Winnipeg Mother Finds Ideal Remedy for Colds of Children

A Vaporizing Salve which Relieves Colds Over Night and Croup in Fifteen Minutes. Nothing to Take—Just Rub It Over Throat and Chest.

Mothers everywhere will be interested in the experience of Mrs. W. Butterfield, 627 Caydon Ave., Winnipeg, Man. Mrs. Butterfield tried the new external remedy for colds, Vicks VapoRub, when it was first introduced in Winnipeg, and writes: "My three-year-old boy, William, became very sick with what seemed to me like a pneumonia cold, accompanied by indigestion. He was a very sick boy for two or three days. One night I grew alarmed—he breathed so quickly and was so restless. I rubbed him with Vicks VapoRub, and the result was quite gratifying. He breathed more easily and I was able to get a little sleep myself. The next night I again rubbed him with Vicks VapoRub, and he became as happy as ever. I surely appreciate Vicks VapoRub and shall use and recommend it at all times."

Master William Butterfield

Vicks is just as good for adults. It is the direct treatment for sore throat, tonsillitis, bronchitis, catarrh, head or chest colds. When rubbed over throat or chest, Vicks has a two-fold action. Internally it is inhaled as a vapor and at the same time, externally, absorbed like a liniment. This double action seldom fails to give immediate relief—Advt.

DRAMA LEAGUE WILL PRODUCE SHAW PLAY

Basil Morgan to Direct "You Never Can Tell." To Be Presented in Spring.

The Drama League has an interesting program in store for its members. On Tuesday night, Feb. 17, "The Valiant" will be produced again, this time in the assembly hall of the University of Western Ontario. What is attracting even still greater attention, however, is the announcement that Basil Morgan, late of Hart House theatre, Toronto, will produce Bernard Shaw's "You Never Can Tell" in the near future.

The cast has not yet been selected, but it is understood that among the members will be J. Stanley Meredith, Kenneth Greene and Miss Katharine Bell.

MRS. ANDREW BIRDSALL DIES AT TILLSONBURG

Highly Esteemed Resident Had Reached Advanced Age of 97 Years.

Special to The Advertiser. Tillsonburg, Jan. 29.—Tillsonburg's grand old lady, Mrs. Andrew Birdsall, passed away, in her 97th year, this morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Oliver Fox, after a somewhat lengthy illness. Despite her age, she was in possession of all her faculties until the end of her long journey. Her husband predeceased her 11 years.

She was formerly Miss Elizabeth Scott, and was born in Essex, London, England, of Scottish descent, and came to Canada when but three years of age, locating at Toronto with her father, who was a farmer and local preacher. They moved to Hamilton, and many are the vivid stories she has told of the early struggles in the days when Hamilton was only a small settlement. Her father was educated in the Presbyterian ministry, but afterwards became a Methodist.

Mrs. Birdsall later moved to South Middleton, and came to Tillsonburg some 25 years ago. Ten children were born, six of whom are now living, and three of whom are over 70 years of age. They are: Mrs. (Rev.) Sharpe of Toronto, Mrs. (Rev.) Hamilton, Mrs. Oliver Fox of Tillsonburg, Wesley of Sarnia, John and Hamilton of South Middleton. Nineteen grandchildren and 29 great-grandchildren also survive.

The late Mrs. Birdsall was married in Canboro, Ont., on April 26, 1848. She was a devout member of St. Paul's Methodist church, and in politics a most ardent Liberal. The funeral will be held on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock with interment in the town cemetery.

The Woman Who Never Learned to Play With Her Husband — and So Lost Him. Advice to a Worried Father on Managing an 18-Year-Old Son.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a married woman with three children. My husband has left me and is living with another woman because I would not go to dances and parties with him. He takes this other woman out in his car driving, and they go to dances and shows together. My parents brought me up strictly and taught me not to play cards or dance.

Now my husband wants to take the children from me. What can I do? CARRIE.

Answer: The courts probably will give you your children if your husband is leading a double life, and that, to a certain extent, you are responsible for your husband's sin, as from your own account, he tried at first to put with you and include you in his pleasures, and you refused to go with him.

But, I think, Carrie, that you have brought a good deal of your trouble on your own head by your narrow-mindedness. And that, to a certain extent, you are responsible for your husband's sin, as from your own account, he tried at first to put with you and include you in his pleasures, and you refused to go with him.

Before you married him you must have known that he was of a gay and lively disposition, and that he craved amusement. You know that he liked to dance, and go to parties, and play cards, and if you were so austere that you were opposed to any of these diversions you should have refused to marry him and chosen a Puritan like yourself for a life partner.

There is one thing, my dear Carrie, that every woman should recognize; she has to keep up with her husband or else lose him.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—My son, who is now 18 years of age, is hard to manage. I find it almost impossible to make him go to bed early, and equally impossible to get him up in the morning. At night he reads and writes before 11 or 12 o'clock, and in the morning we have to call him about ten times before he gets up. Then he does not have time to eat his breakfast properly and has to run to work.

Lately he has started taking exercises using dumbbells, and this tells more of his time. I have told his mother to call him only once in the morning and then let him be late to work, and perhaps lose his job. It might be a good lesson to him. The boy is cross and cranky, and it is almost impossible to live with him. What shall I do with him? JOSEPH.

Answer: Good gracious, Joseph, were you born with whiskers? Weren't you ever a boy yourself? Don't you remember how you hated to go to bed at night, and how you loathed to get up in the morning? Don't you remember how irritated you used to get with your parents when they nagged about it? Don't you remember how you used to feel that you could cheerfully choke them when they solemnly quoted the old adage about early to bed and early to rise making a man healthy, wealthy and wise?

It is a pity, Joseph, for this is the most critical time in your life and the boy's, and by the way you treat him now you will alienate him from you or grapple him to you with hooks of steel.

So my advice to you is to quit worrying over him and quit nagging him. Let him go to bed when he feels like it and wake him up twenty times if it is necessary in order to get him off in time for his work.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a young man 20 years of age and I am in love with a girl of 18. A night or two ago she asked me if I was going to marry her. I play a cornet at the store, and make good wages, and could support a nice little home. Do you think it wise for me to propose to her? NIG.

Answer: It seems to me that the lady has popped the question, and all that you have to do is either to accept or decline her proposition. But don't let any girl inveigle you into matrimony at present. You are too young to know your own mind and what you want and need in a wife. When you are married, you are married for a very long time, and it seems longer if you don't get the right girl. DOROTHY DIX.

IN GLORIA'S TROUSSEAU.

Special to The Advertiser.

Paris, Jan. 29.—One of the striking costumes in the troussseau of Gloria Trousseau, whose marriage to the Marquis de la Palaise has been announced, is a white ensemble of white silk moire. The collar, cuffs and hem of the rather long coat are banded with white fox. The skirt falls just below the coat hem and is snug and rather tight. With this toilette goes a small plain white felt hat turned up slightly at one side and plain round-toed white pumps.

Fashion Prescribes Vanities, But Bids Us Not Use Them Too Openly.

"Should a woman make up her face before all the world and his wife?" asks a French fashion writer and then after an emphatic "no"—she goes on: "To powder the nose swiftly and unostentatiously may pass, but to paint the lips, blacken the brows, and tint the cheeks before an audience is ill-mannered impertinence, about which it is hard to be tolerant."

But that most women do at least powder their noses swiftly and unostentatiously in public—and probably more than that—is apparent from the high regard in which vanities are held. The woman who does not carry some such contraption is a rare bird indeed these days. And most women possess quite a number of some that are appropriate only for the evening, others for formal afternoon, another to go with tailored street costume and this one for sports.

Some women with a decidedly limited dress budget still feel that several vanity cases are essential, while other women who have to spend to think of money save how to spend it, find one vanity quite sufficient.

Some women are best satisfied with merely a dust powder box to be held in the purse or slipped into a pocket. These may be chosen to match the color of the frock. Black and white effects are very good, whether they be gained by onyx head diamonds or by black enamel and rhinestones. One small vanity with a convenient wrist of black moire with pearl and rhinestone ornament, and another more expensive one is of onyx, jade and diamonds.

A French novelty consists of an evening vanity case of brilliant and steel beads to match a bandeau of the same materials, and for a rainy day there is a vanity with a tortoise-shell handle which contains compartments for powder, lipstick and rouge.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

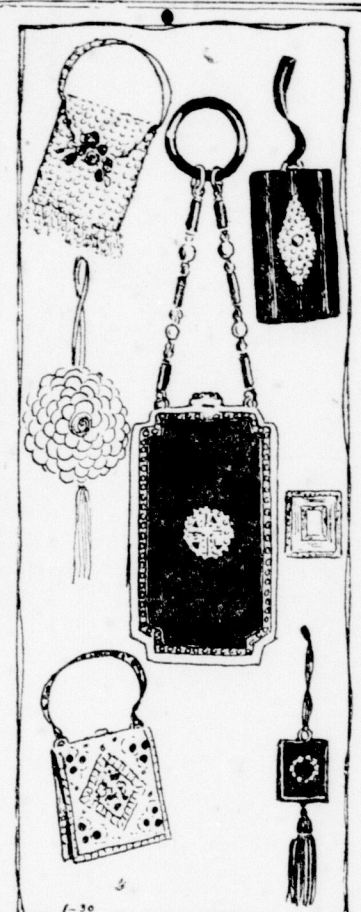

MAKING A CHIFFON SCARF.

It is possible to make an exceedingly interesting chiffon or georgette scarf, and if you have a little of the material to make a wide and long scarf. One trouble with many home-made scarfs is that they seem shrinking and scaling.

Then plan your trimming. Perhaps a band of ostrich at each end. In that case, either make the scarf of two thicknesses of the chiffon, with a pleat edge to hold it together, and fasten the row of ostrich in the ends, or else have a double hem, opened to receive the ostrich.

You can make an interesting scarf with a splashy design done in a wide band of crepe, or georgette, with silk, perhaps, a good idea is to use a neutral sort of chenille, like gray on white, and to couch it on in eight colors, red, green, yellow, purple and blue.

Another effective scarf is made simply by putting a wide double hem of a contrasting shade or color, on a length of georgette. The hem may be featherstitched in place, and the long sides may be piped in the color of the feather-stitching.

Shadow, Awakening, Is Very Hungry So He Goes Hunting For a Dinner

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Shadow the Weasel yawned and stretched. He had been asleep most of the afternoon. He curls up for a nap whenever he happens to feel sleepy, whether it be day or night. It was just dusk now as Shadow started out to hunt for something to eat. He was hungry. He usually is hungry when he awakens.

Shadow the Weasel is like Bowser the Hound in that he dearly loves to hunt. He has a keen little nose, and there is nothing he likes better than to find the trail of one of the little people of the Green Forest and follow it with his nose just as Bowser follows the trail of Reddy Fox. But there is one great difference between Bowser and Shadow. Bowser tells everybody what he is doing, but Shadow makes no sound. The one he is hunting may not know that he is being followed until too late, or almost too late.

Shadow ran swiftly over the snow, twisting and turning, looking into every place it was possible for any one to hide. He is very clever and he knows he is clever. He has boasted that no one can hide where he cannot find them. So for a time Shadow enjoyed the hunt. He found the tracks of Peter Rabbit. They were old tracks, so old that only here and there could he see Peter's foot. But the scent left by Peter's feet. But Shadow kept right on following Peter's trail.

"If I follow it long enough I'll catch up with him," muttered Shadow. "There doesn't seem to have been any one else around here. And after all it is fun to find out where Peter has been and what he has been doing. I hope he hasn't left the Green Forest. As a matter of fact Peter had left the Green Forest. He was at home in the dead old Briar Patch. But even there he would have been frightened half to death had he known that Shadow the Weasel was on his trail. But I didn't know, which was just as well."

Whether or not Shadow would have followed Peter across the snow-drifts, Shadow the Weasel was an Old Briar Patch I do not know. You see, something else caught the attention of Shadow. Peter's trail had led Shadow right up to the foot of a tall, dead stump. Shadow paused.
