

The World's Daily Home Magazine for Women

Edited by.....
Irene Currie Love.

Toronto's Great Fire

completely destroyed the records of several business houses.

Wise business men now keep duplicate Balance Sheets and other valuable papers in Safety Deposit Vaults.

NATIONAL TRUST COMPANY, LIMITED
18-22 KING STREET EAST.

A HOME IN THE HEART.

Oh! ask not a home in the mansions of pride,
Where marble shines out in the pillars and walls;
Tho' the roof be of gold, it is brilliantly cold
And joy may not be found in its torch-lighted halls;
But seek for a bosom all honest and true,
Where love, once awakened, will never depart;
Turn, turn to that breast like the dove to its nest,
And you'll find there's no home like a home in the heart.

Oh! link but one spirit that's warmly sincere,
That will lighten your pleasure and sooth your care;
Find a soul you may trust as the kind and the just,
And be sure the wide world holds no treasure so rare.
Then the fragments of misfortune may shadow you not,
The cheek-tingling terrors of sorrow may start,
But a star never dim sheds a halo for him
Who can turn for repose to a home in the heart.

Why Men Don't Marry Young

From all quarters comes the assertion that young men are, as a rule, much less disposed to marry young than were those of former generations. Judging from observation, which after all is the basis of all statistics, it seems to take the young man of the present generation ten years or so longer to screw himself up to the sticking point of taking to himself a wife than it did his father, who married as soon as he became of age and had a quiver full, more or less, by the time he was 25, the age at which men nowadays prefer to marry.

As to the reason for this, some say it is because of the change in the requirements, so extravagant and unreasonable, that no man can afford to marry unless he has a stout and growing bank account, which few really young men possess.

Without discussing the truth or untruth of this last indictment, it must be admitted that the youth of 23 who ventures to marry nowadays must have either an independent and adequate income, which is also secure, or a sublime belief in himself and his abilities, and even then he must live no more than 40 or 45 years, or even 30 years ago; people have larger ideas as to what is necessary, and life has become much more expensive and luxurious. Nor is it only the women who have outgrown the simple life of the past; men are as extravagant, and what was an abundance at the beginning of the nineteenth century would be absolute penury in this.

The man who marries in these days is not "going" into the world to generate date, when love no longer serves to abolish poverty as a thing to be dreaded, must be ready to forego most of the pleasures and recreations which popular custom and personal habit have converted almost into necessities; and unless he is fortunate in his choice, he will discover that the young wife of the present day expects much more and performs much less than did her grandmother and her mother in the same relation. She is by no means always willing to accept the role of wife and mother, including the duties of housekeeper and cook, as her divinely appointed vocation. There is something in her that is not content to be a wife and she is apt to demand what she regards as her rightful share thereof.

Besides all this, modern improvements greatly have changed the conditions of life for men, especially in cities, and, excepting among the laboring class, a wife no longer is the undeniably "good thing" which King Solomon declared her to be. The up-to-date man to-day is not dependent upon the ministrations of womanhood.

An unmarried man may, with tolerable economy, live better upon a stated income than the married man can upon several times this amount. A man really sacrifices something when he marries nowadays, and he is not altogether to blame if he hesitates before putting his head into the matrimonial noose. As George Eliot says: "It is a noose, you know." It may be selfish, but he also is prudent, and perhaps wise. There is no greater fallacy than that which asserts that what is enough for one to live on is enough for two. It is not, neither, indeed, can be. Mathematics is an exact science, and no amount of figuring can make the half equal to the whole. True, there are times when life may be better; and when love is genuine lasting marriage is well worth of to-day has learned, as the saying is, to look out for number one. He knows a great deal more than is good for him and is wary as he is wise. Wherefore he dodges matrimony gently and pleasantly, but with firmness, just as long as he can do so; so that if it often happens that before he is aware of it he slides past the susceptible age and settles down into the confirmed bachelor and clubman, with his habits fixed and reasonably proof against the wiles of women.

Helen Oldfield.

World Pattern Department

1882—Child's Square-Yoked Dress.
With Dutch Neck and Bibb Sleeves.
Paris Pattern, No. 1882.
All Seams Allowed.

This little frock of blue embroidered tulle is made with a full baby waist about 42 inches wide, 2 1/4 yards of tulle in square fashion to give the popular Dutch neck, and the sleeves turned just above the elbow. It is an excellent model for the little frocks of tulle or checked gingham or of cotton voile.

The pattern is in four sizes—3 to 9 years. For a child of 5 years, the dress needs 3 7/8 yards of goods 20 inches wide or 2 yards 3/4 inches wide, or 1 7/8 yards 42 inches wide, 2 1/4 yards of tulle, 6 yards of ribbon and 1 1/4 yards of edging to trim.

Price of pattern 10 cents.

Pattern Department

Toronto World
Send the above pattern to NAME.....
ADDRESS.....
Size Wanted—(Give age of Child or Miss's Pattern.)

however bitter, which fate may have in store for these two.

The trouble is that the young man of to-day has learned, as the saying is, to look out for number one. He knows a great deal more than is good for him and is wary as he is wise. Wherefore he dodges matrimony gently and pleasantly, but with firmness, just as long as he can do so; so that if it often happens that before he is aware of it he slides past the susceptible age and settles down into the confirmed bachelor and clubman, with his habits fixed and reasonably proof against the wiles of women.

Helen Oldfield.

The World's Serial Story.

Buchanan's Wife

By Dusty Forman.
—Published by Arrangement With Harper & Brothers

After a little spell of silence, "Ah, now, Harry," said she, very sadly, "now I have come to the lowest depths of my misadventure. Now I am prostrate, indeed, for I have brought you to this—have made you what I am. If you had cast me off, if you had cut me and gone away, I should have taken some small, miserable comfort for that at least I had not soiled you. I should have wrecked your happiness, but never your soul. Oh, now I am indeed prostrate!"

He fell to sobbing, his face buried in her hand, and she said, "I pleaded, 'Oh, never say that! How comfortable should I be sitting apart on my cold couch, if I could only see you in the shadows. A fine, generous, noble figure! I'd bet! Oh, my dear, I shall have a just and pitiful God above me, as the books say, what would He have me do, do you think? In what regard would he hold a man who, having very solemnly sworn to cherish and love and protect a certain woman for as long as they two might live, should cast her off, holding his skirts aside, just because, for love's sake—for his sake—in a passionate striving for his happiness, she had broken certain laws? Oh, my very dear, if there's a God who holds by faithfulness and constancy and the love of a man for the woman who loves him. He won't be very hard on me, will he? And if the God we're told about isn't that sort of a God, I don't want any dealings with Him at all. I'll go it alone. So, Betty, don't feel low because I'm not a deserter and a blackguard!"

Then, after they had been a long time silent, he said, bending his head over her as she lay in his arms:

"Betty," he said, "what do you suppose Adam said to Eve when they'd been driven out of the garden and were sitting together like this, thinking it over?"

She gave a little, shaking, uncertain laugh in the dark, and she said:

"I expect he said, 'Now you've been and done it—just like a woman—and I can't be undone, and so we'll—well, just have to stick together and patch up some sort of a life the best we can.' That's what he said, I expect."

"Yes," said Betty, "I expect that's what he said."

"And again they were silent for a long time, so long that Betty, overwrought, overstrained, worn out to the point of physical exhaustion, went off into a sort of doze and lay heavily still in the man's arms. She awoke from this with a violent start and a cry. "I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."

"Hush, dear!" said Faring. "Neither he nor anyone can take you away from me. We're together for all time, whatever it may be. I must stop him. Then presently she sat up with a deep breath.

"We must talk of what is to become of us. Is there still any way, Harry, in which we may be saved?"

"I thought he was trying to take me away from you, Harry," she said, shivering. "I thought he had come for me."</