In discharging the jury he expressed his entire concurrence with their verdict of "guilty, with a recommendation to merry"

Before the sentence was pronounced Mr. Robinette asked for leniency, and took the extraordinary step of sug-gesting that sentence be suspended. He thought it a fair inference that Con-ductor Baker had expected and intended the prisoner to do as had been done on previous occasions and had desired him to "get out fast" in this instance, because it was shown in the evidence that they were an hour late. Newton might have been derelict in falling to look at the semiphore; but he had done his best to rectify his mistake when he iced it, even at the risk of his life. No doubt he had been so accustomed

The explosion occurred at 10 o'clock, and there was not much damage to the was told to "get out," that he momentarily forgot to make sure.

Justice Anglin proceeded to address the prisoner upon the presumption that his character had been above reproach and he quite understood that the prisoned had not anticipated any such ill results from his carelessnes. Newton was not a criminal in the ordinary sense and he intended to segregate him from the criminal class, and see that he came not in contact with them, by assigning him to the county jail for nine months, without hard labor.

Newton is 29 years of age and had been a particular friend of Engineer Armstrong, who was killed. Both Armstrong and Newton lived at Toronto Junction.
