AROUND THE WORLD

Nothing nowadays to "do the continent." Why even Cook's Tour?

Pemberton, the Indian murderer, is in the Niagara county jail, to await the action of the grand jury at its September session.

North Carolina boats of nine daily papers and twenty styles of new bonnets.

Force of character is the battering ram to use against all obstacles to human ambition.

Two French editors down in Buenos Ayres, one of whom had just come into a fortune, recently indulged in a pistol duel.

One missed, and the other fired into the air.

Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll has accepted an invitation to deliver the oration at the opening of the National Mining and Industrial exhibition in Denver, Col., August 2.

The "blood poisoning" which recently resulted in Prof. Green's death at Oxford, in England, has been traced to a supply of unwholesome milk, which was given by a cow farmed by a lady in college.

Prince William of Prussia and of Germany, has had a son born to him in the direct line of succession to the throne, and his son, grandson and great grandson, the last three possible emperors of the future.

Miss Marie C. Ladrey, a teacher in the Normal school at Framingham, and a native of Boston, has won a prize of $1000, offered in France, one of a series given for excellence in education. Her subject was "The best methods of educating" from the primary school upward.

The graduating house of the Rochester house of refuge is a fine building, 250 feet long, 55 wide and four stories high. The accommodations are better in it than in any of the other buildings. Each boy has a separate room and the play and work rooms are better, but entrance to it can only be secured by good conduct.

Thomas Cornell, owner of the steamboat of the same name, lately sunk, has secured an appropriation of $50000 from the Legislature of New York to build a new boat at Danamaker point on the Hudson, where the accident occurred. It is hoped light houses will be built at Dole, the Hook and Tarrytown place, two other dangerous and unprotected places on the river.

The necessity of keeping down the rabbits which are eating up the colony of New Zealand has led to a demand for cats for rabbiting. Professional rabbiters, who are paid a price ranging from 1s to 2s for each dozen skins, according to their state, have been employing cats to aid them in the capture, and the venture has proved highly successful.

John McCarthy, teamster, the other day drove his team to the edge of the embankment where he was depositing earth in Albany, and team, wagon and man went over and over the hill. The horses rolled over McCarthy three times and ride a half dozen revolutions going down the hill. The horses and wagon are ruined and McCarthy will die.

King John Hurn, a young Chinaman of Boston, made love acceptably to Kate Engelhart, a visiting Philadelphia, and they were married. Although she was a young and pretty girl of good character, she Mongol failed to appreciate his prize, and whipped her brutally before a week had elapsed, besides specially cutting up her clothes. Then they separated.

The new boat built at New Bedford for New Bedford for Kalamazoo, monarch of the duky Sandwichee, is sharp at both ends and a whaleboat, thirty-two feet long, five feet eight inches beam, and two feet six inches deep. It is of beautiful model, constructed of white oak and cedar, and thoroughly copper fastened. There are six thwarts and the boat will be propelled by twelve oars, double-banked, and a lug sail seventeen feet long on the foot and twenty-two feet high.

Daniel Killen, a boy employed to carry water to the workmen in the Albany iron works in Troy, has been in the habit of lying on planks near where iron rods were shot from a rolling machine. Friday evening he was lying there, apparently asleep, when a rod nine-sixteenths of an inch through, and heated to a white heat, struck him with great force, passing through his body. He died instantly. It is thought afterward of the danger of staying so near the machine.

Near the soda water fountain, in an apartment drug store, was displayed the sign "Bovine Vaccine." A young man accompanied by a young woman, who might have been his country cousin or sweetheart, entered, and in response to the inquiring look of the boy who tended the fountain, said: "You may give me bovine." The young woman's eyes had been fixed on the unusual sign near the fountain, and when her companion turned to her and asked her how she would have here, she said, timidly: "I don't know, but I'll try a little vaccine."—Springfield

Dr. Bartol once invited Mr. Emerson to dine with him to meet Father Taylor.
The philosopher hesitated, saying: "Father Taylor is a cannon better on the common than in a parlor." But he was finally persuaded. As he left the table for his train Dr. Bartol said to Father Taylor: "That is a sweet spirit." "Yes, yes," said Taylor: "should he go to hell it would be change the climate and the emigration would be that way." Father Taylor also said of him: "I have laid my ear close to his heart and never detected any jar in the mechanism. He is more like Jesus than anybody else I have known."

There are rooms in Hampton court palace which various nifty and worthy people are from time to time permitted to occupy as their homes. Recently there died the widow of Col. Wyndham, leaving her daughter in very poor circumstances.
She has petitioned for the further use of the rooms, an event which has been the means of calling attention to certain alleged jobbery in the bestowal of these apartments. Not long ago it was said that a former occupant left a will which was proved under $300,000, while a lady who recently received a suite enjoyed a handsome income and kept a dozen servants.

New Zealand papers state that among the recent European visitors to the colony was the Rev. Mr. Green, a member of the Alpine club, who, with two guides, attempted the ascent of the glaciers of Mount Cook, 13,000 feet high to the summit. Mr.
Green says that after fourteen hours' labor they managed to cross the moraine of the Tasman glacier and reach the ice. None of them had ever seen a moraine before.
The Swiss guides assert that there is more moraine matter in this country given as reference to an all but Swiss glacier put together, and they say that one of the finest Alpine scenes they have witnessed is half way up the glacier; in fact nothing in Switzerland can compare with it. They consider the mountain the most difficult one they have ever ascended.

FOUND DEAD.

It is a single sentence that sometimes contains a strange, weird history—found dead. The mysterious separation of soul and body leaving the silence of death.
The mute lips tell no tale, the silent wonder breathes no name that might betray the hand that made it. An aweful story over the heart as one stands in the presence of this mysterious death. Age had not crumpled the strong limbs—the erect and vigorous body showed no signs of decay, but life had suddenly gone out as the flame of a lamp extinguished.

Standing in this very spot, with the light from street lamps playing fitfully through the darkness. I saw a night, years ago, which, used as I had been to deeds of violence, nearly curdled my blood with horror.

It was late at night, and I had been down parted the street a case that detained me late. A group of men standing near the water's edge attracted my attention.
Drawing near, I found them examining the body of a man just drawn from the river.

"He has been drowned," said one. "I heard his scream an hour ago as he fell into the water."

The speaker was a fisherman, who slept in his boat under the arch.

"I was asleep at the time," he said, "and his cry awakened me. I sprang up and hastily as I could and reached my boat at the spot, but the man had disappeared beneath the water. I knew there was no current there, and the boat must have where it sunk, so I called for help and sought the place and found it at last."

"What was the cause of his death?" some one asked.

A lantern was held close to the pale, surgical face, and I started back as I recognized the features of an old friend.

"I fear only his vest and hat; there may be life in him yet."

It was no sooner said than done, but as the clothes were torn apart, sanguine stain met the eye. The shirt was crimson with blood. A shiver ran through the crowd as this was revealed, and a deep wound was disclosed in the breast.

"Murther!"

"Palp repeated the low exclamation, in the presence of death what voice ever loomed and fell! Yes, it was murder.
The hand that dealt that blow was a cunning one, and used to the work of death. He was struck, too, unaware. There was no contortion of the body. The cut was clean, deep and penetrating. The hand of an assassin had wielded the knife that made that cut.

While yet we went around the prostrate body, a woman, pale as the dead, horror in her eyes, and her white lips speechless, perched the crowd and knelt beside the murdered man. It was his wife.

Some one had told her. They lived but a block away. Close to the cold face of the dead was pressed the living one, the hands stroked nervously the wet hair and clinging garments, and then, with a low cry, repeated frantically:

"Oh, no! no! no! no! no! no! no! no! no!
Do not say he is dead!"

But the stony eyes gave back no glance to the anguish in her voice, and she replied to the thrilling cry of the girl-wife beside him.

"He lifted him up and carried him to the station near by, and then the inquest was held, and the verdict, 'Found dead.'"

And so the circumstantial case passed out of the minds, was forgotten save by the few who loved him and the officers tracing out the names of murderers. This was no easy task. Days and weeks were wasted, and the mystery only deepened. Who did and the mystery only deepened. Who did

Time and again when almost on the point of solving the mystery we were interrupted. We had traced him to secret intervals, sometimes at one place, sometimes at another, and once had discovered that a girl and he were seen walking late at night at this very place, and a man following in a dark hood, and a dangerous-looking man. Perhaps this might be a clue.
I followed it up. I almost hunted the house where the girl had been seen to go. I followed it up. I almost hunted the house
where the girl had been seen to go. I

One day I read in The News the notice of a girl drowned in the river. There was no means, the paper said, of identifying the body—no mark on the dress or jewelry.
Lovely she must have been in life. The long black hair, tangled and wet, fell around a face that yet retained any trace of health. Very lovely was the dead face; the waxen lips had not lost their carmine stain, nor the beautiful figure its symmetry.

I looked at the picture. My face my hands almost retraced their faces—was the picture of the man found dead.

"It is old Burrell's daughter," said a person standing by.

"What have I done?" I asked.

"Over yonder," and the man pointed out a low one-story house. I had a view of it, I would follow it to the end of the street, and then I would follow it to the end of the street, and then I would follow it to the end of the street, and then I would follow
