

EMIGRATION

TO THE

PROVINCE OF ONTARIO.

EMIGRATION is alike an advantage and necessity of both the Old and New Worlds, and to the communities and individuals directly affected thereby is one of the most striking and beneficial social movements of modern times.

During the past ten years some two million persons emigrated from Great Britain alone, and the movement continues to show signs of increase instead of diminution.

It appears from official statistics, published by the Registrar General, that with all this outflow from emigration, the natural increase of the population of England is close on one quarter of a million a year.

Even with this large emigration, there is crowding in the labour markets, and a large amount of pauperism.

Emigration helps to relieve both, while it builds up powerful, prosperous, and happy communities in hitherto waste places of the world.

These pages are intended to show why a portion of this emigration movement should be directed to the Province of Ontario, to indicate the classes of persons who are most wanted and likely to succeed, and to furnish them with useful practical directions.
