WABASH EXPRESS WRECKED

Train With Toronto Sleeper Ditched Near Montpelier, Mich.

A rather bad wreck occurred on the Wabash about 8 p.m. Sunday when the eastbound express from Chicago with the Toronto sleeper attached was ditched about eight miles west of Montpelier, Mich.

O'Neill L. Ladow of New York, one of the passengers, is at the King Edward Hotel. According to his story every car left the track, the tender was tipped over and the baggage car was left at right angles to the track. Mr. Ladow says he himself slid the whole length of the train when the accident occurred. The rear brakeman was badly injured.

Several Toronto people were on board including Mr. Stout, wife of the manager of the Dominion Express Co.

Funeral of China's Emperor.

PEKIN, May 3.—(Special.)—The funeral of the late emperor will take four days, and the entire route is to be over the great highway especially constructed for the occasion. The coffin is massive and heavy. The inside is lined with cypress wood; then comes a covering of catpaw wood, which in turn is encased in rhinoceros hide, while the whole is covered with a stout shield made from the hide of the water buffalo.

The widow of the late emperor will travel to the tomb by rail, leaving here on May 3.

The imperial tombs will not be completed for two years, and the actual interment of the body of Kuang Hsu will have to be deferred for this length of time. The coffin will cost, when completed, considerably more than $1,000,000.

Brantford Street Railway.

BRANTFORD, May 3.—(Special.)—The street railway company did not start double tracking and improving the local system here May 1 as expected. Under the agreement with the city a $25,000 guarantee had to be deposited to ensure the work being gone on with. The company offered $35,000 in Grand Valley bonds, which were not accepted by the city, thus nullifying the agreement.

AMBROSE KENT & SONS, LIMITED

156 YONGE ST. TORONTO

ESTABLISHED 1866

OBITUARY.

Wm. Lightfoot, one of the oldest and best known market gardeners in Toronto, died at his home, 103 Dundas street, yesterday of pneumonia. He was in his 74th year and has been a resident in Toronto for 40 years, having come from Devonshire, England.

For a number of years he was chief gardener of the Horticultural Gardens, and three of his sons are prominently engaged in a like pursuit in the city.

William is at present superintendent of High Park. Charles is in the market gardening business on Brock-avenue, and Thomas is prominently known as one of the leading vegetable merchants of the St. Lawrence market. Three are all well-known citizens of Toronto.

Deceased is also survived by a widow and three daughters.

Mr. Lightfoot was a member of the Masonic Order and the St. George's Society.

At Asheville, N.S.—Dr. Sheldon Jackson, the noted missionary of the Presbyterian Church, following two operations, aged 75. He was a member of the National Geographical, educational, statist and about 40 other societies, religious, scientific and philanthropic.

At Brockville—James Phillips, aged 72, a resident for 37 years.

At Cincinnati, Ohio—George Melvor, head of the fire department; a native of Millbrook, Ont.

At Aberdeen, Scotland—The very Rev. John Marshall Long, chaplain of the House of Commons, and principal of Aberdeen University, aged 75.

At Brockville, N.Y.—Poster Udell, known as the apple king. Mr. Udell's orchards were famous. He had been a student of the University of Toronto for many years and probably planted more apple trees than any other man in the world.

The death occurred on Sunday at the King Edward Sanatorium, Weston, Ont., of a prominent business man, street cigar merchant and resident of Toronto for the past 11 years. He was born at Coburn in 1878. He is survived by his parents, one sister and four brothers.

Thomas Moore, aged 70, of 317 Markham-street, passed away at his residence from paralysis last night.

His son Thomas of the Royal Grenadiers was shot in the Riel rebellion in 1885.

He was a member of the American Baptist Church and was past president of the Trades and Labor Council.

He was a member of Robeson Masonic Lodge.

Rev. Andrew Imrie, pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church, Brantford, has accepted a position with the Toronto Bible Training School. Rev. W. E. Gilroy, Congregational, of Brantford, has been invited to succeed him.

John McKane, the millionaire mining man of New Brunswick, who some time ago bought the St. John's Telegraph, has been killed by a fall from a horse.

He had a salary for singing at McEub Church. Pressed to name an executor, Mr. McKane said he had no one to whom he could turn.

Asked about a bracelet Florence had received, ostensibly from the choir she sang with, she said she hadn't examined it.

Mr. Blackstock then asked about letters, but Mrs. Kinrade could give no answer.

"Could you gather anything from the letters that you got from her in the south, that would lead you to suspect that she was singing in the church?"

"No."

Mrs. Kinrade, who had shown signs of weakness, complained, "You are hurting my head." Mr. Blackstock offered to let her wait awhile, but she had no sooner determined to go on than she collapsed and was carried away in a fainting condition.

Florence Kinrade again, however, was escorted to the stand by Montrose Wright.

She said she had been singing in the Manchester Presbyterian Church. The minister's name she couldn't remember; the choirleader was a Mr. Foster.

Thos. Hobson, one of defence counsel, at this point objected to any questions that might tend to incriminate the witness.

"So far as the protection of the witness is concerned," continued Mr. Blackstock, "the witness has a right to refuse to answer any question on the ground that her answers would incriminate her and that question can be asked only if the jury is present."

"That is my interpretation of the procedure."

Mr. Lynch-Staunton suggested that Mrs. Kinrade be supplied with a copy of the statutes and that she be supplied with a written explanation of what she had to do, and not answer.

This was done and the enquiry resumed.

"When you went south did you first sing in a Presbyterian church?"

Florence Kinrade Tells of Her Nomadic Life in the South

The next question, she replied that it was about a letter from her son. She pleaded forgetfulness when asked about other topics discussed.

The crown examiner asked a number of questions as to when the girls had gone up stairs to dress, if one had accompanied Mrs. Kinrade as far as the door, and if at that time it would have been necessary for either of the girls to go upstairs again for her fur.

Mrs. Kinrade could give no definite recollections and was finally reminded accompanied her mother to the door, and having been cautioned about looking the inside door.

Mrs. Kinrade denied that the family had ever contemplated removal to the United States to live, and Mr. Blackstock then entered upon a long examination as to her knowledge of Florence's travels. Mrs. Kinrade said the girl had left for Virginia unaccompanied, but she understood she was to meet Miss Marion Elliott, but where she met her she did not know.

The letter which had announced her appointment to the church choir, Mrs. Kinrade said, was dated 1907.

Some time in the summer of 1907 Florence went away for two or three weeks, singing, witness thought.

"Was it confined to parties in private houses or did you understand that she was singing in public?" asked the examiner. "I can't remember."

"Did she ever show you newspaper clippings giving accounts of her concert functions at which she had sung?"

"Where these sent to you by mail?"

"I don't ever hear of Mr. Kinrade."

"But at all events, you saw them."

"You can't remember whether she showed them to you, or whether she sent them to you?"

"With whom did you understand she was on this tour?" "With Miss Elliott."

The mysterious Miss Elliott, Mrs. Elliott had defrayed Florence's expenses in Ontario; she "couldn't remember" the name of the arrangement on the Virginia trip.

"I never gave her any money, but I understood that she received money from her father."

"As far as your knowledge goes, Mrs. Kinrade, you do not know positively of your husband giving Florence money to go on this trip to Richmond?"

"No."

Witness didn't remember with whom Florence stayed while in Syracuse in December, 1907, but understood she was in Miss Elliott's company.

Mr. Lightfoot was a member of the Masonic Order and the St. George's Society.

"When you went south did you first sing in a Presbyterian church?"

"Under salary?" "I understood so."

"And was that church in Manchester?" "I couldn't just say where it was."

"How long did you sing in that church?" "I can't remember."

"Give me an idea."

There was a very long pause. Finally Miss Kinrade whispered: "I can't just remember."

"Well, months?" "Not as long as months."

"Weeks, then?" "Perhaps three or four."

Receipt of salary.

"Who paid you your salary?" "It was sent to me."

"By letter?" "Yes."

"Was it a white church or a colored church?" "A white church."

"Where were you when you received the salary?" "In Portsmouth."

"And what was the amount that you received?" "About $20."

"By cheque or in bills—or what?" "In bills."

"And how many bills?" "Do you remember?" "No."

"A number of bills, or just one?" "A number."

"Then why is it, Miss Kinrade, that you say that you don't know whether this church was in Manchester, or not?" "I'm just stating what I think. I can't say anything positively."

"Then what time was it that you went south in Richmond?" "About the middle of April."

"I thought you told us the last occasion on which you were here, it was the first of March?"

No answer.

Mr. Lynch-Staunton intervened. "Is it a fact that she did so?" he asked.

"I think so," returned Mr. Blackstock. "It can be looked up."

Mr. Hobson objected when Mr. Blackstock began asking more questions about her career as church soloist, as not being the "new material" to which he had promised to confine himself, but Mr. Blackstock replied that he had "never asked her the name of the church in which she sang, nor the number of Sundays she sang."

Where She Got Letters.

Witness could not give the name of the street the church was on, or of its minister, nor the address of her residence. Finally she said she lived at Virginia Beach.

"But," objected Mr. Blackstock, "that is eighty miles from Richmond. Did you receive a letter at the Manchester postoffice?"

"I don't think so." Later she couldn't remember if she had or not.

Mr. Blackstock: "Now, Miss Kinrade, I am instructed that for a period of several weeks you called every Sunday at the residence of Mr. Kinrade. Also that you left a written direction with the postmistress at Manchester to forward your mail to Virginia Beach. Are these statements true?"

"They may be."

"Now, I'm instructed that in those days your car came across a cut from Richmond, across
