

regret that it continues to be so much harder to find Christians who are in circumstances, and at the same time willing, to exercise this sort of benevolence.

With regard to spiritual results, our labors have not been wholly unrewarded; but we more and more feel the folly of dependence on purely human methods, and the need of unceasing prayer for a manifestation of that Power which alone can move the world and reclaim the masses drifting all too rapidly away from Gospel influences.

J. H. MACVICAR,
ROBT. JOHNSTON

