Country Teachers.

Miss Marjorie Tolhurst was elected president of the Women Teachers' Guild at the annual meeting held yesterday afternoon at the Alexandra School. She succeeds Miss F. Lawrence, who has just completed a most successful year as first officer of the guild. Other officers elected, as they were suggested on the slate of the nominating committee, are: Honorary President, Mrs. H. B. Gahan; honorary vice-presidents, Miss Jessie Simpson and Miss Cannell; vice-presidents, Miss Gertrude Bapty and Miss Eva Darch; secretary, Miss Dorothy Wardrop; assistant secretary, Miss Agnes Vrooman; treasurer, Miss Nina North; Miss Bessie McCann, convener of the nominating committee, submitted the slate to the members.

During the year the club has received $591.17, and now has a balance of $167.82, according to the report of Miss Vola MacDonald, the treasurer.

With the exception of brief speeches from the chair, given by the retiring president, Miss Lawrence, and the incoming executive head, Miss Tolhurst, the meeting was devoted to the hearing of addresses from the old country teachers. Miss Daisy Guitton and Miss Grace Clark, who have been on the public school staff here during the past year.

Will See Indians.
The women teachers of London are loath to let them return to their native land without giving them an opportunity to see something of the Indians, the true Canadian natives, and so are arranging a trip to Muncy and a visit to the Mount Elgin Institute there.

Miss Clark, of Galashiels, Scotland, who was the first speaker of the afternoon, pointed out in a most interesting manner the differences which exist between the systems of education in Scotland and that which prevails in Canada.

"I like teaching here better than at home," she said. "It seems to me that school here is a pleasanter place for little people. There are pleasanter subjects taught. Where you spend much of your time in teaching drawing and music and such subjects, we spend our time in drilling the little ones in the rudiments of the three R's."

The result seems to be that whereas your very small children appear exceedingly bright and seem to be ahead of our Scotch children, such is not the case with the larger boys and girls. At the age of fourteen, our Scotch pupils seem to be at least equal to your pupils of the same age."

Fashion Decrees But Scant

New York, May 21.—A heel, an infinitesimal amount of dye and $12— that describes accurately a pair of the hose now basking in fashion's smile. Stockings today cannot be too thin, although the limbs they cover, but do not conceal, may still be criticized in that respect.

Paris set this style, and it was Mistinguette, the girl with the "Wittiest legs in France," who taught Paris to like it. She wears stockings so thin that bets have been made as to whether she wore any at all. Asked to settle the wagers she said: "Feet without shoes—yes, and souls without trepidation, but legs without stockings—never."

Wearers of these same hose on Fifth avenue may conceal their trepidation, but they do not conceal their legs.

An artful pair of stockings may hold up a pair of legs, but it does not hold up the stockings. For those nowadays are too thin to roll. But corsets of today are not even a reminiscence of the steel and whalebone era. In years they caught whales to make corsets. Now a woman has to be a male to be induced to wear one of the old style.

The newest examples of the corsetier's art are made exactly on the lines of the bodice of a modern evening gown. Of satin they are fastened trimly around the bust, but have not a sign of a bone or steel. The smallest of elastic gussets of women's free movement is inserted at the bottom of the skirt from which hang the supporters which hold the stockings unwrinkled.

The new theatre hats, like the stockings, are so designed that it is almost impossible to tell whether a hat is being worn or not. They are made with the turban conceivably, made with the hair showing through. The trimming may be either a closely wound scarf of Egyptian or Paisley design, or of metal brocade put on in such a way as to give the impression of a bandeau about the hair. In some cases the trimming is in the form of a jeweled coronet.

The whole effect is such as to give the impression that no hat is being worn, and that the hair is being held in place by a coronet or a band of some kind. It is, of course, unnecessary to take such a hat off in a theatre, as it prevails of less obstruction to the view of those behind it than the full island coiffures worn by some who affect bobbed hair.

A millinery vogue, just passed on to this country by London, provides a charming background for a piquant face. A huge wide black straw, with fluffy white, has a little inner cap line of plaited muslin, which outlines the face within the wide black brim.

White muslin and organdie collars, gilets and cuffs are being extensively worn with suits and coat frocks, and a touch of crisp cool charm obtainable in no other way.

Our Children

PRYING.
We all have family troubles—family secrets. Usually they are little personal matters that we would rather not discuss with the neighbors, just because they are so little and so very personal.

It is almost impossible for us to keep them from the children. They seem to soak them up through their skins. We may not have uttered a word about it in their presence. We may have been models of discretion all day, and yet at sunset we all know that they know.

We betrayed the secret in a dozen different ways. Our eyes kept straying. The tones of our voices changed. We did not open a certain door. We whispered once. We omitted doing tell their secrets to outsiders. This belongs to us. Just us!"

Loyalty is essential if there is to be a family feeling, and the sooner the children get the idea the better. Teach them that when people question them about family concerns that they are to answer politely, just nothing at all! Silence is the child's wall of defense. Silence and night! Patsy was four years old when something happened in his family that greatly interested a neighbor down street.
"If only she could get the right of it!"
She stopped Patsy on his way for the milk, his mother asked: "What was the lady saying to you?"
"She told me how did I do, and I told her how did she do herself. Then she told me did her see something coming into our house this morning."

This Leaves the Arms Free From Hairly Growths.
(Toilet Talks.)
A simple method for completely removing every trace of hair or fuzz is here given. This is painless, and usually a single treatment will banish even stubborn growths. To remove hairs, make a thick paste with some powdered delatone and water, spread on hairy surface, and after about two minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This method will not mar the skin, but to avoid disappointment, be certain you get delatone—Advit.
