RESTIGOUCHE IN LINE

The Liberals of the County of Restigouche at a large and representative convention which met in Campbellton on Monday, unanimously nominated Hon. C. H. LaBillicois and Mr. A. E. G. McKenzie as their standard bearers for the ensuing local election. In Restigouche a Liberal nomination is equivalent to a victory at the polls. Liberal sentiment is very strong in the county and so far as the opposition nominees are concerned, it will only be a question as to the size of their majority.

Hon. Mr. LaBillicois has represented Restigouche for thirty years without a break and his popularity with the people of the county is unimpaired. He was for eighteen years a member of the provincial government, filling successively the portfolios of agriculture and public works. During his long public service he has ever been faithful to the County of Restigouche and its best interests, and no man in public life is more universally esteemed. In Hon. Mr. LaBillicois the Acadians of the province have a every reason to be proud.

Mr. A. E. G. McKenzie, who has been nominated as the colleague of the ex-chief commissioner, is one of the most energetic and talented young men in New Brunswick today and he is destined to make his mark in public life. He completed a successful course in the Normal School some years ago and for a time followed the teaching profession. In 1890 he entered the U. N. B. as a senior matriculant and graduated in 1902 with his degree of B. A., taking his M. A. degree two years later. He studied law in St. John and was admitted to the bar six years ago and, ignoring the allurements of the west, he opened an office at Campbellton, where he has practised his profession with great success. Mr. McKenzie is well versed in political affairs and as a platform speaker has few if any superiors in the province. He will prove a valuable acquisition to the legislature of New Brunswick and having the support of the young men of the county will make a good showing at the polls. It is admitted that the Hon. C. H. LaBillicois will be returned and A. E. G. McKenzie says he will be so close behind him the people won't know which is first, but it will be two liberals at any rate. Campbellton it gratified in Mr. McKenzie being nominated and the liberals of Restigouche are to be heartily congratulated on their splendid choice of Candidates.

A recent issue of the Canadian Courier had an article on the Doherty Case where in it was stated that the "accident" was the result of an election brawl.

This is the point that the friends of the late D. I. Bruce are striving to make clear, and was the primary cause of the great public meeting held here some few days ago.

By the way we have not heard any more from the Attorney General's department yet, nor have we received his own opinion on the matter which he told the House at Fredericton he had.

A STEVENSON PRAYER

Give us courage and gaiety and the quiet mind, wrote R. L. Stevenson in one of his beautiful prayers. Spare to us our friends, soften to us our enemies. Bless us if it may be in all our innocent endeavors. If it may not give us the strength to encounter that which is to come, that we may be brave in peril, constant in tribulation, temperate in wrath, and in all changes of fortune, and down to the gates of death, loyal and loving one another.

PRINCE AS A MILLINER

Parisian Tradesman Claims Descent From Louis XVI.

Lady tourists who have been in the habit of buying their Paris hats in the Magasin de Chaigneau are greatly excited at the discovery that, without knowing it, they have been wearing the creations of a royal prince. Curiously enough the prince himself has evidently never realized what an enormous asset he possesses in his princely birth, for, although in certain circles he has long been known as Prince de Bourbon, his customers have known him only as plain Monsieur Chaigneau.

The milliner prince is, or claims to be, a descendant of the famous Naundorff, alias Louis XVII, who is supposed not to have died in the Temple prison, as recorded in history, but who was smuggled away by some devoted Royalists, and a boy closely resembling him put in his place. Naundorff made a good fight to assert his claim to the Throne of France, but neither Louis XVII, nor Charles X seemed disposed to abdicate in his favor. Whether they considered Naundorff an impostor, or were convinced that he was their nephew, is a mystery that will never be solved. The Naundorffs, as their adherents are called—assert, and not without reason, that it is very strange that Naundorff was never prosecuted as an impostor, although he constantly begged the authorities to give him this opportunity to establish his claim and reply to his detractors. Hundreds of people of the highest standing—statesmen, historians, and others have believed, and continue to believe, that Naundorff was really the son of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette.

It certainly seems curious that, while according to history Louis XVI's little son was supposed to be buried in the churchyard of Sainte Marguerite, in Paris, at the age of ten, on Naundorff's grave in the old cemetery in Delft, the following inscription was placed by the King of Holland:

"Here lies Louis the Seventeenth, King of France and Navarre, (Charles Louis, Duke of Normandy). Born in Versailles, March 27, 1785. Died in Delft, August 10, 1845."

The milliner-prince, however, only belongs to the junior branch of the Naundorff family, who for some time past have assumed the title of Prince de Bourbon to which they lay claim.

ROYAL TYPISTS

King George and Queen Mary Can Manipulate a Typewriter

Queen Mary, if she had not been born in the purple, would have been an able typist. She can tap-tap the keys of her typewriter with her Royal fingers as quickly and as well as any professional. King George is also able to manipulate a typewriter, though he doesn't give it to any great extent nowadays.

The Kaiser is well known to be expert on most subjects, typewriting, of course, being included. When in London a few years ago, he paid a surprise visit to a famous firm and selected a machine for his own private use.

Most people know how deeply interested Princess Christian is in all branches of nursing. The enormous amount of work and correspondence this entails keeps several typists constantly employed. Princess Christian herself types many of her own letters, as also a great part of her husband's correspondence to Germany. Her typewriter is a very fine machine, silver-plated and fitted with ivory keys. It has a set of German characters in addition to the usual English ones.

To the King of Greece, tapping the ivory keys is a pastime. Nothing pleases him more than typing his own letters. Many of these letters, though typewritten, are signed in full and are treasured by his subjects who receive them to be handed down to other generations as heirlooms.

Many of our peers have their own machines and frequently type their own letters. Lord Rosslyn, for example, is the envy of many typists, the speed and accuracy with which he can use a typewriter being well above the average. When he was captain during the Boer War and taken to Pretoria, he edited, printed, and published a typewritten newspaper with the machine he had taken out with him.

Carbolic Acid for Cough Mixture
A verdict of "Accidental poisoning" was returned at an inquest held at Inverness, county Cavan, regarding the death of a young woman named Ellen McDonald, twenty-four years of age, who died as a result of drinking carbolic acid in mistake for medicine. The girl mistook the acid for a cough mixture she was using.

ANIMALS RECOGNIZE

A MORAL LAW

Monogamists of the Brute Creation are of a Higher Development Than Polygamists Says Naturalist

A fascinating address on "The Natural History of the Ten Commandments" was delivered by the famous naturalist and hunter, Mr. Ernest Thompson Seton, at a gathering of the Pilgrims at the Savoy Hotel, London. Mr. Thompson Seton advanced the theory that the ten Commandments are not arbitrary laws given to man; but fundamental laws for all creation. Ample evidence of the application of the commandments to the animal world could be produced. Animals, he declared, have a recognition of property rights. A squirrel has his tree in which he has a proprietary right, and he will always be ready to fight for that tree and what is on it.

One of the most remarkable theories in the whole of animal studies," he continued, "is what may be called the evolution of monogamy. It is a remarkable fact that where that system has been adopted the animal which has adopted it is always the successful one. If it comes to a clash between a polygamist animal and a monogamist animal, the latter always wins." Mr. Thompson referred to the case of the blue foxes which occupy a certain territory in Alaska. "These foxes," he said "understand among themselves what their area is, and beyond that they will scarcely go. They also are absolutely monogamist. 'If one fox dies it is extremely hard to get the other to take a mate. So strict have the lines been on which these foxes live that a hunter reported to his company: 'Until we can break the high moral standard of the foxes, our profits will be greatly curtailed.'"

Then the lecturer turned to stealing. "If a rook," he said, "finds a stick in the woods, that stick is his own and he carries it to his nest. If another rook attempts to take that stick from him, he will fight for his property, and the question of the ownership of the stick has been known to disturb the harmony of a whole flock." In conclusion, Mr. Thompson said: "There is in the animal nature a deep-laid instinct, strong in proportion as the animal is high in the scale, which prompts it when in dire extremity to defend itself on the mercy of some other power. 'I do not say that it is so, but it may be that in this instinct we shall find the foundations and the basis on which is afterwards built something else which finds its higher development in man.'"

SLEPT FOR A YEAR

Russian Prisoner May Recover After a Long Death-like Trance

A remarkable case of lethargy is reported from one of the towns in South Russia. A man named Moiseyenko was put on trial over a year ago on the charge of having committed an armed robbery, but in the midst of the proceedings he dropped to the floor in what was supposed at the time to be a fainting fit, but which afterwards proved a lethargic sleep. In this condition the prisoner has lain over a year, until a few days ago. He has evidently been all the time in complete possession of his wits, but was unable to move a limb, open his eyes or take food. When his eyelids were raised the pupils could not be seen, and he was all the time fed by artificial means.

During his sleep he has lost some weight, but has kept throughout the external appearance of a man in normal and healthy surroundings. When he regained control of his members recently his first words, characteristic enough in a Russian prisoner, were: "They gave me a good beating in the prison, and now I am spitting blood." As a matter of fact, a medical examination has revealed that his lungs have been damaged by maltreatment in prison, and that he is in consequence suffering from tuberculosis. He is now being carefully watched, but there is every reason to believe that he will ultimately recover—perhaps only to pass in the hands of the hangman.

A BOGUS PRIEST

Interloper Created a Parish for Himself and Pleaded the People

Nantes reports a curious case of an alleged interloper priest. A few months ago a certain M. Paton, about thirty years of age, of good appearance, arrived at Nantes and took a room in an inn. The innkeeper was astonished when the traveller stated that his profession was that of curé, and the newcomer immediately hired a hall, and as there was no vacancy for a cure, he created one. He set aside for himself the parish of Saint-Clair, which he placed under the patronage of St. Gregory. His parish thereafter was to be called after that of the saint.

The man is described as having been a little awkward at first, but soon he gave the benediction, and performed the other ceremonies with great ease and ability. His Masses were very short, and it seems that his way of receiving the confession of people was admirable. The faithful flock soon increased and he solemnized marriages, baptisms, and confessions from morning till night. The cure of Saint-Clair brought the matter to the attention of the bishop, and an announcement has now been read from the pulpit of the regularly appointed cure, in which the bishop denounced the intruder as a schismatic and a heretic.

Men's Underwear for Summer Wear

The man of to-day is pretty fussy as to what kind of underwear he wears in hot weather. Some prefer a "CASHMERE" or a "LIGHT WOOL." This we show at prices ranging from $1.15 to $3.00 the suit.

Again a great many wear the "LIGHT BALBRIGGAN." We have this in the "Two-Thread" and in the "Elastic Ribbed" which is just a little heavier. This is shown in different colors, White, Blue and Black, 50c the garment.
